Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has made a decision on calling in the development in the green belt of the former Rufford hospital, Lancashire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend has not yet made a decision on this case. I will write to my hon. Friend when the decision is made.

Value for Money

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will have discussions with the Audit Commission about ways of improving the efficiency and effectiveness of relevant activities which fall within the responsibility of his Department with a view to securing better value for money; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I am confident that the commission continues to fulfil its remit, which extends to England and Wales, in promoting value for money across the range of services.

Dangerous Chemicals, Norfolk

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the washing ashore at Salthouse, Weybourne and Kelling in Norfolk of dangerous chemicals.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 14 May 1991]: On Friday 3 May, the marine pollution control unit of the Department of Transport received a report from the Humber coastguard that the Swedish flag container ship Nordic Pride had lost four tank containers of chemicals overboard during bad weather 20 miles north of Blakeney.

In accordance with contingency plans for such incidents, MPCU immediately mounted a comprehensive air search for the containers. At the same time, MPCU scientific staff assessed the threat posed to the marine environment by the chemical—two tanks contained ethyl acrylate, with the others holding CHC feedstock and triethylenetetramine respectively—in consultation with colleagues from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and English Nature. The air search proved negative and since the conclusion of the joint assessment was that the tanks posed minimal threat to the marine environment, recovery was not deemed necessary. Local authorities were advised of the incident, the content of the tanks, and of the possibility of their coming ashore on the north Norfolk coast. The two tanks of ethyl acrylate were found washed ashore at Weybourne on the morning of Monday 6 May. The other tanks remain at sea.

Coastal local authorities are responsible for dealing with incidents of this sort where chemical containers are washed ashore and North Norfolk district council, in conjunction with the police, carried out these duties in this incident. I understand that the containers washed ashore and their contents were cleared from the area for safe disposal by the afternoon of Wednesday 8 May.

Industrialists (Environment Advisory Committee)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his advisory committee of industrialists on the environment will consider (a) Kuwait oil fires and (b) rain forest problems.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 13 May 1991]: The Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment has not yet held its first meeting. It is therefore premature to say which topics it will address, but it is unlikely that it will consider Kuwait oil fires.

Oil Spills

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 341-42, on what date and by what process the tenders were offered for the supply of oil-skimming equipment to Bahrain; and if any further contracts have recently been awarded to Desmi Ltd.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 May 1991]: Two contracts—total cost £282,924—for the supply of six heavy-duty oil pollution skimmers to assist the Government of Bahrain in dealing with the Gulf oil spill were awarded to Desmi Ltd. of Stoke-on-Trent on 28 February and 18 March. The selection of Desmi was made on the basis of an earlier tender exercise for the procurement of heavy-duty oil recovery skimmers for their own stocks carried out by the marine pollution control unit of the Department of Transport in January. This was supplemented by further inquiries made by MPCU in the course of advising my Department on the most appropriate equipment for the needs of Bahrain. No further contracts have been placed by my Department for pollution control equipment.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if Innoval Europe Ltd, of Fraserburgh, is on his Department's tender list to supply equipment for dealing with oil spills; if he has information on the company's capabilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 May 1991]: The hon. Member has written to me to draw attention to the features of oil recovery equipment manufactured by Innovac Europe Ltd. and I have passed on this information to the marine pollution control unit of the Department of Transport, which has the professional and operational responsibility for dealing with pollution incidents at sea. I can confirm that the properties of the Innovac systems will be taken into account in any future consideration of Government requirements for this type of equipment.

Police Forces (Grants)

50. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what financial provision has been made in Government grants for police forces in England and Wales in 1991-92; and what was the comparable figure for 1990-91.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have been asked to reply.

Subject to parliamentary approval, provision of £2,615·7 million has been made for the payment of specific grants and special grants to police authorities in 1991-92. This compares with a provision of £2,269·7 million in supply estimates, and a total provision of £2,366·9 million after supplementary estimates, for 1990-91. In addition to these grants, expenditure on police forces is supported by central Government through revenue support grant and redistributed business rates, but these are not hypothecated to particular services.

TRANSPORT

Catalytic Converters

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many cars in the United Kingdom are currently fitted with catalytic converters; and what proportion of new cars being sold are fitted with catalytic converters.

Mr. Chope: At the end of March 1991 over 180,000 cars registered in the United Kingdom were fitted with catalytic converters. In the first three months of this year, approximately 16 per cent. of all new petrol-engined cars being sold were fitted with these devices. These numbers are expected to increase sharply following planned changes in European Community requirements.

Leicester Eastern Bypass

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received concerning the possibility of an eastern bypass being constructed in Leicester; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The A46/A6 Leicester eastern bypass was added to the national roads programme in the 1989 White Paper "Roads for Prosperity". This would be an outer bypass for through trunk road traffic. Routes have yet to be identified and no representations have been received.

Thirteen representations have been received about the route options currently being considered by Leicestershire county council for its Leicester eastern district distributer road. This road is not, however, a bypass as it is estimated that 90 per cent. of the traffic expected to use it would have origins and/or destinations within the city of Leicester. It is a local road proposal and will be fully examined at the local level as part of the statutory processes required for the construction of new roads.

Channel Tunnel Rail Links

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to give full consideration to all the proposed rail link routes to the channel tunnel, with a view to making a decision which will maximise private sector involvement.

Mr. Freeman: There are many issues including the prospects for commercial viability which the Government will consider very carefully before reaching decisions on British Rail's recommendations for the rail link.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the number of vehicle journeys on the A9 between Perth and Drumochter involving the transport of medium and high-level nuclear waste in the last three years; and if he will list the statutory regulations governing the transport of such waste.

Mr. Chope: My Department does not collect data of the kind requested.

Movements of radioactive materials by road are governed by the Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) (Great Britain) Regulations 1974 (SI 1974 No. 1735) and amendment Regulations 1985 (SI 1985 No. 1729).

Thurleigh Airport

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what restraints are likely to be placed on development and use of Thurleigh airport, in accordance with Her Majesty's Government business aviation policy; and what effect further developments at Luton and Stansted will have on such limitation.

Mr. McLoughlin: Bedford (Thurleigh) airfield is not one of the airports round London identified by the Government as suitable to provide alternative facilities for business aircraft no longer able to use Heathrow or Gatwick. So business aviation policy will not govern Thurleigh's future. How much scope there might be for handling other air traffic from Thurleigh in addition to that from Luton and Stansted would depend on the nature, volume and timing of that traffic.

CIVIL SERVICE

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service when it was decided not to publish in the Official Report information requested on total expenditure by non-departmental public bodies; and what were the reasons for this decision.

Mr. Renton: Details of total expenditure by non-departmental public bodies is set out in "Public Bodies 1990" whose publication was announced in the Official Report on 19 December 1990, at column 176 and copies of which are available in the Library of the House. This is the usual method of publicising this information.

NATIONAL FINANCE

HMSO

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the 1991-92 annual budget for Her Majesty's Stationery Office is; and what percentage of that is allocated to staff costs.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 14 May 1991]: This question falls within the scope of the policy announced in

Cm. 1263: arrangements have therefore been made for the controller and chief executive of HMSO to respond direct. Copies of the letter will be placed in the House Library and with the Public Information Office.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Her Majesty's Stationery Office is being examined as a candidate for privatisation.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 14 May 1991]: The future of Her Majesty's Stationery Office is reviewed from time to time. There are, however, no current plans to privatise it.

Central Office of Information

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the 1991-92 annual budget for the Central Office of Information; and what percentage of that is allocated to staff costs.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 14 May 1991]: This question falls within the scope of the policy announced in Cm. 1263: arrangements have therefore been made for the chief executive of the COI to respond direct. Copies of the letter will be placed in the House Library and with the Public Information Office.

Royal Mint

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the 1991-92 annual budget for the Royal Mint; and what percentage of that is allocated to staff costs.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 14 May 1991]: This question falls within the scope of the policy announced in Cm. 1263: arrangements have therefore been made for the deputy master and chief executive of the Royal Mint to respond direct. Copies of the letter will be placed in the House Library and with the Public Information Office.

WALES

Dental Services

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report those district health authorities in Wales which have implemented his Department's recommendation in the circular on community dental services issued on 6 April 1989 that an annual reminder should be sent to parents about the benefits of regular dental examinations for their children.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This information is not available centrally. Responsibility for the issue of annual reminders rests with district health authorities.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the procedures his Department has adopted to enable him to assess whether district health authorities have provided the necessary annual screening of the teeth of children in state-funded schools in areas of poor dental health and where availability of general dental services is poor.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Health authorities are required annually to provide the Department with statistical returns, including information on the screening of the teeth of school children. This information is published annually in "Health and Personal Social Services Statistics for Wales", copies of which are available in the Library of the House. The level and frequency of screening is a matter for local determination by health authorities.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidance on the development of the new management information system referred to in paragraph 4 of his departmental circular on community dental services issued on 6 April 1989.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Since the publication of WHC(89)28 "The Future Development of Community Health Services" and following consultation with the national health service in Wales, a management information system providing an improved level of information has now been successfully piloted. Its introduction throughout Wales is currently under consideration.

Value for Money

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will have discussions with the Audit Commission about ways of improving the efficiency and effectiveness of relevant activities which fall within the responsibility of his Department with a view to securing better value for money; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: From my examination of Audit Commission reports, and from the variety of contacts which I and my Department have with the commission, I am satisfied that the commission is making a real impression on the way local and health authorities deliver the services for which they are responsible.

Singleton Hospital, Swansea

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State discussed trust status on his visit to Singleton hospital, Swansea.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: No.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Agricultural Chemicals

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether patentable agricultural chemicals which are required to pass safety tests before they receive marketing approval will be eligible for supplementary protection certificates of the type proposed by the EC Commission for medicinal products.

Mr. Leigh: My colleagues and I accept that the patent term erosion in the agrochemical industry is similar to that for pharmaceuticals and that agrochemical patents should have similar supplementary protection. We intend therefore to seek either amendment of the Commission's proposal to cover agrochemicals or the introduction of a new proposal to that effect.

Offshore Oil and Gas (Standby Vessels)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the number of emergency and standby vessels which have been ordered in each of the last three years for service in the United Kingdom's offshore oil and gas industry from shipyards located in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 14 May 1991]: None has been ordered.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

St. Margaret Ward High School

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the grounds on which he based his decision not to select the extension project for St. Margaret Ward Roman Catholic (aided) high school in the form approved by Staffordshire county council and the Diocesan Schools Commission.

Mr. Fallon: In determining capital allocations for improvement work at voluntary aided schools for 1991-92, my right hon. and learned Friend had sufficient resources to allocate for a proportion of improvement projects rated as top priority by their LEAs. The project at St. Margaret Ward school was not Staffordshire LEA's top priority.

Stratford Grant-maintained School

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements exist at Stratford grant-maintained school for the application of the curriculum complaints procedure, as agreed by him and the London borough of Newham.

Mr. Eggar: The governing body of Stratford school is required to make arrangements for the consideration and disposal of complaints relating to the curriculum and to agree those arrangements with my right hon. and learned Friend.

Value for Money

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will have discussions with the Audit Commission about ways of improving the efficiency and effectiveness of relevant activities which fall within the responsibility of his Department with a view to securing better value for money; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Audit Commission has produced reports exploring efficiency and effectiveness in various aspects of the education service, including the provision of primary and secondary schools, further education, and inspectorate and advisory services. The Department will continue to hold discussions as and when appropriate with the commission about its work in relation to the education service.

South West London College

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment has been made of the effect of the closure of the South West London college on the provision of higher and further education in the south-west London area.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council has advised my right hon. and learned Friend that the South West London College Higher Education Corporation should be dissolved and that, following consultations with the students, the college's provision should be transferred to other institutions. We are consulting the college and other institutions on this advice. The final decision will take account of all the responses received.

Boarding Schools

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what further steps he has taken to secure the safety and welfare of pupils in independent boarding schools.

Mr. Fallon: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Newbury (Sir M. McNair-Wilson) on 22 January, Official Report, columns 121-23 and 18 February, Official Report, column 24. Following consultations with interested bodies, regulations were laid on 24 April, coming into operation today, which require proprietors of independent schools to report where any member of staff is dismissed for misconduct, or would have been dismissed or considered for dismissal had he not resigned. Proprietors will also be required to provide particulars of all staff, not just teaching staff, on application for registration and annually.

My Department is writing to the proprietors and heads of all independent schools bringing these requirements to their attention. Conscientious reporting by schools will enable us usefully to extend the coverage of our list of people barred from employment in maintained schools —DES List 99—which is itself an essential resource for those responsible for the employment of staff in the independent sector.

At the same time, we shall provide each school with a copy of the guidance and regulations on the implementation of section 63 of the Children Act 1989. Section 87 places new duties on proprietors of independent boarding schools, and on local authority social services departments, to safeguard and promote the welfare of pupils. The guidance, which is published jointly by the Department of Health, the Department of Education and Science and the Welsh Office, has also been sent to social service departments and local education authorities and will, I believe, provide a sounder basis for securing all aspects of the welfare of pupils in boarding schools, including strengthening the arrangements for protecting them from sexual and physical abuse.

PRIME MINISTER

Bay of Bengal

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister whether Her Majesty's Government made any offer to the Bangladeshi authorities to provide technical assistance in predicting storm surges in the Bay of Bengal.

The Prime Minister: No. This is an area where the United States of America is the principal donor. Bangladesh's cyclone early warning system was established in the 1970s when a satellite ground station was installed in Dhaka by a Bangladeshi organisation, the Space Research and Remote Sensing Organisation. The ground station has subsequently been upgraded through a project funded by the Office of the United States Foreign Disaster Assistance and implemented by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. United States aid assistance has continued for this activity and now totals excess of US$6 million.

The Bangladesh authorities issued warning of the cyclone two days before it struck and an estimated 350,000 people were evacuated to anti-cyclone shelters.

Iraq

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Iraqi representations concerning their need to use helicopters for internal security which led the coalition representatives to concede that point during the ceasefire talks.

The Prime Minister: The Iraqi use of helicopters was considered at a meeting between General Schwarzkopf and the Iraqi military authorities on the suspension of hostilities at Safwan on 3 March. An Iraqi request to permit helicopter flights for transportation was agreed, without limitations of their use.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fire Brigade

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the total costs of fire brigades will be met from all central sources of funding, direct and indirect, in the current financial year; and what percentage will be paid locally.

Mr. John Patten: Support for the expenditure of fire authorities in England and Wales is provided by central Government through revenue support grant, redistributed business rates and community charge grant. This support is not hypothecated to particular services, and decisions on what portion should go to meet fire expenditure are at the discretion of the local authority concerned. For England and Wales as a whole, central Government meet about 85 per cent. of the budgeted revenue expenditure of local authorities.

Mr. Martin Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current establishment by rank for the South Yorkshire fire service; what is the number of vacancies in each rank; and what were the comparable figures for 10 years ago.

Mr. John Patten: The most recent centrally available figures relate to the establishment of the South Yorkshire county fire service on 1 January 1991. The establishments on this date and on 1 January 1981 are shown, by rank in the table, in comparison with figures showing the strength and the number of vacancies on each of those dates.

Police Forces (Budget)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what budget has been set for police forces in England and Wales in 1991-92; and what were the comparable figures for 1990-91.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Government do not set a budget for police expenditure, but the police share of total standard spending—TSS—is an indication of what we would expect police authorities to spend to provide an acceptable level of service. For 1991-92 the police share of TSS for England and Wales is £4,900 million. The comparable figure for 1990-91 was £4,384 million.

Police National Network

74. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his review of the police national network will be completed and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Work is in hand on establishing a detailed user requirement for a network to handle both voice and data communications between police forces and also between forces and other agencies within the criminal justice system. This work is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

South Yorkshire Police Force

77. Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current establishment by rank for the South Yorkshire police force; and what are the number of vacancies in each rank.

Lollipop Ladies, Cheshire

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many lollipop ladies will be made redundant in Cheshire.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Under the provisions of section 26 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, authority for providing school crossing patrols in Cheshire is vested in Cheshire county council. I understand from the chief constable of Cheshire, who administers the scheme by local agreement, that it is expected that by the end of June some 60 or 70 school crossing patrol posts will have been withdrawn. Some further posts are to be reviewed.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements have been made to ensure safety for children leaving school grounds once the services of lollipop ladies are discontinued.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Authority for providing school crossing patrols outside London is vested in individual local authorities who may make provision for them where they consider it necessary. The safety of children travelling to and from school is the responsibility of their parents.

Police Station, Leicester

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Government plans for a new police station at Hamilton, Leicester.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Proposals by the Leicestershire police authority for a new sub-divisional police headquarters at Hamilton have been approved for planning purposes and I understand that a site has now been purchased.

Provision for the police building programme is fully committed up to 1993-94. We shall decide later this year which schemes on the planning list should be authorised to start in 1994-95. The Hamilton police station is one of the schemes which will be considered, but there can be no guarantee that it will be given a start date.

Fire Authorities

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have taken place with the Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association concerning consideration of the future of fire authorities under the review of local government.

Mr. John Patten: Home Office officials attended the annual general meeting of the Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association on 4 May, at which the future structure of local government was one of the items discussed. Representatives of the association, together with those of other organisations representing fire service employers and employees, will have a further opportunity to discuss the Government's proposals at a meeting of the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council on 21 May 1991.

Parole Board

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the cases dealt with by the Parole Board (i) in 1990 and (ii) so far in the current year, were considered by the local review committee (a) six to 12 months previously, (b) three to six months previously and (c) up to three months previously.

Mrs. Rumbold: These statistics are not recorded centrally in this form and could not be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases were dealt with by the Parole Board (i) in 1990 and (ii) so far in the current year; what percentage of prisoners had passed their parole eligibility date at the time of the deliberations; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: In 1990 the Parole Board considered some 7,400 determinate sentence cases; so far this year it has dealt with about 2,700. The detailed statistics sought on the timeliness of board deliberations are not available. There are not any general delays, but occasionally cases are held up for reasons beyond our control, such as late changes in inmates' circumstances.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners who were dealt with by the Parole Board in 1990 received their decision after their earliest date of release; what was the average delay; and what percentages of the decisions were positive.

Mrs. Rumbold: These statistics could not be provided without incurring disproportionate costs. However, it is rare for a parole decision to be delayed until after an inmate's earliest date of release.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department of all cases dealt with by the Parole Board (i) in 1990 and (ii) so far in the current year, how many have had the home circumstances report completed (a) over 12 months previously, (b) six to 12 months previously and (c) three to six months previously; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: This information is not collated centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The probation service is under standing instructions to provide updates on any changes to inmates's domestic circumstances or release plans. A letter has been circulated to all chief probation officers reminding them of the crucial importance of timely home circumstances reports to the parole process.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many instances of alleged maladministration or other complaints about parole dossiers have been reported by the Parole Board during the last two years.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Parole Board has not raised any specific cases with me.

Value for Money

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will have discussions with the Audit Commission about ways of improving the efficiency and effectiveness of relevant activities which fall within the responsibility of his Department with a view to securing better value for money; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I met the chairman and the controller of the Audit Commission on 11 March and had a valuable exchange of views on the commission's work on the police and other Home Office services provided by local authorities.

War Crimes Investigations

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost so far to (a) the Metropolitan police and (b) his Department of the inquiries into alleged Nazi war criminals living in the United Kingdom; what is the estimated cost of further investigations during the next 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The cost of the war crime inquiry, which was set up by the Home Office to investigate allegations that war criminals were resident in this country, was in the region of £460,000. It is estimated that police inquiries are likely to cost in the order of £700,000 in this financial year.

Royal Commission on Criminal Justice

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the names of the members of the Royal Commission on criminal justice.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Queen has been pleased to approve a recommendation that the following be appointed members of the Royal Commission on criminal justice under the chairmanship of Viscount Runciman of Doxford: Mr. Robert Bunyard, Professor Sir John Cadogan, Professor John Gunn, Sir John May, Mrs. Yve Newbold, Ms Usha Prashar, Miss Anne Rafferty QC, Sir John Wickerson, Sir Phillip Woodfield and Professor Michael Zander.

Probation Service

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the report of the scrutiny of in-service training for the probation service.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend received the report on 18 April and I am today placing copies of it in the Library.

I am grateful to the scrutiny team for its work and for its clear and comprehensive report. Its findings and recommendations will make a vital contribution to improving the training that the probation service will need to support its future work as a major criminal justice agency.

We are consulting the probation service and others with a view to its implementation as soon as practicable.

Family Conciliation Services

Mrs. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, whether he will protect family conciliation services by taking responsibility for their funding.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 9 May 1991]: The Government are reviewing the future of and funding for conciliation services as part of their consideration of proposals for divorce law reform.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Institute of Horticulture

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next plans to meet representatives of the Institute of Horticulture; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: At present I have no plans to do so.

Lindane

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Advisory Committee on Pesticides is expected to report on the safety of lindane.

Mr. Maclean: Data on lindane are currently being evaluated by the Health and Safety Executive. It is expected to be referred to the Advisory Committee on Pesticides by the end of the year.

Offal and Fallen Stock Disposal

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the amount of assistance given to agriculture for the disposal of offal and fallen stock.

Mr. Maclean: Government assistance to help the livestock industry overcome its problems on the disposal of fallen stock and animal carcase waste includes: practical advice from the state veterinary service and ADAS on alternative methods of carcase disposal including safe burial and incineration; funding of research with industry and the European Community into the type of rendering systems which will destroy certain pathogens; advising planning and regulatory authorities about the importance of adequate disposal facilities especially where planning permission is sought for incinerators; exempting small incinerators designed for animal waste from the inspection and authorisation requirements of the Environmental Protection Act 1990; helping the rendering industry's examination of useful alternatives to landfilling for meat and bonemeal derived from specified bovine offal; and identifying investment in the by-products sector as one of the priority areas for aid under the EC grant scheme for marketing and processing agricultural products.

Milk Marketing Board

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future structure of the Milk Marketing Board.

Mr. Curry: The Milk Marketing Board for England and Wales has decided to press forward with specific proposals for transforming itself into co-operative status. We hope that the board will shortly bring the dairy trade and other interested parties into its discussions. We welcome the decision to open the way to changes enabling our milk industry to operate with the same competitive flexibility as in the rest of the European market. This must be in the best interests of milk producers, dairies, processors and consumers.

Environmental Research and Development

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research and development on environmental issues is currently funded by his Department.

Mr. Gummer: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is spending about £50 million a year on research and development related to environmental issues; that is almost half of the Department's total expenditure on research and development of about £120 million. This is a very significant level and underlines the Department's commitment to the soundest science on which to base our policies now and in the future.

I am pleased to announce the publication today of a brochure describing the wide range of environmental research and development that the Department has commissioned on such issues as conservation; water, air and soil protection; pests and pesticides; climate change; farm woodlands and set-aside; flood and coastal defence; genetic conservation and modification; and protection of fisheries and the marine environment. This brochure has been placed in the Library and the Vote Office of the House.

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in rank order the donor nations of the United Nations showing the proportion of GDP donated, for the most recent year available, and the amounts in sterling.

Colonial Civil Servants' Pensions

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to protect from erosion the pensions of former colonial civil servants who served in Zimbabwe before independence.

Mrs. Chalker: Responsibility for the payment and protection of the pensions of former Zimbabwe—Southern Rhodesia—civil servants rests with the Government of Zimbabwe. Our obligation towards the pensions of former colonial officers is confined to those for whom the British Government acknowledge a special responsibility by virtue of their having been recruited by, or on behalf of, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, for employment on expatriate terms in the central government of a colony. Zimbabwe pensioners do not come into this category. Southern Rhodesia was a self-governing colony from 1923; recruitment to its public service was made directly by that Government, and staff served on local, as opposed to expatriate, terms of service. There are large numbers of overseas pensioners whose pensions are being eroded in value by falling exchange rates and, indeed, many who receive no payment at all. I could not justify helping Zimbabwe pensioners in isolation, and the financial consequences of assisting all overseas pensioners who face such problems would be prohibitive.

Family Planning

Sir Charles Morrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contributions for 1991 are being made to the International Planned Parenthood Federation, the United Nations Population Fund and the World Health Organisation's special programme on human reproduction.

Mrs. Chalker: The United Kingdom has pledged the following contributions for 1991:

IPPF	7·5
UNFPA	7·5
WHO/HRP	2·55

Population

Sir Charles Morrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total expenditure on population activities for 1991; and what percentage this represents of total gross public expenditure on aid for 1991.

Mrs. Chalker: Figures for 1991 will not be available until 1992 and details of total United Kingdom aid expenditure in 1990 are still being finalised. In 1990 ODA spent over £21 million on activities directly related to population concerns, a 21 per cent. increase on 1989 expenditure. In addition, most maternal and child health and women's education programmes contribute to reducing population growth. We shall continue to use all possibilities to extend the availability of family planning advice and assistance.

Kurds

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) pursuant to his written answers to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East on 25 April, Official Report, columns 507-8, and 2 May, Official Report, column 288, if he will (a) update the information given and (b) provide details of those supplies (i) obtained from and (ii) despatched on behalf of the voluntary organisation British Aid for the Kurds;

(2) pursuant to his written answers to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East on 25 April, Official Report, columns 507-8, and 2 May, Official Report, column 288, if he will provide comparable details for materials despatched as aid for the Kurds by means other than air transport.

Mrs. Chalker: (a) Since 24 April, an estimated total of 541·9 tonnes of further relief supplies have been sent by the Overseas Development Administration, and an estimated total of 124·2 tonnes have been sent by non-government sources. The details of which the Department are aware are as follows:

The ODA provided a Boeing 707 on 25 April to carry approximately 33 tonnes of supplies, and road transport for approximately 35 tonnes of further supplies collected by the Northern Ireland voluntary organisation Impossible Probable. The ODA also chartered an Iran Air Boeing 747 on 10 May, carrying approximately 65 tonnes of goods donated to the Iranian embassy in London.

A number of voluntary organisations have sent further supplies on Iran Air's weekly commercial flight.

(b) The ODA has neither obtained supplies from British aid for the Kurds, nor dispatched any supplies on their behalf.

Aid (Africa)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Minister for Overseas Development will urge her counterparts on the European Council of Ministers to consider an emergency decision to provide an additional 750,000 tonnes of food aid to Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: The members of the European Community have promised to provide an additional 600,000 tonnes of emergency food aid for Africa; 400,000 tonnes will be financed from the EC budget and 200,000 tonnes bilaterally. We shall continue to stress the importance of getting this additional food aid to those in need very quickly. The situation will be reviewed at the Development Council on 27 May.

European Bank for Reconstruction and development

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests he has received from governments in eastern and central European countries for assistance with the training of social workers and the establishment of social services departments; if these will be eligible for financial assistance from the European bank for reconstruction and development; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We are providing help from the know-how fund to employment services to eastern and central Europe. Restructuring of existing industry will be an important task for the European bank for reconstruction and development, and it will need to take account of the social and employment implications. No specific investment proposals have yet been put to the bank's board of directors for approval.

Publications

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the European bank for reconstruction and development will provide financial assistance to groups to publish newspapers and periodicals in countries in central and eastern Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The European bank for reconstruction and development is working to identify investments in central and eastern Europe to help promote development of the private sector. Initial operational priorities include restructuring of financial institutions, the environment, infrastructure and help with small businesses. No specific investment proposals have yet been put to the bank's board of directors for approval.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for how long the housing benefit claim from the Isle of Wight county council has been outstanding.

Miss Widdecombe: In the Isle of Wight the housing authorities are the two district councils, Medina and South Wight. Both authorities have outstanding subsidy claims in respect of housing benefit paid to people in local authority residential homes in the financial years 1985-86 and 1986-87. Payment of these claims is subject to reaching agreement with the Department on the amount of benefit for which subsidy is payable.

Payments of general housing benefit subsidy to Medina are up to date. The settlement for South Wight for 1988-89 has not been finalised because its claim has yet to satisfy fully the requirements of the district auditor and the Department. However, as is customary, the council received monthly payments on account throughout 1988-89, based upon its own estimates of housing benefit expenditure.

Disablement Benefit

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims were made for Department of Social Security disablement benefit and how many disability assessments were made in each of the categories 1 to 4 per cent., 5 to 8 per cent., 9 to 13 per cent., 14 to 17 per cent., and above, for each of the prescribed industrial diseases A4, A7, and A8 and for each of the years 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not available.

Repetitive Work

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are his plans to publicise the benefits available for sufferers in relation to musculo-skeletal disorders which are associated with repetitive work.

Mr. Scott: There are no plans to publicise the benefits available to sufferers of musculo-skeletal disorders specifically. However the Department does produce a number of comprehensive leaflets for people who suffer injury at work to inform them of the benefits they are entitled to: FB 28—Sick or Disabled; NI 2—If you have an Industrial Disease; NI 6—Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit; NI 16—Sickness Benefit.

Due to the wide variety of illnesses which can be work-related it would be impractical to produce separate literature for individual diseases, but every effort will be made in future to publicise this type of disorder specifically in benefits leaflets.

Poll Tax

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people will receive full rebate on poll tax payments in 1991-92.

Miss Widdecombe: The latest available estimates are in the table.

Community Charge Benefit recipients also in receipt of Income Support, 1991-92

Scotland	0·5
Wales	0·25
Great Britain	4·25

Source: Modelled using data drawn from 1987-88 Family Expenditure Survey and 1990-91 Management Information System.

Additionally, there will be some charge payers not in receipt of income support who will receive maximum community charge benefit in 1991-92.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to improve the poll tax rebate system.

Miss Widdecombe: We have no plans to change the basic structure of the community charge benefit scheme.

Community Care Grants

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table indicating (a) the number of applications for community care grants received, (b) the number of community care grants paid and (c) the cash value of community care grants paid by the offices in Greenock and Port Glasgow in each month of 1990 for each of (i) the elderly, (ii) mentally ill, (iii) handicapped, disabled/chronically sick, (iv) young persons leaving care, (v) persons who have abused/misused alcohol/drugs, (vi) ex-offenders, (vii) persons without a settled way of life, (viii) families under exceptional pressure and (ix) those suffering threats of physical violence.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available in the client groups requested, but information relating to the total number of community care grants received, paid and the cash value of those paid, is in the Library.

Greenock and Port Glasgow Local Offices

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for social fund loans from his Department's two local offices in Greenock and Port Glasgow were refused on the grounds of inability to repay such loans; and if he will show this figure as a percentage of all applications for loans from these two offices in 1988-89, 1989-90, and 1990-91 to date.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies of his letter will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were claiming income support or supplementary benefit in (i) residential care and (ii) nursing homes for each year since 1979 at his Department's offices in Greenock and Port Glasgow.

Miss Widdecombe: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest figures for the number of persons on income support in Greenock and Port Glasgow who have (i) poll tax arrears for which they are subject to a liability order, (ii) social fund loan repayments, (iii) directed repayments for fuel and lighting arrears, (iv) rent arrears and (v) other debts.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies of his letter will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

HEALTH

Speech Therapists

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time speech therapists are currently employed by each health district authority in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Renal Services

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the comparative coverage and quality of renal services within the health services of European Community countries.

Mr. Dorrell: Information on the comparative coverage and quality of renal services within the EC is not collected centrally. Data from renal units in this country and abroad are collected by the European Dialysis and Transplant Association. This is published annually and a copy of its latest report will be placed in the Library.

Student Nurses (Bursary)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the bursary for student nurses set under Project 2000 was last increased; by how much it was increased; and what is its current value.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Project 2000 bursaries were introduced in September 1989, and range from £4,000, for a student who is under 26 at the start of the course and studying outside London, to £5,200 for a student who is 26 and over at the start of his or her course and is studying in London. These levels are currently under review.

NHS Reforms (Letters to Employees)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost to the national health service of the national circulation to each NHS employee of letters on developments under the Government's NHS reforms in the last six months.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The only letter sent out to all national health service employees in the last six months was one from the NHS chief executive, marking the implementation of the NHS reforms on 1 April. The cost of printing and distributing this letter to health authorities was met by the Department. There was no additional expense to the NHS other than that of distributing the letter to employees through health authorities' normal channels of communication.

Value for Money

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will have discussions with the Audit Commission about ways of improving the efficiency and effectiveness of relevant activities which fall within the responsibility of his Department with a view to securing better value for money; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: We meet the commission from time to time to discuss its work on value for money in the national health service and personal social services. We are confident that the commission continues to fulfil its remit in promoting value for money.

SCOTLAND

Arts

15. Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the contributions made by Her Majesty's Government to the buildings, services and finance of the arts in Scotland since 1979; and if he will make a statement on his plans for government funding for the arts.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government have provided recurrent funding for the arts in Scotland amounting to £162·4 million since 1979; a real terms increase over the 1979-80 figure of 67·5 per cent. My Department has also provided £39·9 million for building works since 1988.

For the future, I have already committed major expenditure on the new Museum of Scotland and on the extension of the National Library of Scotland.

Scottish Council (Development and Industry)

18. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish Council (Development and Industry); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My hon. Friend met the chief executive of the Scottish Council (Development and Industry) on 20 February to discuss current industrial issues. My hon. Friend and I look forward to a continuing exchange of views with the council.

Council Tax

19. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he received in favour of retaining the 20 per cent. minimum contribution of the poll tax prior to the introduction of the council tax.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. Friend continues to receive a number of representations in support of the present community charge arrangements generally. The comparatively small number of representations he has received on the specific issue of the 20 per cent. minimum contribution have favoured its removal.

Mar Lodge Estate

20. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will purchase the Mar Lodge estate.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government are well aware of the importance of Mar Lodge estate to the longer term management of the Cairngorms. For most of Scotland environmentally sensitive management is secured through private ownership. But we would of course consider, without commitment, any proposition put to us.

Local Taxation

21. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement on representations which he has received in relation to the reform of local taxation in Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. Friend has already received a number of comments on the new proposals and expects to receive many more before the end of the consultation period. All representations will be carefully considered.

Tourism

23. Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the numbers employed in tourism in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Department of Employment estimated that in 1989 there were 154,000 employees in tourism and leisure-related industries in Scotland. This represents about 8 per cent. of Scottish employment.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what information he has regarding the operation of a tourist tax in any other EC country, Japan or the United States of America;

(2) whether he has any plans to introduce a tourist tax in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The consultation paper on the new council tax mentions a tourist tax only in the context of discussing possible sources of local finance which might be used to supplement council tax revenue in particular circumstances. The Government have no specific proposals in this area and no detailed research has been done. The Government will, however, be happy to consider suggestions which may emerge from the consultation exercise.

Dounreay

24. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of Highland and Grampian regional councils to discuss proposals for the drilling of test boreholes at Dounreay.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has not met representatives of Highland and Grampian regional councils to discuss proposals for the drilling of test bore-holes at Dounreay. In view of his role in determining planning appeals relating to the site, it would have been inappropriate for my right hon. Friend to do so.

Scottish Homes

25. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet representatives of Scottish Homes' tenants to discuss the future of metal-framed houses in the Fraser and Findlay areas of Leith.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No. This is a matter for Scottish Homes itself to consider.

30. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to review the role of Scottish Homes as a landlord.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend gives Scottish Homes annual targets for each of its main areas of activity including its landlord role. Its performance, set against these targets, is reviewed regularly.

Farming (North-East Fife)

26. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to encourage farming in north-east Fife.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Farmers in north-east Fife stand to benefit from various national schemes which support agriculture; apart from support through the intervention system, over £100 million a year is now spent in Scotland through livestock subsidies. Other schemes aim to assist farmers adjust their business in the face of prospective changes in agricultural support and of increasing interest in the countryside: for example the set-aside and farm woodland schemes, and schemes for farm diversification and conservation. In particular, I welcome the north-west Fife rural initiative, which receives public support through Scottish Enterprise, the Scottish Agricultural College and the local authorities.

Local Government Reorganisation

27. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received any representations seeking reconsideration of his decision not to appoint an independent commissioner to investigate options for reorganisation of local government in Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations requesting that the review of local government in Scotland should be conducted by an independent commission. In his reply of 29 April to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Sir D. Steel) he gave a full explanation of his reasons for concluding that this was not the best or most appropriate way forward for Scotland.

29. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss the reorganisation of local government.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. Friend and I last met the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on 8 April 1991 when we discussed, among other things, our proposals for the reorganisation of local government in Scotland. A further meeting with representatives of the sub-committee established by the convention on the future of local government in Scotland will be held shortly.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the structure of local government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave earlier today to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Sir D. Steel).

Manufacturing Jobs

28. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of manufacturing jobs which will be lost in Scotland for the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: In keeping with the practice of previous Governments, the Government do not publish forecasts of Scottish employment.

Health Building Projects

31. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many major new health building projects have been completed during the last five years; how many are under construction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Since 1 April 1986, 30 projects with a building cost in excess of £1 million have been completed at a total cost of £210 million, and a further 22 projects are currently under construction or are being commissioned at an expected cost of £220 million.

I am pleased to state that this record represents part of the largest building programme in the history of the national health service in Scotland, with more than 70 major building projects now completed since 1979. Over £185 million of new capital investment is planned in 1991-92 alone.

NHS Trusts

32. Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications from national health service hospitals for self-governing status he expects to receive in 1991-92; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have no idea as the initiative to apply for NHS trust status comes from the hospitals themselves. So far, there have been seven expressions of interest, one of which I have indicated cannot go ahead. Two applications for trust status have been received. NHS trusts offer an opportunity for hospitals to be returned to the communities they serve while remaining part of the NHS but with decisions being taken at hospital level.

Lanarkshire Working Party

33. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to be able to report on the conclusions of the Lanarkshire working party established by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The final meeting of the Lanarkshire working group took place on Friday 10 May. The group's conclusions and recommendations are being finalised in the light of members' comments at that meeting; I expect to receive its report shortly, and to publish it as soon as possible thereafter.

NHS Funding

34. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends meeting chairs of health boards in Scotland to discuss funding and organisation of the national health service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I met the chairmen of health boards on 3 May and do so regularly. I will be meeting with them again on 28 June.

Industrial Estates

35. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to increase investment in the refurbishing of industrial estates.

Mr. Allan Stewart: One of the principal functions of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise is to encourage the provision of suitable property to meet the needs of industry in Scotland. The refurbishment of property is primarily a matter for the property owners; but Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise, and the local enterprise companies, may assist with refurbishment costs where a failure in the market is creating an obstacle to the private sector investment and in order to promote the normal functioning of the market. The Government have made substantial resources available to them for this purpose.

Employment

36. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he makes of the likely implications for employment of the recession in Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart: In keeping with the practice of previous Governments, no forecasts of Scottish employment are published.

Public Sector Housing

37. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the capital debt faced by Scottish public sector housing.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The outstanding capital debt associated with public sector housing in Scotland at 31 March 1991 amounted to £4·7 billion, or about £5,700 per house. The Government provide subsidy to those public sector housing authorities with relatively high levels of capital debt.

Dr. Gray's Hospital, Elgin

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the approval in principle of the establishment of (a) a specialist maternity gynaecology and obstetrics unit and (b) a specialist orthapaedic unit at Dr. Gray's hospital, Elgin, have now been fully funded; what progress is being made, and when he expects the work to be completed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Approval in principle for the redevelopment of Dr. Gray's at a cost of £16·1 million has now been given to Grampian health board. The development will include the full range of maternity, gynaecology, obstetrics and orthopaedic services. Work on the redevelopment is expected to be phased starting in August 1992 and being completed by early 1997.

Grampian Health Board

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what money has been allocated by Grampian health board or the Scottish Home and Health Department for the exploration by Grampian West unit of the possibility of establishing trust status.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Scottish Office Home and Health Department and Grampian health board have made available £90,000 to help the West Grampian unit to implement a number of White Paper initiatives including preparing an NHS trust plan, following an expression of interest in acquiring trust status from the unit.

Strathclyde

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to meet the leader of Strathclyde regional council to discuss central Government funding for the region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The leader of Strathclyde district council was among representatives of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities who met my right hon. Friend and I on 8 April 1991 to discuss local authority finance.

Truancy

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the amount of truancies affecting the education authorities in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Renfrew division in each year since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not available. However, on 9 May I announced that I had commissioned the biggest survey of truancy in Scotland ever undertaken. Results from the survey will be available in early summer.

Renfrew District Council

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to meet the leader of Renfrew district council to discuss central Government funding for the district; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I last met the leader of Renfrew district council on 13 May when he and a delegation discussed economic issues relating to Barrhead and Neilston.

Horticulture

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations he has had with the horticultural industry in Scotland in the last year; and when he next plans to consult the industry on contemporary matters.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In the last year the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department has had consultations with the industry on a number of issues such as research and development, the impact of imports from eastern Europe on the soft fruit sector and the introduction of a statutory certification scheme for raspberry canes. My right hon. Friend has no plans at present for further consultations but regular contact with the industry will be maintained.

Health Boards

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the remuneration for each health board chairman for the financial year 1989-90.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The levels of remuneration paid to health board chairmen reflect their heavy burden of responsibility and time commitment, and take into account the variations in the size of boards. For the financial year 1989-90 they were:

Health board	Remuneration £ per annum
Greater Glasgow	18,594
Lothian	16,724
Grampian; Tayside	14,855
Lanarkshire; Argyll and Clyde	12,986

Borders; Dumfries and Galloway	8,655
Orkney; Shetland; Western Isles	5,299

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many secondary schools there are in each local education authority in Scotland; and how many are served by officially appointed school nurses.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on the numbers of education authority secondary schools in Scotland is given in the table. Current guidance to health boards is that there should be a named nurse for each school.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what average amount per pupil has been spent on school library books by Strathclyde regional council in each year since 1985.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is not available centrally in the form requested. The hon. Gentleman may wish to take up the matter with Strathclyde regional council.

Refugees

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which local authorities have applied, under section 210 of the Education Reform Act 1988, for a grant to (a) finance existing provision for refugees or displaced persons living in camps or reception centres and (b) to finance provision for 1991-92; how many of (a) and (b) have received a grant; what is the amount of grant allocated to each local authority; and if he will review the grant available for these purposes in the light of the increased number of asylum seekers entering the United Kingdom in 1990.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: These provisions do not apply in Scotland.

David Elder Buildings

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has issued any guidelines to Greater Glasgow health board about preferential disposal of the David Elder buildings to non-profit making community groups.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No. My right hon. Friend has not yet confirmed closure of the David Elder hospital, and no guidelines on disposal have been issued.

Speech Therapy

106. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time speech therapists are employed in each health board in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is set out in the table:

	Whole-time	Part-time

Argyll and Clyde	24	8·0	16
Ayrshire and Arran	24	3·2	7
Borders	10	1·7	4

Tayside	24	7·3	16
Western Isles	3	1·1	2
Scotland	310	77·3	161

It is for individual health boards to determine the number of speech therapists they require to employ after taking account of the needs of the population within their area.

Mentally Handicapped Children

107. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether his Department compiles information about the support service needs, or provision, of profoundly mentally handicapped children.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not collected centrally.

Mortgage Repossessions

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many actions for re-possession as a result of mortgage arrears there have been in (a) the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole, during each of the past 12 months for which records are available; and what were the average figures for each of the past 10 years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not available in the form requested. The Council of Mortgage Lenders publishes statistics in its regular newsletters on various aspects of mortgage lending by building societies but this is on a GB basis and no corresponding information is available for Scotland only. No information about other mortgage lenders is held centrally.

Social Services

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received any requests from the Governments of central and eastern European countries concerning (a) the enactment of legislation concerning the provision of personal social services, (b) the setting-up of departments of social work and (c) the training and employment of social workers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: There have been no requests of the kind referred to.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any proposals to extend the period of training undertaken by those seeking to become registered social workers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There is no procedure or requirement for the registration of social workers in the United Kingdom. I do not currently propose to extend the period for basic social work training.

Renaval Programme

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received a substantive response from the European Commission to his submission of a programme under the terms of the European Community's Renaval programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Commission has written requesting further information. This is at present being prepared.

Primary School Testing

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions in the last six months Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools addressed meetings of parents on the subject of primary school testing.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools has addressed three meetings of parents in the last six months on the subject of primary school testing.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many school parent meetings in the Stirling parliamentary constituency were addressed in the last six months by Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools; and what was the cost of these visits.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools has addressed one meeting of parents within the Stirling parliamentary constituency on the subject of primary school testing; it lasted for two hours in an evening and the only costs incurred were £32 for travel and subsistence.

Renewable Electricity

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what encouragement is being given to small Scottish-based renewables generators of electricity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Under the Energy Act 1983, the Scottish electricity boards were obliged to purchase the output from independent generators in Scotland, at a price based on the avoided cost to them of their marginal generation. The Electricity Act 1989 did not contain such an obligation; instead, both electricity boards agreed with the Secretary of State that they would continue to pay independent generators in Scotland in accordance with the Energy Act until five years after vesting, ie until 31 March 1995.

Following discussion with me and subject to any necessary competition clearance, ScottishPower (SP) and Scottish Hydro-Electric (HE) have offered to extend these arrangements. Under this extension, the companies have offered to buy the output from existing small Scottish renewables generators or those whose planning is far advanced at a price of 5·3p per unit. The companies have offered to buy a set amount of electricity each year—24 GWh per annum in the case of SP and 34 GWh in the case of HE. Payment will be made for each generator's net production of electricity. The rate payable will be gross, ie before use of system or any other such charges. The contracts will run from 1 July 1991 to 31 December 1998 and the price will be escalated by RPI during that period. More details about the arrangements will be made available by the two companies.

I welcome the decision made by the companies. The proposed scheme is consistent with the Government's wider environmental polices and will offer greater security to those covered by current contracts with SP and HE.

For the future the White Paper on the Environment announced that the Government would review its renewables programmes in 1991. The Government confirm that this review will consider the position of renewables in Scotland. The Government expect to make a further announcement about the review shortly, including the administrative arrangements for taking it forward. Scottish interests will be included in the associated consultative arrangements.

Inverclyde Enterprise Zone

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what figure was added to the revenue support grant in respect of the exemption from rates of properties in the Inverclyde enterprise zone for 1990-91 and 1991-92; how the figure was calculated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 14 May 1991]: No addition is made to revenue support grant in respect of the exemption from rates enjoyed by properties in enterprise zones. Rating authorities are compensated separately and in full for losses of rate revenue in respect of properties in enterprise zones on the basis of audited returns from the authorities. Strathclyde regional council received advance payment of grant of £206,840 in respect of losses of rate revenue in the Inverclyde enterprise zone for 1990-91. A final claim in respect of 1990-91 and an advance claim in respect of 1991-92 have yet to be made.

Scottish Hydro-Electric plc

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations he has had with Scottish Hydro-Electric plc on measures to secure economic development and social improvement in the hydro catchment area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Scottish Hydro-Electric plc, alone among the Great Britain public electricity suppliers, has a condition in its licence—issued by the Secretary of State for Scotland on 28 March 1990—specifically requiring it to charge uniform tariffs throughout its area irrespective of remoteness. This very significant commitment is possible because the company has retained the bulk of the low cost hydro generation capacity and can use this to offset the higher unit transmission and distribution costs associated with the dispersed nature of the electricity supply system in the north of Scotland.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will direct Scottish Hydro-Electric plc to cease current accounting practices which exempt dams, tunnels, roads, associated stone buildings and other assets from depreciation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has made to Scottish Hydro-Electric plc regarding its current accounting practices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 14 May 1991]: The types of asset to which the hon. Member refers have, for accounting purposes, infinite lives. They are expected, with appropriate maintenance, to last for as long as they are required. In addition, they are mainly capital investments dating from many years in the past. I have no intention of directing any change in the accounting policy which was explained in the company's annual reports and accounts for 1989-90, copies of which are in the House Library.

Local Authority Borrowing

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has in train in respect of borrowing by Scottish local authorities following the recent judgment by the House of Lords in the case of Hazell v. the council of the London borough of Hammersmith and Fulham; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 14 May 1991]: The Government's position was made clear by the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 7 May at columns 402-3. Consequently I have no proposals to take any action on this issue.

Housing Improvements

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if any funds from European community sources have gone to Glasgow district council for repairs or improvements to district council or private sector dwellings.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 17 April 1991]: No.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Hostages

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in his efforts to secure the release of the British hostages in Lebanon.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) on 24 April and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs' reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Fulham (Mr. Carrington) on 14 May.

EC Security Role

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards a security role for the European Community.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: As part of the process of political union we envisage intensified co-operation of national positions among the Twelve on a range of security issues. We believe that defence issues should continue to be dealt with in the Western European Union and in NATO.

Mercenaries

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the international convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We decided not to sign the convention.

EMPLOYMENT

Offshore Installations

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) whether the Health and Safety Executive now requires all individuals on board an offshore installation to be issued with (a) a personal survival suit, (b) a smoke hood, (c) a life jacket, (d) a torch and (e) fireproof gloves;

(2) what steps he has taken since 1 April to satisfy himself as to the application and implementation of improvement and prohibition notices issued by the Health and Safety Executive;

(3) whether those offshore installations that had not had an evacuation, escape and rescue analysis carried out, as detailed in recommendation 76 of the Cullen report, have been instructed to do so;

(4) what steps have been taken since 1 April to ensure the application and implementation of improvement notices requiring offshore operators to complete evacuation, escape and rescue analyses;

(5) if he will make a statement on the application and implementation of improvement notices issued requiring the completion of smoke or gas ingress assessments as detailed in recommendation 60 of the Cullen report;

(6) what steps have been taken since 1 April to ensure the application and implementation of improvement notices issued to offshore operators requiring them to undertake fire risk analysis as detailed in recommendation 54 of the Cullen report;

(7) whether the Health and Safety Executive requires in writing offshore oil operators to carry out a smoke or gas ingress assessment as detailed in recommendation 60 of the Cullen report.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. and learned Friend attaches the highest priority to implementing the recommendations of the Cullen report. Accordingly, the Government have given the Health and Safety Commission the resources to achieve this and the necessary legislation and regulations will be presented to Parliament as soon as possible.

In addition, the representative bodies and companies in the offshore industry have been tasked with taking action on those of the recommendations which were primarily addressed to them. Since the transfer of offshore safety responsibilities to the Health and Safety Executive on 1 April it has been monitoring progress at regular meetings with the main industry associations and trade unions to ensure the earliest practicable implementation of the report.

Inspectors have had the power to serve improvement and prohibition notices offshore since 1977.

Pottery/Ceramic Industry

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many workers in the pottery/ceramic and allied industries are currently working a four-day and three-day week.

Mr. Jackson: There is no information available on the number of people working a four-day and three-day week. In the week ended 14 December 1990—the latest date for which reliable information is available—there were 29,000 operatives working short-time in the non-metallic mineral products industry in Great Britain. Separate figures for the pottery/ceramic and allied industries are not available.

Redundancies, North Staffordshire

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the number of notified redundancies for north Staffordshire since October 1990.

Mr. Jackson: Data are not available for north Staffordshire. The number of advance notifications of redundancies received since October 1990 for the west midlands region, which includes north Staffordshire, are given in the table:

Advance notifications of redundancies

	Number
1990
October	4,317
November	3,805
December	2,877
January	5,576
February	5,645
March	7,242
April	4,247

Textile Industries

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people have lost their jobs in the textile industries in (a) Blyth valley, (b) Northumberland and (c) the north-east in 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The number of employees in the textile industries in the north—Cleveland, Cumbria, Durham, Northumberland and Tyne and Wear—fell by 731 over the three months to December 1990. Estimates for areas within standard regions are available only from the census of employment and relate to September 1989.

Disability

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how he intends to ensure that residential assessment and rehabilitation are available to those disabled people requiring these services, following the recent announcements on the closure of the majority of the employment rehabilitation centres.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service Executive Agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Careers Service

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the organisations to which he circulated his Department's consultative paper on the future of the careers service.

Mr. Jackson: I have consulted with training and enterprise councils, local education authorities, the Association of County Councils, the Association of Metropolitan Authorities, the Confederation of British Industry, the Trades Union Congress and various other careers education and guidance organisations about the future of the careers service.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many organisations representing people with disabilities and learning difficulties were sent copies of his Department's consultative document on the future of the careers service.

Mr. Jackson: I have consulted with training and enterprise councils, local education authorities, the Association of County Councils, the Association of Metropolitan Authorities, the Confederation of British Industry, the Trades Union Congress and other relevant organisations about the future of the careers service. These are organisations which provide services for people with disabilities and learning difficulties.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects to make an announcement on the future of the quota system and the need for anti-discrimination legislation to improve the employment prospects of people with disabilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The Consultative Document "Employment and Training for People with Disabilities" discussed the role of legislation in improving the prospects of people with disabilities, including the future of the quota scheme and other approaches, such as anti-discrimination legislation. I am currently considering the many responses I have had on this issue.

Training Programmes

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the main training programmes and numbers involved for each of the last three years on offer to people in Coventry; how that is planned to change in the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 14 May 1991]: It is not possible to provide information solely for the Coventry area.

The table shows the main training programmes on offer in the Coventry and Warwickshire area for each of the last three years and the numbers involved.

Coventry and Warwickshire training and enterprise council (TEC) have funds available to take forward initiatives that will provide a full range of training opportunities for both employed and unemployed, including those seeking to enter self-employment in the Coventry and Warwickshire area.

Coventry and Warwickshire

DEFENCE

Nuclear Weapons (Safety)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make it his policy that the safety standard required for any United Kingdom nuclear warhead design, under any circumstances, involved in an accidental nuclear explosion with a yield equivalent of 4lb of TNT, should be less than one in a million;

(2) what proportion of United Kingdom operationally deployed nuclear weapons are equipped with enhanced nuclear detonation safety devices;

(3) what proportion of United Kingdom operationally deployed nuclear weapons are equipped with fire-resistant pits.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that the safety standard required for any United Kingdom nuclear warhead design, under any circumstances, involved in an accidental nuclear explosion with a yield equivalent to 4lb of TNT, should be less than one-in-a-million.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to disclose information relating to United Kingdom nuclear weapon design.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration the Nuclear Weapons Safety Panel has given to the United States House of Representatives December 1990 "Report of the Panel on Nuclear Weapons Safety of the Committee on the Armed Services".

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what consideration he has given to the implications for United Kingdom operationally deployed nuclear weapons of the United States House of Representatives December 1990 "Report of the Panel on Nuclear Weapons Safety of the Committee on Armed Services";

(2) what consideration the Nuclear Weapons Safety Panel has given to the United States House of Representatives December 1990 "Report of the Panel on Nuclear Weapons Safety of the Committee on the Armed Services".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Ministry of Defence officials and members of the Nuclear Weapons Safety Committee have studied this report.

Trident D5

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had regarding United States plans for a redesign of the Trident D5 missile system.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the United States navy concerning potential redesign of the Trident D5 missile system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United Kingdom maintains a close and continuous dialogue with the United States authorities regarding the Trident D5 missile system. I am not aware of any current plans by the United States to redesign this system.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 302, whether the continuous safety review has led to a revision in the estimated risk of unintended nuclear detonation of any weapon in the United Kingdom nuclear stockpile.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United Kingdom's nuclear weapons continue to meet stringent safety standards endorsed by independent experts.

Submarines

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has recently held discussions with representatives of the Clyde Fishermen's Association and the United States navy concerning the movement of submarines through traditional fishing grounds in and around the Firth of Clyde; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I met representatives of the Clyde Fishermen's Association on 5 December 1990 to discuss their concerns about submarine operations in the Clyde area. In addition, the Royal Navy authorities on the Clyde, who maintain very close relations with the United States Navy with regard to operational matters, hold regular meetings with local fishermen and their representatives to discuss matters of mutual interest.

Thurleigh Airfield

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what price has been placed on the airfield at Thurleigh; when the site will be offered for sale; and what rate of return he expects to secure from its disposal.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It is not our normal practice to disclose commercially sensitive information about valuations and prospective returns from the disposal of surplus defence land. Our aim is to offer the RAE Bedford airfield site for disposal as soon as possible.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what time will be required to complete the removal of facilities and equipment from Thurleigh airfield to Boscombe Down.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The precise timetable for the relocation of facilities and equipment from the RAE Bedford airfield site will emerge only from the detailed planning now being set in hand. Our aim is to move expeditiously; but this will still take a number of years to complete.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence of the totality of land held at Thurleigh airfield, Bedfordshire, what acreage will continue to be held by his Department and agencies and what will be available for disposal, following his recent decision on the future of the airfield.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: We intend to offer for disposal the RAE Bedford airfield site in its entirety save for a small enclave which we envisage will be retained to house a simulator facility.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he intends to retain the freehold of Thurleigh airfield and grant leases to potential buyers.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It is our normal practice to dispose of the freehold of sites for which we no longer have a defence requirement.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how he proposes to balance the return on investment at the Thurleigh airfield with the environmental considerations of the residents of north Bedfordshire.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: We intend to follow the normal planning procedures in disposing of the RAE Bedford airfield. In so doing, the intention would be to agree an appropriate planning brief with the local planning authorities concerned. This will take due account of relevant environmental issues.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what scale of development of a commercial, non-passenger airfield is envisaged in his preliminary assessment for Thurleigh airfield.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It would be premature at this stage to speculate about the possible scale of any development of the RAE Bedford airfield site as a commercial (non-passenger) airfield. This will emerge from the detailed work now being set in hand, including consultation with the local planning authorities concerned.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current written down value of Thurleigh airfield.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Our valuation of the RAE Bedford airfield site is commercial-in-confidence.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he proposes to dispose of any part of the Thurleigh airfield (a) for agricultural purposes, (b) for industrial and commercial use, (c) for housing and (d) as a recreational park.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No decisions have been made on future uses for the RAE Bedford airfield site. We have already indicated our preliminary assessment of a commercial flying option; we now intend to explore this and other possible uses in more detail with the local planning authorities concerned.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he proposes to dispose of the Thurleigh airfield site as a single operation or in a number of separate parcels.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The precise nature of the disposal will emerge from the detailed work now being put in hand, including consultation with the local planning authorities concerned but our current view is that a fragmented disposal should be avoided if possible.

Middle East

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he is holding with his United States counterparts on preventing the export of ballistic missile technology to the middle east.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Ministers and senior officials from interested Whitehall departments are fully engaged with their United States counterparts on this important subject.

NATO

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role he envisages for the Royal Air Force in the proposed NATO ready-deployment structure.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Following the changes now under way, the RAF—though smaller—will retain the full range of capabilities currently committed to NATO. Work on NATO's strategy review is continuing, but aircraft are intrinsically capable of rapid deployment.

RAF Leeming

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the main works undertaken at RAF Leeming to enable the deployment of Tornado aircraft to take place there; and whether they included any extension to the main runway.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The main works undertaken at RAF Leeming were associated with the upgrading of the station's utilities, the enhancement of technical accommodation, married quarter developments and the construction of airfield survival measures, which included hardened aircraft shelters and command and control centres. The runway was resurfaced and re-profiled, but no extension work was undertaken.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the main uses of Royal Air Force Leeming in the 10 years prior to the deployment of Tornado aircraft there; and what were the principal types of aircraft that were based there or used at the air station regularly during that period.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Tornado aircraft were deployed to RAF Leeming in 1988. From 1978 until 1984 RAF Leeming's main role was as a flying training station operating Bulldog and Jet Provost aircraft. Jetstream aircraft operated there between 1978 and 1979. Throughout the period an air experience flight of Chipmunk aircraft and a university air squadron of Bulldogs also operated from the station—and continue to do so—except for a break during 1987 and 1988 while the runway was being rebuilt.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 16 May 1991

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Court of Protection

Mr. Steen: To ask the Attorney-General what was the annual fee income of the Court of Protection in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

The Attorney-General: The annual fee income, including fees for receiverships undertaken by the public trustee for the court, was £5,764,111 for the year ended 31 March 1989 and £6,474,982 for the year ended 31 March 1990.

Juveniles (Prosecutions)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Attorney-General in how many cases involving juveniles the Crown prosecution service decided not to prosecute on grounds of welfare.

The Attorney-General: The Crown prosecution service does not collect statistics separately for cases involving juveniles whether as defendants, victims or witnesses. Such information can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. It is, however, the policy of the Crown prosecution service to take into account, as one but only one of the relevant factors, the welfare of a juvenile, in deciding whether it is appropriate to institute or continue a prosecution.

Abortion

Mr. Alton: To ask the Attorney-General whether he will consider seeking to amend the law in the light of the court decision overruling the wishes of a 12-year-old girl's mother as to whether the daughter should have an abortion; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: No. Where a child is a ward of court the High Court assumes parental responsibility including the duty to give or withhold consent to medical procedures. In discharging that duty the court must act as a good parent and treat the welfare of the child as the overriding consideration. The law governing the care and upbringing of children has been recently reformed by the Children Act 1989 which is expected to come into force in October this year. It will not prevent a court from overriding parental wishes in matters relating to children where their welfare is at risk, but it would be premature to make further changes in this area of the law until we have had a chance to see how that Act operates in practice.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Environmental Provision Committee

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when the committee to make recommendations on the future development of environmental provision within further and higher education will be established; and what will be its terms of reference.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to announce the membership and terms of reference of this committee within the next few weeks.

Head Teachers (Extra Payments)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will name those schools in Humberside where the governors have used new powers available to them to make extra payments to heads and deputies; and how much was involved in each case.

Mr. Eggar: This information is not available centrally.

Primary Schools (Governors' Reports)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received over the holding of meetings in primary schools to discuss governors' reports to parents, in particular concerning the level of attendance at such meetings.

Mr. Fallon: The Department has received a number of letters about the low level of attendance at annual parents' meetings held at primary and secondary schools since this requirement was introduced in 1987.

VAT

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what will be the cost to universities in 1991-92 of the increase in the rate of VAT to 17·5 per cent.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The gross additional cost to the universities of the increase has been estimated at some £30 to £35 million. A significant proportion of this should be recoverable through increased output charges.

Temporary School Buildings

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what procedures he adopts for review of lifespan of semi-permanent or temporary school buildings in areas of stable or growing school population.

Mr. Fallon: It is for local education authorities and others directly responsible for the schools to satisfy themselves as to the state of their school buildings. In distributing annual capital guidelines to local education authorities, and in giving capital allocations to the governors of voluntary aided and special agreement schools, my right hon. and learned Friend makes no distinction between permanent, semi-permanent or temporary buildings.

National Coaching Foundation

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his announcement of 11 March regarding funding of the National Coaching Foundation coaching scheme for school children, what is the total number of school children proposed to take part in this scheme expressed (a) numerically and (b) as a percentage of the total number of school children at maintained schools in England; what is the total number of local education authority areas from which children will be selected expressed (1) numerically and (2) as a percentage of the total number of local education authority areas in England; and for what length of time the scheme will last expressed (A) numerically and (B) as a percentage of the standard school term.

Mr. Atkins: The National Coaching Foundation's champion coaching project will involve about 3,600 children in 20 local education authority areas in England. This represents 0·2 per cent. of children aged 11 to 14 in maintained schools and 18 per cent. of LEAs. The aim of this pilot project is to establish examples of good practice for use in other areas. The scheme will last for eight to 10 weeks and will be complementary to the school curriculum. School terms are determined by LEAs or governing bodies for voluntary aided schools. Although all schools are bound to meet certain requirements, the organisation of terms is locally governed.

Olympic Games

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many meetings he has held with the organisers of the British Olympic bid since the British Olympic Association's announcement of Manchester's winning bid; what further plans he has to meet the organisers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said in his answer on 1 May to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris), I am ready to discuss how best the Government can help to promote the bid. I have already spoken to Robert Scott, the chairman of the Manchester Olympic bid. Arrangements have been made for me to meet both Mr. Scott and the BOA.

Sports Council

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his written answer to the hon. Member for Stalybridge and Hyde, 7 December 1990, Official Report, column 212, if he will publish a table setting out separately the level of grant in aid to the Sports Council given or proposed for each of the years 1986-87 to 1990-91 and the level of support for sport provided through the urban programme for each of the years 1986-87 to 1990-91 together with the level of grant the Sports Council would have received and the level of support which would have been provided through the urban programme for each of these years had funding been uprated in line with inflation.

Mr. Atkins: The level of grant in aid to the Sports Council and the figures uprated by the GDP index are:

Year	(£ million) Sports Council Grant	Uprated by GDP Index
1986-87[1]	37·4	37·4
1987-88[1]	37·1	39·4
1988-89[1]	39·0	42·3
1989-90[1]	41·9	45·0
1990-92[2]	44·7	48·5

[2] Estimated outturn.

Over the same period the Sports Council has increased its receipts from £5·46 million (outturn) to £10·95 million (estimated outturn). When receipts are added to grant in aid, funds available to the council have increased in line with inflation.

Expenditure on sport through the Department of the Environment's urban programme and the figures uprated by the GDP index are:

Year	(£ million) Urban Programme Funding	Uprated by GDP Index
1986-87[1]	21·3	21·3
1987-88[1]	25·2	22·4
1988-89[1]	17·8	24·1
1989-90[1]	15·5	25·6
1990-91[2]	15·7	27·6

[2] Estimated outturn.

These figures reflect the increased emphasis within the urban programme on economic, rather than social, projects. Most projects involving expenditure on sport would occur in the latter category.

HMI Reports

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the number of (a) school-related and (b) non school-related reports published by Her Majesty's inspectorate in each of the last two years; and if he will indicate the cost of publication.

Mr. Eggar: In 1988-89, 403 inspection reports were published, of which 231 were related to schools. In 1989-90, 358 reports were published, of which 144 were school-related. Her Majesty's inspectorate reports are printed and published by the Department, on behalf of the Secretary of State, and costs are currently not itemised within the Department's total printing budget.

National Curriculum

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) when he expects to publish a draft order to introduce a short course in geography within key stage 4 of the national curriculum;

(2) when he expects to publish proposals to put into effect his policy of permitting pupils to take either history or geography at key stage 4 of the national curriculum.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have today published for consultation a draft order with an associated document setting out attainment targets and programmes of study for a short course in geography in the national curriculum for pupils at key stage 4, as I am required to do by section 20(5) of the Education Reform Act 1988. Copies have been placed in the Library.

In publishing the initial statutory order and document for geography before Easter, I announced that I would be bringing forward shortly this further draft order, which builds on advice sent to me by the National Curriculum Council last November.

I have accepted the basic structure of the course recommended by the council, although I have made changes to reduce its content to make it more manageable and to provide an element of choice within the material relating to physical and human geography.

Therefore, in accordance with section 20(5)(a)(ii) of the Education Reform Act 1988, I have published a statement of my reasons for departing from the council's advice. Copies have been placed in the Library with those of the draft order.

The period for consultation on the draft order will end on 31 July 1991. I intend to make the final order in October 1991 in time to allow for the planning of syllabuses and courses for pupils at key stage 4 which will begin in the autumn of 1994. The draft order applies only to England. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales will be publishing separately for consultation a draft order to introduce a short course in geography in Wales.

The National Curriculum Council, as required by section 20(3) of the Education Reform Act 1988, has today given notice of my proposal for making the full history and geography courses alternatives for pupils at key stage 4. I announced my intention of issuing such a proposal in January. Copies of my proposal have been placed in the Library.

My proposal is that pupils who elect to follow the full course in history at key stage 4 of the national curriculum should be excepted from the provisions of the national curriculum for geography and that, similarly, pupils who elect to follow the full course in geography should be excepted from the provisions of the national curriculum in history. Pupils will thus be able to meet the minimum requirement of the national curriculum by taking the full course in either history or geography, or by taking the short courses in both subjects.

It is our view, however, that virtually all schools should offer both the full and the short courses in both subjects and should give pupils a choice between full history, full geography or short history and short geography. I expect many schools to offer pupils the opportunity to study history and geography in ways that exceed the minimum requirement.

The period for the submission of evidence and representations in the proposals to the National Curriculum Council will end on 31 July 1991. The council will then report to me. I intend to publish draft regulations, as required by section 20(5) of the Act, in October 1991. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales is separately directing the statutory consultation process in Wales.

TRANSPORT

Slow Drivers

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has had concerning the practice of drivers on dual carriageways and motorways which have long queues of slow-moving traffic who leave long gaps in the traffic and decline to close up on the vehicles ahead of them; and whether he will consider proposals to make it illegal because of the delays caused to drivers who wish to turn off the dual carriageways and motorways as part of their normal journey.

Mr. Chope: Although we have had no formal representations on the particular practice to which my right hon. Friend refers, trials of signing arrangements to encourage traffic to use both lanes on the approaches to road works have been carried out on sections of the A1 north of Doncaster and in North Yorkshire. The police can take action within their current powers against drivers whose vehicles cause unnecessary obstruction of the highway.

Roads

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of land area of England is (a) currently covered by road and (b) will be covered by roads by the end of the century based on current plans.

Mr. Chope: A precise figure is not available, but the percentage for 1990 is estimated to be between 1·2 and 1·5 per cent. It is not expected that this percentage will change significantly during the next 10 years.

The figure has been arrived at by taking known information on the length of roads in England and multiplying by an estimated average width. The data are as follows:

	Length (miles)	Width (ft)	Area (miles²)
Motorway	1,672	70	22
Trunk	5,083	33	32
Principal	15,439	26	76
B, C, Unclassified	147,456	20	560
			690

The land area of England is 50,363 miles²

$$\frac{690}{50,363} \times 100 = 1{\cdot}37 \text{ per cent.}$$

Assumptions have been made about the average width of roads—particularly for minor roads. The percentage range given in the answer allows for the width of minor roads to be between 17 and 23 ft.

Nuclear Fuel (Shipment)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to prohibit the transport of spent nuclear fuel into ports in the United Kingdom on roll-on, roll-off ferries.

Mr. McLoughlin: No. Such cargoes are carried to United Kingdom ports on ro-ro ferries only in limited quantities, in flasks approved to standards set by the International Atomic Energy Authority, when they are engaged on "freight only" voyages. International regulations are under consideration at IMO which would make United Kingdom practice mandatory.

Severe Winter Weather

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department's review of the arrangements for dealing with severe winter weather will be completed.

Mr. Rifkind: My Department's review of the current arrangements for dealing with severe winter weather, which I announced to the House on 10 December, Hansard col 685, has now been completed; I am placing a copy of the report in the Library of the House.

The review has included consultation with the French, Dutch, German, Swiss, Danish and Swedish railways, and with highway authorities in France and Denmark, as well as with the Scottish Office Environment Department and in England with the police, with the Department's agents for highway maintenance, and with British Rail.

The review finds that in the period of 7 to 9 December serious problems were caused, particularly in the midlands and the north, by a combination of strong winds and heavy, sticky snow which caused power lines and trees to collapse, blocking many roads and railways, and causing widespread power failures. The heavy drifting snow, exacerbated by heavy rain immediately beforehand which washed away much of the salt that had been spread in anticipation, quickly trapped vehicles, blocking roads and hampering ploughing operations. The conditions were exceptional; the Met Office suggest they may occur only once every 15 to 20 years.

Over the weekend of 9 and 10 February, temperatures were extremely low and snow was again heavy in several regions. This time the snow was light and dry, which is not common in Britain. Motorways and trunk roads were generally kept open. However, serious problems were experienced on parts of the railway network; the blown powdery snow was able to enter mechanical and electrical equipment, and the low temperatures caused equipment to freeze up. Damage to 455 electric train motors meant that it took three weeks for Network SouthEast services to get back to normal.

Our review of European comparisons shows that other countries also suffered severe disruption. On the roads other countries generally fared no better in dealing with similar conditions. For instance, in Belgium traffic was brought to "a virtual standstill" on 12 February in the Brussels and Antwerp regions in particular. In Germany on 15 and 16 February there was "a total breakdown of traffic throughout the Federal Republic", with tailbacks of more than 100 km. And in Holland on 15 February "traffic everywhere was snarled up", with about 13 jams totalling around 90 km.

The severe spells also caused considerable immediate disruption to rail services. For example, in Holland there was serious disruption to services on 8 February and their emergency timetable was implemented. In France, powder snow got into the convertors of the RER trains in Paris and caused a complete line to close. In Germany, Frankfurt Main station was virtually cut off on 15 February, and elsewhere delays of up to three hours were quite frequent. In Denmark, there were major problems with the Copenhagen suburban services, with some 300 out of 500 trains being put out of service as a result of traction motor failures.

We are acting on the lessons provided by these experiences and what we have learnt from other countries. One lesson is that rail services in other countries visited, apart from Denmark, appear to have got back to normal faster than in Britain on this occasion.

A lesson that is common to both roads and railways is the need to improve communications systems and equipment, including an ability to continue functioning through a prolonged power failure. Better communications are needed within the relevant authorities, with travellers who are already on the road or rail system and with intending travellers before they set off.

Specific improvements on the roads include a sharpening up of the arrangements to remove broken down vehicles, on which we did well in the February episode; an examination of the operational readiness of equipment; and a review of the levels of manpower and salt available to deal with possible longer spells of extreme conditions. We shall be considering with the emergency services procedures for helping vehicle occupants trapped during severe conditions. It is planned to have these actions substantially complete before the next winter. We shall also review operational procedures in the light of practice overseas, including the rate of spread of salt and the level of selectivity in salting roads; and we shall examine additional sources of manpower and equipment —we found that both France and Denmark make greater use of contractors and farmers than we do.

On the railways, operational responsibility lies with British Rail. We found that railways that used sliding doors experienced similar problems to BR; but most European railways use plug doors, and had no problems. BR now intends all the new types of stock to have plug doors. Our study also showed that other railways made more extensive use of point heaters; BR now has a programme to install many more modern point heaters. BR also now intends to test the first production vehicle of all new fleets for temperature extremes, which was the general practice of the railways visited. We also established that diesel fuel can be obtained, at a premium, that can cope with lower temperatures than that presently used by BR—down to minus 22 deg C (Germany), minus 25 deg C (Holland) or even minus 32 deg C (Sweden); BR is now examining the cost-effectiveness of this.

Other improvements being examined in the light of what we learnt overseas, to see if they would be cost-effective in this country, include modifications to existing sliding doors, preventing electric motors from failing as a result of powder snow getting into them and using covers on automatic couplers. British Rail is updating its guidance to staff on how to keep equipment working and services running in severe winter weather. It is also preparing emergency service plans, to be published in advance. These will improve communications with the customer. It will also be introducing a pilot real time information system on two routes this summer.

I shall continue to monitor progress, and I shall make a further report to the House in due course.

Bermuda 3 Agreement

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had regarding a Bermuda 3 agreement on aviation matters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Preliminary discussions have taken place with the United States about possibilities for further liberalisation of transatlantic air services. Talks will be resumed later in the year. No timetable has been set for their completion.

Ilminster Bypass

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the final cost for building the Ilminster bypass (A303).

Mr. Chope: The cost of the construction works was £21·23 million. Compensation for land acquisition and other property matters is estimated to cost a further £1·5 million at 1991 prices.

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his estimate is for the cost of dualling the Ilminster bypass.

Mr. Chope: Preliminary estimates range from about £20 million to over £30 million depending on the manner in which the dualling might be carried out.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce his findings with regard to the provision of a channel tunnel high-speed rail link from Malling, Kent, to central London termini; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. and learned Friend gave to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, East (Mr. Prescott) on 9 May, Vol. 190, col 545.

The Minch (Contingency Plans)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the contingency plans to deal with the foundering of an oil tanker in the Minch; if he will place a copy of the plans in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The foundering of a tanker in the Minch would be dealt with in the same way as it would anywhere in United Kingdom waters and the response would have to be tailored to the particular circumstances of the incident. The marine pollution control unit MPCU is responsible for dealing with pollution at sea. Coastal local authorities are responsible for preparing detailed clean-up contingency plans for their particular coastlines and for dealing with pollution that comes ashore, supported by the MPCU as necessary.

MPCU resources, full details of which are already available in the House of Commons Library, are pre-positioned at strategic locations in the United Kingdom to permit rapid response to any part of the coast and there are no plans related to specific areas. MPCU remote-sensing and dispersant-spraying aircraft are based at Inverness and would be immediately reinforced by the MPCU remote-sensing and dispersant-spraying aircraft based at Coventry in the event of a major incident in the Minch. MPCU at sea oil recovery equipment, nearest at Aberdeen, and specialist beach cleaning equipment, nearest at Stirling, would be mobilised and further resources obtained as necessary from MPCU stockpiles, United Kingdom commercial sources and from other North sea countries under the terms of the Bonn Agreement.

The Western Isles island council and the Highland regional council are responsible for the coastline in the immediate area of the Minch and have each prepared detailed oil spill contingency plans for dealing with pollution which comes ashore on their beaches. It is for them to determine the availability of their plans.

These MPCU and local authority arrangements for responding to major pollution incidents in the Minch were successfully tested in the MPCU live counter-pollution exercise MINCHEX which was carried out on 4 and 5 May 1990.

Taxi Licences

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to protect public safety by ensuring that taxi licences are granted only to fit and proper persons.

Mr. McLoughlin: Outside London district councils license taxi drivers and it is for those councils to undertake what measures they consider appropriate to ensure that licences are granted only to fit and proper persons.

In London, where the licensing of taxi drivers is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Transport, the assistant commissioner of the Metropolitan police, who licenses taxi drivers on his behalf, carries out the checks that he considers necessary to satisfy himself that the applicant is of good character and fit to act as a taxi driver; these include a medical check and a check of any past criminal convictions.

Value for Money

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will have discussions with the Audit Commission about ways of improving the efficiency and effectiveness of relevant activities which fall within the responsibility of his Department with a view to securing better value for money; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 15 May 1991]: I welcome the studies which the Audit Commission has carried out in areas for which the Department of Transport has policy responsibility and the Department will co-operate fully with future studies.

ENVIRONMENT

Property Services Agency

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) on how many occasions consideration has been given to whether conflicts of interest have arisen in the case of persons appointed to the post of marketing consultant to Property Services Agency projects;

(2) what is the fee paid per day to N. A. Batchelor for acting as a marketing consultant to Property Services Agency projects;

(3) what steps were taken to ensure that civil service guidelines were fully complied with in the appointment of N. A. Batchelor as a marketing consultant to Property Services Agency projects;

(4) what is his policy on delegating responsibility to the Property Services Agency's chief executive and accounting officer of responsibility for the appointment of all marketing consultants to Property Services Agency projects;

(5) when N. A. Batchelor was appointed as a marketing consultant to Property Services Agency projects;

(6) what outside advice he took before N. A. Batchelor was appointed to the post of marketing consultant to Property Services Agency projects;

(7) what representations he has received as to the appointment of persons to the post of marketing consultants to Property Services Agency projects;

(8) what steps he took to ensure that there was no family connection between the Property Services Agency projects marketing manager and any marketing consultants to Property Services Agency projects.

Mr. Yeo: Following the decision of the Property Services Agency projects board to establish a separate sales organisation to help secure the commercial future of the business, immediate advice was required on organisational and other issues. Mr. N. A. Batchelor, who is the husband of the Property Services Agency projects marketing manager, had previously approached Property Services Agency projects' management to offer his services as a marketing consultant. He was appointed at the end of January to produce a report and to carry out some supplementary follow-up work. The commission, which has now been completed, amounted to 19 days in total and he was paid £400 per day.

The chief executive and accounting officer for Property Services Agency services is responsible for the appointment of all consultants. He in turn delegates responsibility to his top management in each of the businesses. Although the Department's normal practice is to appoint consultants after competition, single tender action was taken to appoint Mr. Batchelor, but this was only because the requirement was seen as urgent.

It is not the Department's general practice to seek outside advice when making such appointments and none was sought on this occasion.

Council Tax

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors underlay the change in the level of domestic rate rebates between 1987-88 and 1989-90; and what figure he has assumed in calculating rebates on the amount of council tax.

Mr. Key: Many factors underlay the changed levels of domestic rate rebates between 1987-88 and 1989-90. These include the reforms of the benefits system introduced in April 1988, the introduction of the community charge in Scotland from 1989, and the change in the actual level of rate bills resulting from spending decisions of local authorities.

The Government have proposed that the maximum rebate for individuals or couples on income support or equivalent levels of income will be 100 per cent. of the council tax.

No assumptions about rebates were needed to produce the illustrative council tax figures issued on 23 April.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the proposed 25 per cent. reduction in the council tax for people living alone; and if he will consider increasing it to 50 per cent. when he brings forward legislation.

Mr. Key [holding answer 13 May 1991]: We have received a number of representations on aspects of the council tax, including the level of the discount. The basic council tax bill for a couple represents half property, half personal element. The Government take the view that this is the appropriate balance between the two elements. Increasing the personal discount to 50 per cent. would mean that, if an empty property attracted two personal discounts, as we propose, it would not be liable for any council tax.

Council House Sales

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the number of (i) freehold and (ii) leasehold homes sold by local authorities to sitting tenants in 1989 and 1990 nationally and regionally; what was the average selling price and the average discount on the market place; and if he will give separate figures for flats and other dwellings;

(2) what is the average selling prices of council flats and semi-detached houses to sitting tenants in each English region, Scotland and Wales, and what are the corresponding average market values.

Mr. Yeo: The available information is given in the table. I refer the hon. Member to the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales for Scottish and Welsh data.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many designated sites of special scientific interest are in existence currently; and how many there were in 1980.

Mr. Baldry: On 28 February 1991, there were 5,649 sites of special scientific interest. On 28 March 1980, there were 3,826 notified under the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act 1949. These sites have, for the most part, been re-notified under the terms of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Water Meters

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has had any discussions with the water regulator regarding enabling people on low incomes to spread the cost of water meter installation in domestic premises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The director general's consultation paper "Paying for Water" suggests companies should be prepared to offer customers a facility for meeting the costs of voluntary domestic meter installation over a period of years. OFWAT is currently analysing responses to the consultation paper and the director general intends to issue guidelines to water companies towards the end of the year.

Environmental Assessment

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish the response of Her Majesty's Government to their consultation document entitled "Environmental Assessment and Private Bill Procedures", published on 26 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: We have received 35 responses to the consultation paper, most of which welcome, and none of which object to, the principle of requiring environmental assessment for private Bills for works projects. A list of responses has been sent to the Libraries of both Houses and copies of the responses have been placed in the Department of the Environment library at Marsham street.

Local Government Finance

Mr. David Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will lay before the House a draft order under section 104 of the Local Government (Finance) Act 1988 setting out his decisions on the final caps of the authorities which he designated for capping.

Mr. Heseltine: I have today laid before the House a draft order, under section 104 of the 1988 Act, setting out my decisions on the final caps of the eight authorities which did not accept the caps that I proposed for them and put forward alternative amounts. Six authorities—Greenwich, Langbaurgh, Middlesbrough, Milton Keynes, Reading and Somerset—accepted and I have in each case confirmed the caps for these authorities at the level originally proposed.

For the authorities in the draft order I have decided, after taking account of all the relevant information, including the new information which has been made available since I made my initial decisions, to confirm the caps for Basildon, Ipswich, Norwich and Stoke-on-Trent at the level which I initially proposed. I have decided to increase Bristol's cap by £1·5 million, Lambeth's by £3·9 million, Warwickshire's by £2·8 million and Wirral's by £3·2 million. I am satisfied that the caps I have now decided are in all cases reasonable, appropriate and achievable. The caps for each of the designated authorities and the resulting reduction in charges are as follows:

Authority	Final Cap £ million	Reduction in charge £
Basildon	22·1	39
Bristol	54·9	15
Greenwich	213·0	16
Ipswich	16·0	15
Lambeth	311·17	25
Langbaurgh	15·6	6
Middlesbrough	20·2	7
Milton Keynes	20·2	16
Norwich	15·0	16
Reading	17·7	10
Somerset	272·5	6
Stoke-on-Trent	25·8	11
Warwickshire	275·1	9
Wirral	238·3	32

Trespass

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward proposals to introduce stronger powers to curb the abuse through trespass and damage to property and public land by itinerants.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

Anyone who causes damage to property can be prosecuted under the Criminal Damage Act 1971. Under section 1 of the Criminal Damage Act 1971 it is an offence, punishable by up to 10 years' imprisonment, or life in the case of arson, to destroy or damage recklessly or intentionally any property belonging to another person without lawful excuse. Under section 3 of the Act it is an offence to possess anything with the intent to destroy or damage property. The police have the power to arrest any person whom they reasonably suspect has committed or is about to commit an offence of criminal damage. Simple trespass is a civil matter, but in certain circumstances, where trespass is accompanied by aggravating factors, including damage to property on the land, section 39 of the Public Order Act 1986 applies. The Government have recently reviewed section 39 and will announce their conclusions very soon.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

African Relief

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will allocate additional new funds for emergency relief in Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: On 22 April I announced in the House a new pledge of £33 million emergency relief assistance for Africa, col. 299. I am currently discussing the detailed allocation of these funds with British and international relief agencies.

Since September 1990 Britain has provided £90 million emergency relief assistance for African countries, including 158,000 tonnes of food aid. We intend to continue to respond speedily and effectively to the needs of famine-affected countries in Africa.

I assured the House on 14 May, col. 220, that Britain would continue to play its full part in the international relief effort to help alleviate the terrible suffering in Africa, as well as to assist the people of Bangladesh to reconstruct their lives.

Sport-as-Aid

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what level of resources, and what consideration, he has given to the implementation of sport-as-aid packages as part of development aid to disadvantaged groups and for developing the sports infrastructure of recipient countries; if he will make it his policy to develop further such packages; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The provision of sports infrastructure has not featured significantly in our bilateral aid programme. We have found that neither poor people nor their Governments give high priority to using aid for such purposes, although they can be part of health or education projects. Our basic priority is to use aid to increase the productive capabilities of people in developing countries and we do not expect any change in this.

We have occasionally funded small contributions to sports and other cultural developments through the heads of mission gift scheme, however. A recent gift was for South African black townships. We are also providing aid to match contributions by local people for sports equipment within slum improvement projects in India.

WALES

Dental Services

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library the progress reports submitted by each district health authority to his Department on their reviews of the community dental services.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I have placed in the Library of the House copies of progress reports produced by Welsh health authorities on their reviews of the community dental services as presented for the Department's annual review of performance in 1990.

National Curriculum

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) when he intends to introduce proposals to make the full courses in history and geography alternatives in key stage 4;

(2) when he will publish a draft order to introduce a reduced course for geography in the national curriculum at key stage 4.

Mr. David Hunt: I have published today a draft supplementary order with an associated document setting out attainment targets and programmes of study for a reduced course in geography in the national curriculum at key stage 4. Copies of the documents have been placed in the Library of the House.

I am consulting widely on the draft as required by section 21(3) of the Education Reform Act 1988. The period for consultation will end on 31 July 1991. I intend to make the final order in October 1991 to allow ample time for the planning of syllabuses and courses. The statutory requirements for geography in the national curriculum in key stage 4 take effect from autumn 1994. I have also published today proposals to give effect to my intention that the full courses for history and geography in the national curriculum are alternatives at key stage 4. Consultation upon the proposals is the first stage in the procedure set out in section 21 of the Education Reform Act to make regulations under section 17 of that Act. Copies of the proposals have been placed in the Library of the House.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science will be publishing separately a draft order to introduce a reduced course for geography in England and his proposals in respect of history and geography in key stage 4.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any further plans to increase the police establishment in Leicestershire.

The police authority has also made an application for a further 27 police officers in 1992-93 which, with the advice of Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary, is being considered along with applications from other police authorities.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Discussions between the Home Office and the Association of Chief Police Officers on this, and other questions of disclosure from criminal record, will take place as part of the formal consideration of the recommendations of the scrutiny of criminal records which reported at the end of April.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he intends to respond to the report "Non-Disclosure of Criminal Convictions", issued by the Association of District Councils, with respect to the granting of taxi licences to persons with criminal records; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Home Office officials have written to the Association of District Councils. We are considering the question of access to criminal records in connection with the licensing of taxi and private hire vehicle drivers in the context of the response to the scrutiny of criminal recors which reported in April.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal offences have been committed by taxi drivers against their passengers in each of the last three years.

Mr. John Patten: It is not possible from the information held centrally to identify the number of offences committed by taxi drivers against their passengers.

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to enable district councils to have access to police records when considering applications for taxi licences.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We are considering this issue in the context of the response to the scrutiny of criminal records which reported in April.

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applicants for taxi licences have been prosecuted for not declaring criminal records.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: These files are presently held in the asylum division of the immigration and nationality department. The subjects of these files were granted exceptional leave to remain on 7 May and their passports were returned to their legal representatives on that day. The passports of Mr. Sadaf Hussain—subject of file reference H354158—and his wife were returned to their legal representatives on 13 May. Mrs. Hussain has been granted indefinite leave to remain.

Prisons (Security Alerts)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list for the last 12 months the dates on which each of Her Majesty's closed prison establishments were put on maximum security alert; for what reasons; and what were the results obtained;

(2) if he will list for the last 12 months the dates on which each of Her Majesty's open prison establishments were put on maximum security alert; for what reasons; and what were the results obtained.

Mrs. Rumbold: The term "maximum security alert" is not one used in prisons. Incidents recorded centrally between 9 May 1990 and 8 May 1991 which (1) involved a full search of the prison, or (2) presented a significant threat to control, were as follows:

Transferred Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in gaols in England and Wales were transferred in the interests of good order and discipline under the provisions of C.I. 10/74 and its successor C.I. 37/90 in each of the last five years; and how many of those prisoners were placed in segregation or solitary confinement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

West Middlesex Immigration Service Ltd.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases since 1986 his Department has received written or oral representations from Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi directly or indirectly through the West Middlesex Immigration Service Ltd. in respect of applications for political asylum or applications concerning immigration; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Statistics of individual cases and representations by individual agents are not recorded. The information could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the reports he has received from the Metropolitan police about Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi and West Middlesex Immigration Service Ltd.; when reports were received; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since 26 November 1990 the police investigating the activities of Mr. Bedi and West Middlesex Immigration Service Ltd. have been in close and regular contact with the Home Office. Most of these exchanges have involved requests by the police for information, evidence and witness statements.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has information about any staff, or former staff, of the immigration and nationality department, who have been retained, directly or indirectly, by West Middlesex Immigration Service Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I am not aware of any present or former member of the department's staff being so retained. If the hon. Member has information indicating that a member of the Home Office staff has been retained by this organisation, I should be grateful if he would bring it to my attention.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many official contacts there have been between his Department and Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi, (i) individually, (ii) representing the West Middlesex Immigration Service Ltd. or (iii) representing any other organisation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Statistics of contact with individuals, individual agents, organisations or representatives are not recorded. The information could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Karamjit Singh Chahal

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will arrange for the release of Mr. Karamjit Singh Chahal from Bedford prison.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning Mr. Karamjit Singh Chahal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Representations on Mr. Chahal's behalf have been received from several hon. Members, his legal representatives, concerned members of the Sikh community, Amnesty International and other concerned individuals. The representations have concerned the reasons for the decision to make a deportation order on grounds of national security; the decision to detain Mr. Chahal; and his claim to political asylum. Mr. Chahal has indicated that he wishes to make representations to the three advisers, and I shall ensure that all representations made to the Home Office are brought to their attention. My right hon. Friend shall, of course, review the case fully in the light of the advisers' recommendations, the available evidence and any representations made on Mr. Chahal's behalf.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will arrange for Mr. Karamjit Singh Chahal to be able to appeal, with legal representation, against refusal to grant him asylum in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Mr. Chahal has no statutory entitlement to appeal to the independent appellate authorities against the decision to refuse him political asylum. He does, however, have an entitlement to appeal against any directions set for his removal from the United Kingdom. In addition, he has asked to make representations to the three advisers about my right hon. Friend's decision to deport him for reasons of national security. Any request for him to be legally represented before the three advisers is a matter for their consideration.

They have enabled criminal records to be disclosed to certain voluntary organisations under the terms of Home Office circular 58/1989. Proposals for the future will be drawn up in the light of the evaluation report and the recommendations of the Home Office scrutiny of criminal records which reported at the end of April.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newport, West, Official Report, 26 April, column 600, whether any meetings of the nuclear suppliers group were sought between 1978 and 1991.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Detailed statistics about the volume of correspondence received are not readily available, and at present could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, we are considering the results of a scrutiny of ministerial correspondence by the Cabinet Office.

Mixed Oxide Nuclear Fuel (Japan)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance has been offered by the British embassy in Japan to British Nuclear Fuels plc in obtaining contracts from Japanese Electrical Utilities for mixed oxide nuclear fuel.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: British Nuclear Fuels plc has no mixed oxide nuclear fuel contracts with Japanese customers at present. The British embassy provides British companies, including BNFL, with commercial assistance as well as advice on the political background in Japan. There is a counsellor (atomic energy) on the staff of the embassy.

Mr. Karamjit Singh Chahal

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning Mr. Karamjit Singh Chahal; and if he will make a statement.

ENERGY

Electrostatic Dust Precipitators

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what directions he has given to PowerGen and National Power regarding the level of expenditure by each company on electrostatic dust precipitators; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Regulatory control of emissions from the electricity supply industry is the responsibility of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Expenditure on maintenance of electrostatic precipitators is part of normal pollution control necessary to ensure compliance with the statutory requirements for the control of emissions. It is, therefore, a matter for the companies.

Flue Gas Desulphurisation

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on the cost per kilowatt hour of the most widely used (a) wet-dry, (b) wet and (c) dry flue gas desulphurisation processes.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The cost per kilowatt hour of sulphur dioxide abatement varies considerably depending not only on the choice of process but on a number of other factors including the level of abatement required, fuel quality, plant size, load factor, accounting practices and whether the installation is new or retrofit as well as site-specific factors. These factors will also affect the choice of emission control equipment. A comprehensive review of emission abatement technologies, "Manual of Acidic Abatement Technologies", undertaken by the Fellowship of Engineering for the Department of Environment, contains sample cost estimates for a number of FGD processes and a copy is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on the level of expenditure in each EC country on fitting flue gas desulphurisation over the past five years.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: This information is not available. For the United Kingdom, expenditure on the installation of FGD equipment at Drax power station to end 1990 was £165 million.

Electricity Sources

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish a table showing the percentage of electricity derived from (a) coal, (b) coal plant using flue gas desulphurisation, (c) oil, (d) gas, (e) hydro and (f) other renewable sources in each European Community member state.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The breakdown of electricity production which can be provided is given in the table:

North Sea Investment

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proportion of total United Kingdom industrial investment is accounted for by capital investment in the North sea.

Mr. Moynihan: Capital investment in the North sea accounted for 16 per cent. of total United Kingdom industrial investment in 1990.

Electricity Supply

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information his Department holds on interruptions of supply to domestic consumers of each electricity company in England and Wales from each year since 1985-86 up to and including 1990-91.

Mr. Wakeham: Under regulation 35 of the Electricity Supply Regulations 1988, every supplier is required to give notice to my Department of supply failures where two days' prior notice to consumers has not been given.

The figures for supply interruptions to all consumers, on a company basis, during the period 1987-88 to 1990-91 are as follows:

Electricity company	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91
London	7	5	13	16
Seeboard	2	15	19	7
Southern	5	7	20	9

Yorkshire	5	4	2	8
Northern	6	0	13	17
Norweb	4	7	7	4
TOTAL	62	87	145	106

The figures do not distinguish between domestic consumers and others. Earlier figures are not readily available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Commercial Agreements (Iraq)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list all current commercial agreements with Iraq that his Department has sanctioned.

Mr. Sainsbury: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Weights and Measures Agency

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has set performance targets for the National Weights and Measures Laboratory executive agency for 1991-92.

Mr. Leigh: Yes. I have set the agency the following targets:

Target	1991-92
Total number of new patterns examined	80
Total number of pattern variants examined	360
Total number of calibration certificates issued	590
Percentage of examinations completed in 18 weeks from registration	75 per cent.
Percentage of certificates published in 12 weeks	80 per cent.
Target annual fee increase	1 per cent. less than inflation
Target increase in cost of calibration of particular weight set	1 per cent. less than inflation

In working towards achieving these targets the National Weights and Measures Laboratory is again planning to offer a higher quality of service to customers at a lower real unit cost.

Uncertificated Shares

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will publish the draft regulations to permit the introduction of uncertificated shares.

Mr. Redwood: In July 1990 I published a consultative paper entitled "Electronic Recording and Transfer of Shares". Many comments were received, and in the light of them and of extensive discussion with the stock exchange to establish how it wishes the system to work in legal terms, my Department has now prepared draft regulations. These regulations, to be made under section 207 of the Companies Act 1989, will provide the essential legal and regulatory framework for TAURUS.

I have today published the draft regulations in the form of a consultative document entitled "The Uncertificated Securities Regulations". Comments are invited by 16 August. A copy of the document has been placed in the Library of the House.

Cross-media Promotion

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will now respond to the report on standards of cross-media promotion, submitted to him by Mr. John Sadler.

Mr. Lilley : I announced on 13 March that I welcomed the publication of the Sadler report, and that I would be willing, during a period of six weeks, to hear the views of interested parties before making any final decisions. I am grateful to those who responded, both to me and to the Home Secretary, with whom I have discussed the way ahead.

The newspaper industry

The report recommended that the newspaper industry should be invited to establish a code of practice on cross-media promotion and suggested the points that such a code should cover. Virtually all those who responded welcomed this recommendation in principle. There have been encouraging indications from the industry itself that it is willing to draw up a code.

The recommendation concerning premium rate telephone services attracted less comment in itself. Those who did mention it specifically were in favour.

I have therefore decided to pursue the Sadler recommendation:

"The newspaper industry should be invited to establish a code of practice on cross media promotion".

I also accept the related recommendation:

"The promotion of premium rate telephone services should be governed by the provisions of the general code of practice on cross media promotion which . . . the newspaper industry should be invited to establish".

I have written today to the chairman of the Newspaper Publishers Association and the director of the Newspaper Society, which between them cover national and regional newspapers, welcoming the recommendations that newspapers both individually and nationally should draw up codes of practice on cross-media promotion, and inviting them to take these recommendations forward on behalf of the industry.

The BBC's promotion of its magazines

The Sadler report recommended that the Director General of Fair Trading should be asked to consider referring to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission the BBC's practice in respect of the use of its air time to promote its magazines, because in his view this might be distorting competition. The overwhelming majority of those who responded to my invitation to comment strongly supported this recommendation. The Home Secretary and I have also seen the BBC.

After reflecting carefully on all the arguments regarding the BBC's promotional activities, the Home Secretary and I have decided to accept the recommendation.

The issues are complex and a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission will allow all sides of the argument to be heard by an independent body which has considerable experience in assessing the public interest where competition is in question. If I were to reject the Sadler recommendation I would be failing to acknowledge that such questions deserved careful consideration.

I have written to the Director General of Fair Trading today to tell him of my and the Home Secretary's views.

PRIME MINISTER

Public Services ("Customers")

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister what instructions or requests have been made by him or any Government Department to any office, agency, or publicly owned service or authority to use the word customers in respect of users of public services; and if he will make a statement on his policy on the use of this word in respect of British Railways, London Transport, the Benefits Agency, and schools.

The Prime Minister: No such instructions have been issued.

"Next Steps" Agencies

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement about the study by Sir Angus Fraser of the relationship between Government Departments and the "next steps" agencies.

The Prime Minister: Since my predecessor's announcement of the "next steps" initiative on 18 February 1988, 50 agencies have been set up, and nearly half of all civil servants will soon be operating under "next steps" principles. This is already leading to the real improvements in the quality of service to the public and better value for money which the changes are designed to secure.

In the light of these developments Sir Angus Fraser was asked to examine the relationship between Departments and agencies and how Departments should be adapting their structure, size and methods of working. In his report to me, Sir Angus records the general agreement that "next steps" is going well. There is genuine enthusiasm and energy throughout the civil service for the changes that are taking place, with fresh ideas and increased commitment to improving value for money and quality of service, for the benefit both of the customer and the taxpayer. Running alongside this is a strong conviction that there is scope for more progress.

The report contains a number of ideas for developing the roles of both Departments and agencies in support of Ministers. The objective is that both sides of the relationship between Ministers and chief executives—which lies at the heart of "next steps"—should be strengthened.

For their part, Departments must provide well-informed and authoritative support to Ministers in order that Ministers can give agencies clear strategic direction firmly related to the Government's policy objectives; determine the financial resources to be made available: select and set suitably robust and meaningful targets covering quality of service, financial performance and efficiency; and call chief executives to account for the performance. This means strategic advice and direction, geared to the relationship between each Minister and agency, not day-to-day involvement. As a result, the number of people at the centres of Departments can be reduced.

On the other side, chief executives will need increased personal responsibility and authority for running their organisations in order to achieve the progressive improvements in performance, quality of service and value for money that are required. The Government believe that agencies' delegations and flexibilities can be enlarged as their track record of performance is established, provided that essential controls on public expenditure are not jeopardised.

It is on the basis of these principles that I have asked the head of the home civil service to set in train arrangements to ensure that the ideas in this report are taken forward in each Department and agency in ways which fit each particular activity. The next steps project manager has been instructed to work with the Treasury and Departments to achieve this, reporting to me through the head of the home civil service. I look forward to seeing further improvements in the management of the civil service resulting from this process.

I am grateful to Sir Angus Fraser and his team for their report. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House and is being published by HMSO today.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 16 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

HEALTH

Disabled People

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the total public expenditure so far on the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not available. Expenditure on the assessment, consultation and representation aspects of the Act is included in fieldwork and administration costs, while service expenditure attributable to the Act cannot be separated from service expenditure that might otherwise have occurred.

Goodmayes Hospital, Redbridge

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will order an inquiry into staffing levels and the level of patient care at Goodmayes hospital, Redbridge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: No.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many break-ins there have been in the case of Goodmayes hospital, Redbridge, over the last 12 months; what security arrangements exist in the hospital to deter breaches of the law; and what lighting arrangements exist in the hospital grounds and property for reasons of security and personal protection.

Mr. Dorrell: Security arrangements at health service premises are the responsibility of local managers. They are best placed to determine the appropriate security arrangements for the protection of both patients and staff in the light of their knowledge of their premises and the degree of access necessary for patients and their visitors.

The hon. Member may wish to write to Miss Delva Patman, chairman of Redbridge district health authority, for details.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what use has been made of bank nurses by Goodmayes hospital for night time cover in the last 12 months.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to write to Miss Delva Patman, chairman of Redbridge health authority, for details.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the funding of Goodmayes hospital.

Mr. Dorrell: None. Funding of all national health service provider units now depends on their success at securing contracts from purchasing authorities.

Clinical Waste Disposal

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will issue guidelines to health authorities and NHS trusts in order for them to comply with the Environmental Protection Act 1990 with regard to the disposal of clinical waste, amputated limbs, soiled bandages, drugs and syringes;

(2) if there has been a Government survey of the hospitals that do not now comply with the Environmental Protection Act 1990 as it applies to the disposal of clinical waste;

(3) if he will list the hospitals which are currently negotiating for temporary exemption from the Environmental Protection Act 1990 with regard to the disposal of clinical waste;

(4) if there will be negotiations with individual hospitals concerning temporary exemption from the Environmental Protection Act 1990 with regard to the disposal of clinical waste.

Mr. Dorrell: A "Strategic Guide for Waste Management", which deals with the effects of the removal of Crown immunity from the national health service and the implementation of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, a copy of which is available in the Library, was issued to health authorities and NHS trusts in March 1991.

From 1 April 1991 health authorities with clinical waste incinerators have to obtain authorisation for their operation from the appropriate local authority. If upgrading of the incinerator is required in order to meet the requirements of the environmental protection legislation a programme for that upgrading has to be agreed with the local authority within six months of the date of issue of the first authorisation.

I have asked the NHS management executive to monitor the progress being made to meet the requirements of the environmental protection legislation and establish the number of units which are unable, by 1 April 1992, to comply with the full requirements.

Benzodiazepines

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department is currently carrying out into benzodiazepines.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department is not currently involved in any such research.

Osteoporosis

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for women the numbers treated by the national health service suffering from osteoporosis for each of the last five years for which figures are available; and at what cost to the national health service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available centrally.

Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish figures for 1989-90 showing the estimated percentage of women delivering in England whose deliveries were (a) spontaneous, including abnormal presentation of head and breech spontaneous, (b) instrumental, including forceps, vacuum and breech extractions, (c) caesarean section and (d) other and unspecified means;

(2) if he will publish figures for 1989-90 showing the estimated percentage of women delivering in England (a) whose labours were induced, (b) whose labours were of spontaneous onset and (c) who had elective caesarean section.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 7 May 1991]: Provisional estimates of the percentages requested for England are given in the following tables.

Method of delivery	Per cent.
Spontaneous	78
Instrumental	10
Caesarean section	12
Other and unspecified	[1]—

[1] Less than 0·5 per cent.

Method of onset of labour	Per cent.

14. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest International Monetary Fund forecast for the growth in United Kingdom fixed investment in 1991.

Mr. Mellor: The International Monetary Fund will publish a new forecast of United Kingdom fixed investment in the "World Economic Outlook", which is expected to be published at the end of May.

Working Mothers

16. Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the tax arrangements for working mothers with small children.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I can assure my hon. Friend that we keep the tax arrangements for working mothers continually under review. But, as he will recall, we decided that a priority this year was to give further help to all mothers with children, through increases in child benefit.

Charities

17. Mr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations he has had on the implications of his Budget for charitable organisations.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have received a number of representations from charities following the Budget and I can assure my hon. Friend that their views will be carefully considered.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

18. Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated public sector borrowing requirement for this financial year; and what are the comparable figures for the United States of America and the average of EC countries.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Kensington (Mr. Fishburn).

Manufacturing Trade

19. Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his assessment of the latest trend in the balance of trade for manufactured goods.

Inflation

20. Mr. Beaumont-Dark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the inflation rate.

Mr. Norman Lamont: All-items RPI inflation was 8·2 per cent. in March. It is expected to fall sharply over the coming months to 4 per cent. in the fourth quarter of 1991.

Interest Rates

21. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to see a further reduction in interest rates.

Mr. Mellor: Interest rates will continue to be set at levels which are fully consistent with our commitment to keep sterling within its ERM bands and to bear down on inflation.

25. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from businesses on the effects of high interest rates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend has received a number of such representations.

27. Mr. Duffy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of interest rates.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Bank base rates are 12 per cent.

Insolvencies

22. Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total number of insolvencies and liquidations in 1990.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The total number of business failures, including liquidations, winding-up orders and self-employed bankruptcy orders, was about 25,000 in England and Wales in 1990, representing around 1·6 per cent. of the companies registered for VAT at the end of the year.

Corporation Tax

23. Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the corporation tax rates and thresholds for small businesses; and what the equivalent figures were for 1979.

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the corporation tax rates and thresholds for small businesses; and what were the equivalent figures for 1979.

Mr. Maude: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill).

Investment

24. Mr. Cran: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how has the level of total investment within the United Kingdom economy changed since 1980.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Total investment in the United Kingdom at constant prices grew by over 47 per cent. between 1980 and 1990.

Productivity

26. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when in the last 30 years was whole economy productivity at a lower level than it is now.

Mr. Mellor: In every year but 1988 whole economy productivity was lower than in 1990.

Energy Efficiency

28. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to implement the recommendations of the Energy Committee's third report of this Session on energy efficiency in respect of taxation policies.

Mr. Maude: The Government will be giving their response to the Select Committee's report in the normal way.

Aggregate Dredging, Solent

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much aggregate was dredged in the Solent in 1990; and what were the comparable figures for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information is as follows:

Year	Quantity Dredged
1980	891,747
1981	581,164
1982	542,756
1983	502,854
1984	540,123
1985	410,416
1986	438,557
1987	411,233

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Crown estate earned from aggregate dredging in the Solent in 1990.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Crown estate earned £117,358 from marine aggregate dredging licences for the Solent in 1990.

Direct Taxation

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans further to reduce direct taxation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: It remains our objective to reduce the basic rate of income tax to 20p in the pound.

Value Added Tax

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what powers he possesses to veto proposals from the Customs and Excise authorities should they wish to change a valued added tax band in which any item is placed, and where the consent of the European Commission is not required.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Any proposal to alter the provisions of the VAT Act would be a matter for Parliament. Care and management of the tax is, however, specifically laid by statute to the commissioners of Customs and Excise and this includes interpretation of the existing provisions of the Act. The proper convention is that Ministers do not intervene in such matters. Disputes about interpretation of the provisions of the Act are subject to reviews by independent VAT tribunals.

Profit-sharing Share Schemes

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many companies currently operate a profit-sharing share scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Of 1,943 all-employee share schemes approved by the Inland Revenue up to 30 April 1991, 966 were profit-sharing schemes. Any such scheme may relate to one or more companies, and I regret that information about the total number of companies covered is not readily available and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

In the year to 31 March 1990, shares worth £380 million were appropriated under approved profit sharing schemes to 850,000 employees.

Rating Valuation

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the results of the work undertaken by the Valuation Office due for completion on 10 May under rating circular No. 58; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 13 May 1991]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary on 2 May, Official Report, column 299.

Platform Yards

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost to Her Majesty's Exchequer for the building of (a) the platform yard at Hunterston, Ayrshire, and (b) other platform yards in Scotland in the periods 1975 to 1978 and 1978 to date.

Mr. Moynihan: I have been asked to reply.

Under the Offshore Petroleum Development (Scotland) Act 1975 expenditure was incurred on Portavadie and Hunterston. The trading account for the year ended 31 March 1986 indicated expenditure of £29·2 million, of which £22·8 million was incurred between 1975 and 1978. A breakdown between the two yards is not readily available.

Any financial support for other platform yards in Scotland is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Scotland.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Milk Quotas

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report the national milk quotas for all EC countries; and what information he has on the degree to which member states have succeeded in enforcing them.

Mr. Curry: Details of the milk quotas available to each member state of the EC are set out in the table. The Commission's proposal for quota reductions of about 2 per cent. have not been taken into account. It is for the EC Commission to ensure that the quota regulations are enforced by member states and expenditure from the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund may be disallowed if infringements are discovered. In 1988, the latest year for which accounts have been cleared, disallowances were made in respect of expenditure by Belgium, France, Germany, Italy and the Netherlands; the Commission has reserved its position in relation to Ireland, where court action is outstanding.

Fishing Fleet

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the extent of the required reduction of the United Kingdom's fishing fleet in percentage terms in relation to gross registered tonnes and engine power, under the European Community's multi-annual guidance programme in 1991 and 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The United Kingdom's current multi-annual guidance programme is being amended to reflect the number of registered, as opposed to active, fishing vessels, and the final 1991 target is not available. The 1992-96 MAGP has not yet been promulgated.

Dumping at Sea

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether permission has been granted to a private firm to dump 2,000 cu. m. of spoil off Bolt head; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: An application for a licence to dump dredged material off Bolt head has been received and is under consideration.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he is taking to protect the coastal waters off South Devon from spoil dumping at sea.

Mr. Curry: Under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 no disposal of dredged material is permitted without a licence. In determining whether to issue a licence for any site in England and Wales, the Ministry must have regard to the need to protect the marine environment, the living resources which it supports and human health, to the need to prevent interference with legitimate uses of the sea and to the practical availability of any alternative methods of dealing with the material.

Regulations

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether it is normal practice for his Ministry to circulate relevant regulations to local authorities.

Mr. Gummer: Legislation relevant to local authorities is publicised in a number of ways, including direct contact with local authority associations and their co-ordinating bodies. Printed copies are available from HMSO, but are not normally circulated by my Department.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Border Roads

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many border roads have been closed by order of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland during the past five years; and if he will state the roads which have been closed.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is not readily available in the format requested and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. There are, however, 291 recognised border crossing points, 98 of which are subject to closure orders. Seventy-five of these crossings are currently closed.

Conservation

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the enhancement strategies in respect of the conservation areas in Killough, Strangford, Ardglass, Saintfield, Killyleagh and Rostrevor will be published; and what action will be taken in respect of this matter.

Mr. Needham: The information is as follows:

(a) Killough : A draft enhancement strategy was forwarded by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland to the village committee for comment in September 1990 and the Department is awaiting a reply.

(b) Strangford : The Department intends to finalise the draft enhancement strategy for June 1991 and the document will then be presented to the village committee for their comments.

(c) Killyleagh : Has not yet been designated as a conservation area but is included in the designation programme for 1991-92 and an architectural consultant has been appointed to prepare design guidance for the conservation area.

The Department of Environment's intention, subject to availability of resources, is to complete designation and enhancement strategies for Ardglass, Saintfield and the extension to the Rostrevor conservation area boundary within the next five years.

Employment Statistics

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the numbers employed in each district council area on a monthly basis from 1 April 1986 to 31 March 1991 according to the information collected by the Government Statistical Service.

Mr. Needham: Comprehensive information on the number of employees in employment by district council area is available only from the census of employment, currently conducted every two years. Information from the census for September 1987 and 1989 is:

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration of public policy underlay his decision not to offer the people in Northern Ireland and elsewhere the opportunity to apply for share ownership in the privatised electricity generating industry in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The Government, having considered with their advisers all possible methods of sale, decided that sale of the power stations by private treaty was more appropriate than a public flotation.

The main reason for this is the size of the individual generation businesses which makes them unsuitable for sale by flotation.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will suspend the privatisation of Northern Ireland Electricity until the European Community directive to reduce emissions from power stations to meet EC regulations is met.

Mr. Needham: No. Legislation which will give effect to the large combustion plant directive in Northern Ireland is already in preparation and will be operative before the completion of arrangements for the privatisation of NIE. Accordingly, I see no reason why progress on the privatisation should be delayed on that account.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy, in the light of the impending privatisation of Northern Ireland Electricity, to answer questions on the day-to-day running of that company during the two years immediately prior to flotation and sale.

Mr. Needham: The existing arrangements for answering hon. Members' questions on aspects of Northern Ireland Electricity's operations will remain unchanged while that organisation is in the public sector.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when refurbishment of Northern Ireland Electricity headquarters in Belfast is expected to be completed.

Mr. Needham: NIE advises that the work is expected to be completed by the end of May 1991.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the projected budget for advertising and marketing the privatisation of Northern Ireland Electricity.

Mr. Needham: The details of the marketing and advertising campaign have not yet been drawn up and therefore there is no budget.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations were received from the trade unions in Northern Ireland Electricity regarding the proposals to privatise Northern Ireland Electricity.

Mr. Needham: Since the publication of the Government's proposals, representations have been received from the trade unions in which they have sought assurances about the future rights of members of the NIE pension scheme and asked that the unions be consulted on this and other matters affecting their members' interests. Representations have also been received to the effect that work on the privatisation should be suspended pending the outcome of the current political talks.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether ministerial approval was sought by Northern Ireland Electricity for expenditure on refurbishment of its headquarters.

Mr. Needham: Northern Ireland Electricity is required to seek approval for major capital items and approval for expenditure on the refurbishment of NIE headquarters was sought and given.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether copies of all consultants' reports commissioned by Northern Ireland Electricity have been made available to the Department of Economic Development (NI); and if he will place in the Library a copy of each report commissioned related to NIE in the last two years.

Mr. Needham: NIE has made available to the Department of Economic Development copies of those reports commissioned by NIE which are considered to be significant. These are commercially confidential and a decision to publish would lie with NIE.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the daily average percentage of Northern Ireland's electricity generated at Ballylumford power station, Kilroot power station, Belfast West power station and Coolkeeragh power station.

Mr. Needham: The daily average percentage of electricity generated by each of Northern Ireland Electricity's power stations fluctuates widely depending on the price of fuel at the time and maintenance and other routine requirements. During the year ended 31 March 1991, the percentage of electricity generated by Northern Ireland Electricity's four power stations was as follows:

	Number
Ballylumford	51
Kilroot	32
Belfast West	10
Coolkeeragh	7

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what media and other channels of communication will be used in the marketing of the four Northern Ireland power stations.

Mr. Needham: The details of the marketing arrangements for the four power stations have not yet been finalised and this has not yet been decided.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any refurbishment or redecoration of offices at (a) Kilroot power station, (b) Belfast West power station, (c) Coolkeeragh power station and (d) Ballylumford power station is planned before privatisation of electricity generation in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: NIE advises that no further office refurbishment at Kilroot and Coolkeeragh power stations is planned beyond the routine work recently completed. The present work at Belfast West will complete a general update of the station and no further work is planned before privatisation. No refurbishment of the offices at Ballylumford is planned before privatisation.

Schools and Colleges (Rates)

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total rates bill for grant-aided secondary schools and further education colleges in each of the five education and library boards in the 1991-92 financial year.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 14 May 1991]: The information is as follows:

Estimated expenditure on rates by education and library boards-1991-92

	Belfast	North Eastern	South Eastern	Southern	Western

SCOTLAND

Dampness

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessments he has made of the efficiency of erecting false walls as a remedy for dampness in local authority housing.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is for local authorities themselves to draw up programmes for tackling dampness and condensation in their housing stock and to take account of the relevance and effectiveness of particular repair methods adopted. The Scottish Office has in recent years undertaken or commissioned research, and published the findings, relating to condensation in public authority housing and the assessment of available thermal upgrading or other remedial measures. In addition, a considerable amount of guidance on these issues has been published by other bodies including the Building Research Establishment.

Foxes

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total amount of grant paid to fox destruction clubs in each of the past five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 1 November 1990, Official Report, column 723.

Manufacturing Job Losses

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total net job loss in manufacturing in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde and (c) the Paisley travel-to-work area since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Between 1979 and 1989, the net job losses in manufacturing in Scotland, Strathclyde region and Paisley totalled 209,500, 138,800 and 14,600 respectively. As Paisley is part of the Glasgow travel-to-work-area, the figures given relate to plants with a Paisley postcode.

The table shows components of change in manufacturing employment between 1979 and 1989 in Scotland, Strathclyde region and Paisley. It takes account of job gains due to new openings and the expansion of existing plants; and job losses due to closures and contractions. These figures should be regarded as provisional, as they may change when more data become available.

Disabled People

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the percentages of disabled staff employed in the Scottish Office in each year since 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The information is as follows:

Year	Per cent.
1982	1·65
1983	1·32
1984	1·20
1985	1·50

1988	1·40
1989	1·40
1991	1·40

My Department, in common with other Government Departments, accepts the same responsibilities for employment of the disabled as other employers of 20 or more staff. We work to a target of 3 per cent. of total staff for the total of registered disabled people.

Rents

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will publish a table showing the average weekly rental charge for houses owned by (a) Renfrew district council and (b) Scottish Homes or its predecessor in each year since 1975;

(2) if he will publish a table showing the average rise in weekly rental charges for houses owned by (a) Renfrew district council and (b) Scottish Homes or its predecessor in each year since 1975.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The average standard rent per dwelling per week set by Renfrew district council and by the Scottish Special Housing Association and Scottish Homes and the annual increase in average standard rent per dwelling per week set by these authorities for the years requested are shown in the table:

Notes: (1) Average rents for Renfrew District Council are based on the estimated position as at 30 September in each year. Comparable data are not available for the years before 1978-79. The data for 1991-92 are provisional.

(2) Average rents for the SSHA are based on the position as at 30 September for the years 1975-76 to 1981-82, as at 30 June for 1982-83, and as at 1 April for subsequent years. Average rents for Scottish Homes are based on the position as at 1 April for both 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Economic Development (Renfrew)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what specific plans he has to promote economic development within Renfrew district; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Government are promoting locally based economic development in Renfrew district through substantial assistance to Scottish Enterprise and Renfrewshire Enterprise Company, and through public support for Paisley and Renfrew Enterprise Trust. The Government will continue to invest in the public sector contribution to infrastructure necessary to support further economic development. The district has also benefited from substantial inward investment projects assisted by the Government through Locate in Scotland. Other general measures to help increase industrial efficiency and competitiveness will bring benefit to Renfrew.

Press Office

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the guidelines used to govern the activities of his press office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My press office operates under the same rules as govern the activities of other civil servants, namely, the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the December 1987 Armstrong note on the duties and responsibilities of civil servants in relation to Ministers. Information officers are involved, as a proper part of their duties, in the processes of presentation of Government policies and decisions.

Interior Soft Landscaping

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total expenditure on interior soft landscaping in each unit under Scottish Office control for the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The amount spent on plants as part of internal furnishing in office buildings occupied by the Scottish Office in the last two years was as follows:

1990-91	1,994

Information on earlier years is not readily available.

Textiles

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to promote the manufacture in Paisley of articles in the paisley pattern; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. Friend has no specific plans to promote the manufacture of articles in the paisley pattern. However, there are various forms of assistance and advice available to manufacturing companies in the Paisley area from the Scottish Office industry department, Scottish Enterprise and Renfrewshire Enterprise.

Pensioners' Homes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the proportion of pensioners' homes in Scotland lacking basic draughtproofing or insulation; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on which to base such an estimate is not held centrally.

Employment Prospects, Renfrew

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to improve the employment prospects of young people in Renfrew district; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 13 May at column 51.

Tenements

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what reports he has received from the Scottish Law Commission about changes to the laws affecting common repairs to tenemental property.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None. The Secretary of State received a copy of the Commission's discussion paper No. 91 "Property Law: Law of the Tenement" published on 10 December 1990 on which the Commission invited comments from a range of interested groups.

House Repairs and Maintenance

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the number of owner-occupiers, through right to buy, who have been refused a 50 per cent. grant towards repairs and maintenance.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Grant is available for repairs but not for works of routine maintenance. It is awarded mainly at the discretion of local authorities. I do not have information about the numbers of applicants, in any category, who have been refused grant assistance.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimates he has of what expenditure on repairs and maintenance a right-to-buy owner-occupier could expect to face in the first 10 years after purchase of (a) a three-apartment flat in a high-rise building, (b) a three-apartment terrace house and (c) a four-apartment semi-detached house.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have no such estimates. The expenditure required would depend upon the circumstances of the individual property concerned.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is able to estimate the cost of increasing the present 50 per cent. repair and maintenance private sector housing grant to 90 per cent., 95 per cent. and 98 per cent.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Not all grants currently made are at the maximum rate of 50 per cent. and I am accordingly not in a position to make the estimates requested.

A7

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will identify the 10 accident area schemes on the A7; and when he hopes to begin improvement work on each scheme.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the nature and location of any accident improvement schemes authorised by him to be undertaken as part of the route action plan study of the A7 trunk route south of Hawick.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No accident improvement schemes have yet been authorised to be undertaken on the A7 trunk road south of Hawick. A first interim report has been submitted by Borders regional council to the managing group appointed to take forward a route action plan. The report puts forward proposals for accident remedial schemes at 10 locations.

The locations are:

Goldielands
North of Teviothead School
Teviothead Picnic Site
Eweslees
Fiddleton Toll to Mosspeeble
Ewes Church
Wrae to North of Highmill Bridge
Highmill Bridge
Langholm Town Centre
Middleholm to Auchenrivock

Some 27 accidents have occurred at these locations during the three-year study period and the report indicated that the implementation of accident prevention schemes could result in the accident rate at these locations being halved. The measures proposed include laying anti-skid surfacing and surface dressing, and providing additional traffic signs and road markings. My Department is presently examining the proposals in detail and hopes that it may prove possible to agree to implementation of the majority of these quickly.

Scottish Bus Group

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list in the Official Report those buy-outs of Scottish Bus Group subsidiaries which fully involved employee participation in the buy-out;

(3) if he will list in the Official Report the Scottish Bus Group subsidiaries already sold, indicating in each case who the new owners are.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following table lists, for those subsidiaries sold so far, the names of the purchasers, indicating those which were management-employee buy-outs. Sale prices will be published only after privatisation of all SBG subsidiaries has been completed.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, by ranks from police constable to chief constable, the number of male and female police officers employed in each police force; if he has any proposals to increase the proportion of woman officers in the more senior positions; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest available information is set out in the table. Promotions up to chief superintendent level are a matter for the chief constable concerned. Appointments at assistant chief constable and above are for the police authority, subject to the approval of my right hon. Friend. The Department intends to issue a circular shortly which will seek to carry forward the development of equal opportunities policies in the police service.

Mental and Physical Handicaps

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail the main training programmes and number of places involved for each of the past three years on offer to (a) the citizens of Greenock and Port Glasgow and (b) individuals in Inverclyde who suffer from mental and physical handicaps; what changes in such training provision are planned in the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Government's main training programmes, employment training and youth training, offer equality of access and treatment to all eligible people regardless of race, religion, sex or disability. Information about the number of employment training and youth training places on offer to eligible people in Greenock, Port Glasgow and Inverclyde during the last three years is not available separately. Training provision in the current financial year is a matter for Scottish Enterprise; and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

European Community (School Studies)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals concerning the teaching of subjects relating to the history, structure and legislative powers of the European Community he has received from the Consultative Committee on the Curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Scottish Consultative Council on the Curriculum is currently collaborating with the Scottish Examination Board in the production of a series of short courses on European studies. These courses are being developed at the initiative of my right hon. Friend and will be available to pupils from the third year of secondary education onwards to enhance curricular provision in social and environmental studies.

The Gulf

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library a copy of the most recent guidelines given to local authorities by his officials concerning the payment of the poll tax by those serving in the Gulf; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Scottish Office finance circular No. 4/1991 advised local authorities of a scheme to compensate authorities for community charge income forgone where service personnel normally resident in their area were posted to the Gulf. A copy of that circular was placed in the Library. In addition, the Government have introduced a reimbursement scheme to ensure that service personnel and associated civilians do not have to bear the cost of the community charge for the period of their service in the Gulf. The Ministry of Defence is responsible for administering the scheme under which payments are made to individuals, on application, for the amount of the community charge that they were or are liable to pay while in the Gulf. The Scottish Office Environment Department has written to the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities advising it of the scheme.

A77

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all motoring accidents, including fatalities and injuries to persons involved, on the A77 for each year since 1988-89.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 30 April 1991]: The information requested is provided in the following table; figures for 1990 are provisional.

Rent-to-mortgage Scheme

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the cost to date to Scottish Homes arising from the operation of the rent-to-mortgage scheme.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Since the launch of the pilot rent-to-mortgage scheme in October 1989, Scottish Homes' operational costs have been almost £160,000.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been (a) the average selling price and (b) the average discount to tenants buying their homes under the rent-to-mortgage scheme.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Based on the latest information available, the average selling price and average discount to tenants purchasing their homes under the rent-to-mortgage scheme is £21,100 and 29 per cent. respectively.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland of those applications so far approved under the rent-to-mortgage scheme, what has been (a) the average mortgage loan secured and (b) the average Scottish Homes loan secured.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Based on the latest information available, the average mortgage loan secured is £8,077 and the average Scottish Homes loan secured is £13,033.

Primary School Testing

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the names of any school board, parent-teacher association, or ad hoc meeting of parents which has made representations to him in favour of compulsory primary school testing.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 15 May 1991]: It is not our practice to publish details of representations in the manner requested by the hon. Member.

EMPLOYMENT

Radiation Protection

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current dose limits and radiation protection standards applied to nuclear industry workers in the United Kingdom and other European Community countries; and what information he has on the reasons for any differences in the limits and standards.

Mr. Forth: Common dose limits and radiation protection standards apply to all workers, including those in the nuclear industry, who work with ionising radiation across the European Community. The directive that sets these standards, European Community directive 80/836/EURATOM as amended by 84/467/EURATOM, is implemented in the United Kingdom by the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985 and the mirror Northern Ireland legislation.

The Health and Safety Commission has recently published part 4 of the approved code of practice supporting IRR 85 which contains additional guidance on restriction of exposure, but no change of statutory dose limit, to take account of recent revisions of the risk estimates from exposure to ionising radiation. This is an interim measure, pending revision of the European Community directive and subsequent revision of IRR 85 over the next few years.

I cannot comment on the reasons other member states may have for introducing different limits in advance of a revised directive.

Training Companies

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will take steps to provide greater security of employment both for those who staff training companies and for those who receive training; and if he will extend the period of review beyond the present one year to assist this cause.

Mr. Jackson: Security of employment for the staff of training provider companies is a matter for those companies. Where a TEC or LEC opts not to contract with a provider or reduces the number of training places the TEC/LEC is required to offer suitable alternative training for the trainees affected.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what provisions govern the period of notice to be given to training companies which have been required to close or severely reduce their activities in the current year; and what information he has on the actual notice given.

Mr. Jackson: The period of notice is a matter for negotiation between the training and enterprise council and the training provider concerned.

Employment Training

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment why no ET training bonus was paid to Mr. T. Haslam of 105 Pendle road, Denton, Greater Manchester; and whether his Department will make an ex-gratia payment.

Mr. Jackson: The employment training training bonus was payable to trainees who spent at least three months on ET and who had successfully completed their training plan and/or achieved a vocational qualification or a credit towards one. Bonuses underwritten by the Employment Department were discontinued for new entrants to ET in April 1990.

My officials are looking into Mr. Haslam's case, and I will write to the honourable Gentleman shortly when I have their findings.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the protective clothing recommended to be worn when dipping sheep when using an organophosphorus compound; and if he will take steps to have this list publicised.

Mr. Forth: Sheep dips are licensed under the Medicines Act 1968. The veterinary medicines directorate issues licences and product labels carry details of any protective clothing to be used. For the majority of organophosphorus sheep dips the basic clothing consists of protective gloves and a faceshield when handling the concentrate. These are usually supplemented by wellington boots and a waterproof apron during the dipping operation. Operator health and safety, including the use of protective clothing, will be covered in a free leaflet to be published in autumn 1991 by the Health and Safety Executive.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if the Health and Safety Executive is satisfied that the toxic waste held at the premises of Wath Recycling since June 1989 is safely contained and that there is no risk to the local population.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 15 May 1991]: Since June 1989 the Health and Safety Executive has visited the premises of Wath Recycling to assess the company's compliance with health and safety legislation. HSE gave advice and took enforcement action to ensure that the toxic waste was properly stored. On this basis HSE has no reason to believe that the toxic waste held at these premises is not safely contained, or that there is currently any risk to the local population.

Other authorities also enforce legislation applicable to Wath Recycling including the South Yorkshire hazardous wastes unit, the Rotherham metropolitan borough council environmental health department and Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

DEFENCE

Soviet Naval Threat

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment has been made, as part of the "Options for Change" study, of the need to support maritime operations in the Norwegian sea;

(2) what effect changes in the level of Soviet navy deployments have had on his assessment of the future of Rosyth naval base;

(3) what effect changes in the level of Soviet naval shipbuilding have had on his assessment of the future of Rosyth naval base.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All relevant factors are being assessed as part of the continuing work on "Options for Change", and the consequential work on the future of the naval estate.

Naval Shore Bases

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will announce his decision regarding the future of Royal Navy shore bases.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No decisions have been taken. Proposals will be announced when it is appropriate to do so.

Rosyth and Devonport Dockyards

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the future employment prospects of employees at the Rosyth and Devonport dockyards.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Levels of employment at Devonport and Rosyth royal dockyards are a matter for the commercial judgment of the management companies. The companies are kept informed about the Ministry of Defence's expected refitting programme.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions have taken place with his NATO counterparts regarding the future of Rosyth naval base.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Dumbarton (Mr. McFall) on 28 March at column 571.

Cambodia

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to provide the United Nations with information regarding (a) the use of mines in Cambodia and (b) the training given to those military forces in Cambodia that are fighting against the Government of that country and are not part of the Khmer Rouge.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No request for such information has been received from the United Nations.

Thailand

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make it his policy to request his Thai counterparts to agree to the release of information on the role of British service personnel working in Thailand.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications have taken place between his Department and the solicitors representing Mr. Colin Wallace.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There have been a number of communications over a period of years with solicitors representing Mr. Colin Wallace. The most recent were a letter to the Department dated 21 September 1990—acknowledged on 1 October—and subsequent payment of fees in connection with the Calcutt inquiry.

Civil Service Appeal Board

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last 20 years representatives of his Department have been in private communication with the chairman of the Civil Service appeal board.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am aware of only one occasion when representatives of the Department have been in private communication about undisclosed matters that could be material to the outcome of an appeal.

Personnel Killed in Action

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy regarding the provision of information to the families of service personnel killed in action.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: When notifying next-of-kin of the death of service personnel who are killed in action, it is our policy to provide, in a sympathetic manner, information about the circumstances of the death, where known. Further information is provided when it becomes available. If a board of inquiry is held, a summary of the proceedings can be provided, on request, to the next-of-kin.

The Gulf

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what information has been provided to the families of those service personnel who died as a result of attacks by USAF A-10 aircraft during Operation Granby;

(2) what plans he has to provide the families of those service personnel who died as a result of attacks by USAF A-10 aircraft during Operation Granby with further information on this incident; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what is his assessment of the cause of the attacks by USAF A-10 aircraft on British forces during Operation Granby; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: An initial report into the incident in which nine British soldiers were killed on 26 February by fire from United States A-10 aircraft has now been produced following the British military investigation. A formal board of inquiry was convened yesterday to consider this report, to obtain the further information required and to produce findings and conclusions.

We are in close touch with the United States authorities, who are giving all the help they can and have nominated a senior officer to provide a point of contact. The aim is to reach agreed conclusions as soon as possible.

As I said in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Tynemouth (Mr. Trotter) on 13 May Official Report, column 58, as full an account of the outcome of the inquiry as is possible will be given to the next-of-kin and to Parliament. Until then it would not be proper to comment on the details of the incident or the initial accounts which may have been given at the time by the commanding officer and other members of the regiments.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Grant-maintained Status

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools have (a) become committed to hold a ballot on grant-maintained status, (b) voted yes and (i) had the proposals approved, (ii) had the proposal rejected and (iii) await determination of the proposal and (c) voted no; how many in each category were the subject of (1) closure or (2) reorganisation proposals; and whether, for schools in categories (b), (ii) and (c), the proposals have been approved or rejected.

Mr. Eggar: Two hundred and seventy-nine schools have been or are committed to holding a ballot on GM status. There have been 160 votes in favour, 47 votes against and 75 results are still awaited. Four schools have embarked on the process twice and one application lapsed.

Of the schools which voted in favour of applying for GM status, 77 applications have been approved and the Secretary of State is minded to approve another. Thirteen have been rejected and 45 have yet to be decided. Applications from a further 24 schools are awaited.

The number of schools in each category which have been the subject of closure or reorganisation proposals were:

Nine of the 12 LEA proposals involving schools with rejected GM applications were eventually approved. Twelve of the 20 LEA proposals involving schools which voted not to apply for GM status were approved.

Seven-year-olds (Assessment)

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what preparatory steps he is taking to collect reports from teachers administering standard assessment tasks to seven-year-olds as to the practical implications of these tasks in their present form.

Mr. Eggar: A range of methods will be used to obtain teachers' views about the standard assessment tasks—SATs—as part of the evaluation of the first national assessments of seven-year-olds. The School Examinations and Assessment Council—SEAC—will be co-ordinating the information, which will include replies to questionnaires sent to two random samples of teachers. SEAC, together with the Department and Her Majesty's inspectorate—HMI—has also arranged a series of conferences which will be attended by teachers of seven-year-olds. The conferences will give teachers an opportunity to put forward their views about a range of aspects of the assessment arrangements, including the SATs.

Qualifications

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what estimate he makes of the proportion of the age group who by their 19th year have achieved (i) five or more GCSE passes at grade C or above, or qualifications at national vocational level 2 and (ii) two or more A-level passes, or qualifications at national vocational level 3.

Mr. Eggar: Information on students' attainments in national vocational qualifications is not held centrally, nor is information collected about GCSE passes gained by students in FE colleges.

However, the proportion of all school leavers in England who had gained five or more GCSE passes at grade C or better in the academic year 1988-89 was 31·9 per cent.

As a proportion of the 18-year-old age group, 17·4 per cent. of school leavers and home full-time students in FE colleges had gained two or more A/AS passes, with two AS passes counting as one A-level.

Olympic Games

Sir Neil Macfarlane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) whether he has met members of the British Olympic Association to discuss Manchester's bid for the Olympic games;

(2) whether he has had meetings with the representatives of the committee for Manchester's Olympic games bid.

Mr. Atkins: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave yesterday, Official Report, column 221, to the hon. Member for Stalybridge and Hyde (Mr. Pendry).

East Birmingham Task Force

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what visits or other engagements were undertaken by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Science during his visit to the east Birmingham task force area on 21 December 1989.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The programme included visits to Birmingham Heartlands Ltd., St. Peter's college, the Ocean Video project and Just for Starters Ltd. and meetings with representatives of the Grand Metropolitan Community Trust and the Birmingham training and enterprise council.

Agency Status

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his Department under the "next steps" initiative; and whether he has identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Mr. Eggar: There are as yet no agencies within the Department under the "next steps" initiative, but my right hon. and learned Friend has identified the Department's teachers' pensions branch as a candidate for agency status.

Teacher Vacancies

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the results from his Department's January survey of teacher vacancies.

Mr. Fallon: In England, in January 1991 there were 3,400 full-time vacancies in maintained nursery and primary schools and 2,200 full-time vacancies in secondary schools. These figures are equivalent to 2·0 per cent. of teachers in service in nursery and primary schools and 1·2 per cent. of teachers in service in secondary schools. The overall total of 5,600 vacancies is equivalent to 1·6 per cent. of full-time teachers in service. These vacancy rates compare with 2·1 per cent. for nursery and primary, 1·5 per cent. for secondary and 1·8 per cent. overall last year, an improvement of around 14 per cent. These figures are most encouraging, especially for London, where the improvement on last year is of the order of 33 per cent. The full published details of the survey have been placed in the Library.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Immigration Appeals Tribunal

Mr. Madden: To ask the Attorney-General for what reasons the Home Office's amplified grounds of appeal were not placed before the chairman of the immigration appeals tribunal when he reached a decision on 28 February; when the amplified grounds were placed before the chairman of the IAT; and if he will arrange for the chairman's decision to be expedited in view of the compassionate circumstances of the case.

The Attorney-General: The Home Office's amplified grounds of appeal in the case of Mr. Liwa Uddin were not placed before the chairman of the immigration appeals tribunal—IAT—when he reached a decision on 28 February because of an administrative error on the part of the immigration appellate authorities which resulted in the amplified grounds of appeal not being linked to Mr. Uddin's case file.

The grounds of appeal were subsequently placed before the chairman of the IAT on 17 April 1991, who dismissed the Home Office appeal in his determination of 7 May 1991.

Official Secrets Act

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions and on what basis he has been asked to authorise a grant of immunity to a civil servant from prosecution under the Official Secrets Act 1911 as part of inquiries into the leak of law officers' letters to Secretaries of State and other private individuals.

The Attorney-General: I have never been asked to authorise a grant of immunity from prosecution in such circumstances. The hon. Member will recall that my right hon. Friend the Member for Finchley (Mrs. Thatcher) informed the House on 23 January 1986, Official Report, column 451, that my predecessor had authorised the then head of the civil service to tell an official that he had my predecessor's authority to say that, provided that the head of the civil service received full co-operation in his inquiry into the disclosure of parts of a letter written by me, the official concerned would not be prosecuted in respect of anything said during the course of the inquiry.

Aid Policy

Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy in regard to providing aid for the governments of countries where human rights are openly violated and where there is evidence that traffic in drugs intended for export to the outside world is permitted.

Mrs. Chalker: A country's human rights record and its attitude towards illicit drugs production and trafficking are among the factors taken into account in allocating aid programme assistance among countries.

Economic Aid

Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries currently receiving British economic aid.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the right hon. Member to the list of developing country recipients of gross bilateral aid in "British Aid Statistics 1985-89", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

The following countries of eastern Europe have received assistance from the know-how fund: Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and the Soviet Union.

Burma

Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the policy of denying aid to the Government of Burma, other than humanitarian aid to the refugees on the Thai-Burmese border, has yet had any effect on the repressive policies of the Burmese Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Despite widespread international condemnation, there is still no evidence that the Burmese authorities intend to transfer power to the democratically elected representatives of the Burmese people or to put an end to their repressive human rights policies.

Botswana

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the environmental implications of subsidised beef imports from Botswana into the EC under the Lomé trade agreement in terms of (a) the livestock stocking policy and (b) the veterinary fencing policy under EC disease control regulations.

Mrs. Chalker: No official assessment has been made. This is a matter for the Government of Botswana in the first instance.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has concerning the use of levies returned to Botswana in subsidies for beef imports into the EC under the Lomé trade agreement.

Mrs. Chalker: Under the preferential import quota scheme for African, Caribbean and Pacific countries including Botswana, beef imported into the Community is subject only to 10 per cent. of the normal import levy. No portion of this levy is reimbursed to the exporting industry.

PRIME MINISTER

Special Forces

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will now make it his policy to answer questions relating to special forces.

The Prime Minister: No.

Education and Training

Mr. Straw: To ask the Prime Minister when the promised White Paper on 16 to 19-year-olds' education and training will be published; and which Department is taking the lead on this.

The Prime Minister: The White Paper on education and training will be published shortly. It is being produced jointly by my right hon. and learned Friends the Secretaries of State for Education and Science and for Employment and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. A White Paper on education and training in Scotland will also be published shortly by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Olympic Games

Sir Neil Macfarlane: To ask the Prime Minister if he has any plans to meet representatives of the British Olympic Association and the Manchester Olympic Committee.

The Prime Minister: It is for my hon. Friend the Minister of Sport to discuss with those concerned how best the Government can help to promote Manchester's bid for the 2000 Olympic games. The Government wish Manchester every success.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Maintenance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the amount of benefit expenditure on lone parents recovered from relatives liable to pay maintenance, for each year from 1978 to the latest available date.

Mr. Jack: The first year for which complete data are available is 1980-81. The data cover all payments received from liable relatives and include a small amount of maintenance paid for other families besides lone parents. The information is in the table.

1980-81	175·6
1981-82	207·0
1982-83	209·0
1983-84	197·6
1984-85	186·2
1985-86	197·6
1986-87	—[1]
1987-88	181·2
1988-89	176·6
1989-90	205·6

[1] Data not available as, no annual statistical inquiry, which collects the bulk of the required information, was undertaken during 1986-87 because of a change in the collection arrangements.

NB: The figures include estimates of benefit saved as a result of payments from liable relatives removing entitlement to benefit.
Source: Departmental records.

Expenditure

Mr. Lawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide the information given in his answer of 3 May, Official Report, columns 349-51, at constant 1989-90 prices.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is in the table.

	£ million (1989-90 prices)
	Council rents (rent rebates)	Community charge benefit and rate rebates
1983-84	2,732	1,681
1984-85	2,817	1,778
1985-86	2,860	1,842
1986-87	2,913	1,968
1987-88	2,864	1,944
1988-89	2,851	1,460
1989-90	2,856	1,460
1990-91	2,951	2,109

Note: Revalued to 1989-90 prices using the GDP deflator.

Social Fund

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for review by a social fund inspector were outstanding for more than one month on 28 February and 31 March.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is in the table.
28 February 1991—616 cases outstanding for more than one month.
31 March 1991—1,013 cases outstanding for more than one month.
Additional inspectors have been recruited.

Child Benefit

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing the amounts by which child benefit could be increased at no extra cost, if (a) the proposed extra £2 for first children were distributed evenly between all children and (b) third and subsequent children received £1 a week more than first and second children.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 April 1991]: The £1 increase in April 1991 for the eldest eligible child is estimated to cost some £250 million. The full-year cost of increasing that rate by a further £1 in October will be some £355 million. If this £605 million were redistributed in the ways suggested, without carrying them through into income-related benefits, the rate for (a) all children would be £8·60 compared with £9·25 for the eldest eligible child and £7·50 for all other children from October, and (b) that for first and second children would be £8·45 and for third and subsequent children, £9·45.

ENVIRONMENT

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will indicate the financial costs to his Department in commissioning and publishing the research document "Competitive Tendering for Local Authority Services—Initial Experiences"; and if he will indicate the future costs of any further research into compulsory competitive tendering that his Department is planning.

Mr. Portillo: The figure is £83,000. This was the first part of a three-year study, the remainder of which is estimated to cost £98,000.

Environmental Education

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, as part of his programme to promote environmental education, he will make available resources for the distribution to schools, colleges and other similar bodies of copies of relevant environmental publications.

Mr. Baldry: Copies of the Department's "Environment in Trust" leaflets were circulated to all secondary schools in England and Wales on publication. These leaflets and other publications, including the recent "Wake Up" leaflet, are available to anyone on application. The Department also supports the preparation and distribution of educational materials by our grant-in-aid environmental bodies, and by those organisations which receive funds from the special grants programme.

Wath Recycling

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 9 May, Official Report, column 551, what assessment Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has made of the security with which the toxic waste held at Wath Recycling since June 1989 is contained.

Mr. Trippier: Contaminated copper hydroxide sludge was delivered to the Wath site during the week commencing 5 June 1989. After discussions between the South Yorkshire hazardous waste unit, the Health and Safety Executive, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, the company and the producer of the material, it was agreed that the sludge should be repacked in steel drums and stored in a safe place on site, pending a decision on its final destination. The statutory control authority for waste storage and disposal is the SYHWA. HMIP has no statutory duties in respect of this matter and has had no further involvement.

People Sleeping Rough

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made on the initiative to provide accommodation for people sleeping rough in central London.

Sir George Young: I am glad to be able to report that there has been significant progress on this initiative.

The Housing Corporation is announcing today the allocation of over £50 million to more than 50 housing associations in London, to provide some 1,400 bedspaces in permanent homes for people sleeping rough or in hostels in central London. This allocation is part of the total provision of £96 million over three years which my Department has made for rough sleepers in central London.

Today's allocations will bring to more than 2,300 the number of places in move-on housing for rough sleepers being provided this year and next. In addition, some 1,000 additional places in direct access hostels should be in place within the next few months. So far, about 1,000 places are available, in a mixture of move-on housing, hostels and short-term shelters.

The first Department of Health hostel for homeless mentally ill people was opened last month. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health is today announcing proposed additional revenue funding of £2·7 million over three years, of which his Department will provide £1·5 million and the Mental Health Foundation will endeavour to raise £1·2 million from private sources. This will provide further psychiatric support for people sleeping rough and in hostels in London.

The initiative is beginning to have a significant effect on the numbers of people sleeping rough in central London. The voluntary groups estimated in January that there were about 1,000 people sleeping rough in seven main areas in central London. Last month, the estimate was that numbers in these areas had come down to about 500.

I hope that this progress will continue as more accommodation becomes available. I am very grateful for the very positive way in which the voluntary groups, the housing associations and the London boroughs have responded to the initiative. Our aim remains to make it unnecessary for anyone to sleep rough in central London.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available information for 1986 to 1988 is published in table 15 of the Home Office Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 1989", Cm. 1124, and for 1989 and 1990 in table 1 of the Home Office statistical bulletin 3/91 "Control of Immigration: Statistics—Third and Fourth Quarters and Year 1990". A copy of each publication is held in the Library.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding has been provided to the Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association in the last five years; and what funding is proposed for 1991-92.

Mr. John Patten: Prior to 1990-91, no contribution from central funds was made to the Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association. In the financial year 1990-91, a contribution of £40,000 was made by the Home Office to the association. Provision is available for a contribution of £40,000 in the current financial year, of which £10,000 has so far been paid to the association.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what role is played in the provision of advice to his Department by (a) the Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association and (b) the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council.

Mr. John Patten: The Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council is constituted under section 29 of the Fire Services Act 1947 to advise my right hon. Friend on matters as to which he is required by the Act to consult it, or on any other matters arising in connection with the operation of the Act which the council has taken into consideration, apart from matters relating to conditions of service and the maintenance of discipline. My right hon. Friend is responsible for appointing the members of the council, who include representatives of the interests of fire authorities and of persons employed as members of fire brigades. The Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association is one member of the council. The association is also represented on the joint committees which report to the council and to the Scottish Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council. Apart from its role in submitting advice to my right hon. Friend through the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council, the Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association has no special role in the provision of advice to the Home Office.

Birmingham Six

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is considering final proposals for financial compensation for each of the Birmingham Six; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: On the advice of the independent assessor, my right hon. Friend has made interim payments of compensation to each of the six men.

The solicitors representing the men have been asked to supply any information which they wish the assessor to take into account when determining the final sum. It is for the assessor to decide what the amount should be and when he has the information he needs to reach a decision. In accordance with the provisions of section 133 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988, my right hon. Friend will accept the assessor's recommendation.

Criminal Justice System

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether the Royal Commission on the criminal justice system will consider the retirement age of those dispensing justice;

(2) whether the Royal Commission on the criminal justice system will consider the work of the Crown forensic service;

(3) if the Royal Commission on the criminal justice system will consider replacing the appeal court system with a less adversarial court;

(4) whether the Royal Commission on the criminal justice system will consider the establishment of a national police force.

Mr. John Patten: The Royal Commission on criminal justice has been given very wide terms of reference, and it is for the commission to determine the way in which it will carry out its task and to report accordingly.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are proposed to allow hon. Members to give evidence to the royal commission on the Criminal Justice System.

Mr. John Patten: It is for the royal commission to determine the way in which it will carry out its task, but I understand that an announcement will be made shortly about the arrangements for the submission of evidence to the commission.

Crime

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give figures for (a) total crime and offences, (b) total crimes, (c) total offences, (d) serious assaults and (e) housebreaking for each year since 1979 inclusive; if he will give the percentage increase or decrease for each year compared with the figure for the previous year together with the total increase or decrease since 1979; and what was the percentage clear-up rate for crimes in each of the years since 1979 inclusive.

Mr. John Patten: The information for England and Wales is published annually in tables 2.1 and 2.18 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" and tables A and D of Home Office statistical bulletin 4/91, copies of which are available in the Library.

Corresponding information for Scotland is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

(2) what are the organisations and individuals which he plans to consult on extending mandatory all-seated accommodation to sports grounds other than football grounds designated under the Safety of Sports Grounds Act 1975; what are the methods by which and the dates on which such consultations will take place; when the consultation period will be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: During the course of last year Home Office officials held separate discussions with members of the executive committee of the rugby league, with officials of the rugby football union and, together with colleagues from the Welsh Office, with officials of the Welsh rugby football union. We have consulted and are currently awaiting the views of the Association of Chief Police Officers on the extension of mandatory all seated accommodation to these sports. My right hon. Friend will make a statement in due course. No consultations have been held with the cricket authorities because most designated cricket grounds are already wholly or substantially all seated. The designation of sports grounds under the 1975 Act is confined to grounds used for association football, rugby league, rugby union and cricket.

Press Complaints Commission

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the chairman of the Press Complaints Commission; and when he proposes to bring forward legislation as recommended by the Calcutt commission.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government have made available the following sums of earmarked money to regional health authorities as a contribution towards the costs incurred in helping prevent the spread of HIV infection and providing treatment, counselling and support for those affected by HIV and AIDS.

	£ million
1987-88	25·1

NHS Trusts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether patients who have grievances regarding their treatment by hospital trusts will be able to have them referred to the health service ombudsman in the same way as patients treated in directly managed hospitals.

Mr. Dorrell: Yes. Schedule 9, paragraph 18(10) of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 provides for trusts to be subject to investigation by the health service commissioner.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A total of 22 appeals on behalf of nurses employed by Doncaster district health authority were outstanding at regional level at 31 March 1991. None was outstanding at national level.

Appeals outstanding (England)

	Number
Regional	15,359
National	476

Information on district level appeals is not held centrally.

Questions on clinical grading appeals in Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Correspondence

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Minister for Health will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden of 28 February.

Mr. Dorrell: My hon. Friend replied on 16 May.

People Sleeping Rough

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the initiative to provide accommodation and psychiatric care for mentally ill people sleeping rough in central London.

Mr. Dorrell: I was pleased to be able to open formally last month the first of the specialist hostels to be funded under the Department of Health's programme. Work is continuing on a further five hostel schemes, all of which are expected to open before the end of this financial year. New community-based psychiatric teams, along with an evaluation team, have been set up in the three Thames health regions concerned, and are already working with mentally ill people on the streets.

Today I can announce that, in collaboration with the Mental Health Foundation, we expect to make available further revenue funding totalling about £2·7 million over the next three years. The Department of Health will provide £1·5 million, and the Mental Health Foundation will be endeavouring to raise the remaining £1·2 million from private sources, subject to detailed consideration of the projects.

This extra money will give central London's health and social services authorities the opportunity to expand their community psychiatric teams, to enable them to provide support for mentally ill people within the new direct access hostels being established by the Department of the Environment under its rough sleepers initiative. Progress on the latter initiative is the subject of an announcement today by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning.

HIV

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the results of the Medical Research Council's anonymised HIV surveys will be available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We are today publishing the first results of the Government funded Medical Research Council's anonymised HIV surveys. These surveys involved testing blood from a wide selection of patients who have had blood taken for other purposes. Great care must be taken in interpreting these preliminary results because the samples were small. Nevertheless they show that the priority we have given to public education campaigns is justified.

The first results show that the overall prevalance of HIV infection in women attending certain ante-natal clinics in inner London is one in 500. These figures show a fivefold range from about one in 200 to more than one in 1,000 in the inner London clinics surveyed.

In the small number of clinics surveys in outer London and the south-east there was a wide range from about one in 300 to one in 2,500, but half these clinics had no positive results.

In other parts of the country, only one test in 16,000 in ante-natal clinics was positive.

Among heterosexual women attending certain sexually transmitted diseases clinics in inner London the prevalence rate was one in 500; however, it was one in 100 for heterosexual men. Among homosexual and bisexual men attending the same clinics there is evidence of continuing transmission. The current prevalence rate is one in five.

These initial results, though preliminary, provide valuable information to help us target our response to the epidemic. We intend to establish and lead an AIDS action group to reinforce action in areas with high prevalence rates. The group will address issues such as access to local services, local prevention and education initiatives and how to reach particular groups such as women, children and ethnic minorities. It will draw on the experience of local service providers and include within its membership representatives from health and local authorities, voluntary organisations and local communities.

South Derbyshire DHA

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were treated by South Derbyshire district health authority for the latest year for which figures are available and the previous year.

Mr. Dorrell: The table lists the number of in-patients, out-patients and day cases treated by Southern Derbyshire health authority for 1988-89 and 1989-90—the last year for which figures are available.

	1988-89	1989-90	Percentage increase
In-patients[1]	55,673	61,608	10·7
Out-patients	314,990	324,962	3·2
Day cases	4,977	5,255	5·6

NORTHERN IRELAND

Strangford Lough

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the proposed designation of Strangford lough as a marine nature reserve from Strangford lough advisory co-ordinating council, Strangford lough nature conservation association, local farming organisations and others; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: Since the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland announced its recommendation that Strangford lough should be designated as a marine nature reserve, the Department has received representations from a wide range of bodies including those referred to by the hon. Gentleman. Many of these representations have centred round the future management of the lough, rather than the designation of the marine nature reserve itself.

The Department will be issuing a consultative paper at the beginning of June setting out its thinking on the future management structure for the lough and on a marine nature reserve. The consultation paper will be circulated widely and officials will be arranging meetings at which they will further explain the proposals. The district councils, the Strangford lough advisory and co-ordinating committee, the Strangford Lough Nature Conservation Association, farming organisations and other relevant bodies will be included in the consultation process. I hope all those interested will take the opportunity to express their views in as positive a way as possible. Following consultation the Department will produce a document containing policies and proposals.

Factory Space

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total amount of factory space available for letting from the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland and the Local Enterprise Development Unit at 30 September 1990 analysed by parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Needham: Factory space and workspace accommodation available for letting at 30 September 1990 was as follows:

Constituency	IDB—Available lettable space sq ft	LEDU—Available workspace sq ft
Belfast East	Nil	Nil
Belfast North	Nil	65,165
Belfast South	16,140	Nil
Belfast West	8,178	15,960
East Antrim	Nil	1,194
East Londonderry	3,228	1,942
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	3,228	26,668
Foyle	16,140	20,204
Lagan Valley	Nil	652
Mid Ulster	41,426	10,802
Newry and Armagh	41,125	26,642
North Antrim	35,336	14,454
North Down	Nil	Nil
South Antrim	31,204	Nil
South Down	17,007	7,172
Strangford	Nil	Nil
Upper Bann	29,246	26,950
Total	242,258	217,805

Although the Local Enterprise Development Unit does not own or let factory space it funds the local enterprise programme which aims to establish a network of local enterprise agencies throughout Northern Ireland. Local enterprise agencies provide managed workspace accommodation for new and existing small businesses in units of various sizes.

Company Assistance

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of the companies assisted by the Industrial Development Board who located factories in each of the district council areas in Northern Ireland from 1 April 1990 to 31 March 1991.

Mr. Needham: During the period from 1 April 1990 to 31 March 1991 there were nine new inward investment projects for which offers of assistance were accepted. To date two of these projects—Keith Prowse Holdings Ltd. in Belfast city council area and Webtech (NI) Ltd. in Fermanagh district council area—have been made public. The remaining seven projects, which have not yet been announced, will be located in the following district council areas: Antrim, Ballymena, Belfast (two), Magherafelt, Newry and Mourne, and Newtownabbey.

In addition, four other inward investments for which no selective financial assistance was offered were secured. Two of these have been made public—Inland Revenue in the Belfast city council area and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in the Newry and Mourne district council area. The other two projects, as yet unannounced, will be located in the Antrim and Belfast council areas.

Desmond and Sons Ltd., an existing Northern Ireland company, located a new factory in the Dungannon district council area.

Industrial Development Board

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the special development initiative led by the Industrial Development Board entails for the constituency of South Down.

Mr. Needham: The Department of the Environment is co-ordinating the involvement of various Government Departments in progressing the Downpatrick regeneration strategy. Within this framework IDB is exploring the availability of a number of sites which might be suitable for industrial development purposes. IDB is also associated with the Department of Economic Development-led Newry initiative which, although primarily aimed at the Newry urban area, is likely to be of benefit to neighbouring areas.

IDB officials have recently met Down district council to discuss industrial development in the area and IDB's United States-based overseas representatives have also met a local group to discuss the establishment of links between South Down and Chicago. Some 70 companies in the South Down area will be provided with information about an IDB trade mission to Chicago in October 1991.

Northern Ireland Electricity

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will name the organisations or concerns which have so far expressed an interest in purchasing power stations in Northern Ireland or investing in Northern Ireland Electricity.

Mr. Needham: No organisation or concern has yet formally registered an interest in purchasing the power stations or in acquiring shares in NIE's successor company. All such expressions of interest would in any event represent commercially confidential information and would not normally be published.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he or his officials have had with the chairman of the Northern Ireland electricity service concerning the drafting of the minute relating to the decision of the Northern Ireland electricity service not to renew the contract of its chief executive.

Mr. Needham: The drafting of the minutes of the board of Northern Ireland Electricity is a matter for the chairman and company secretary.

The chairman of NIE meets Ministers and officials on a regular basis, and advised the Department of Economic Development of the discussions at the meeting of the board on 3 May.

Millisle Tourist Project

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many covers on control boxes of electric columns in Millisle, County Down have been removed this year; what proposals he has to make these covers more secure; and if he will make a statement on the inherent danger to children and the public in Millisle by these exposed electrical installations.

Mr. Needham: No covers have been removed this year. Arrangements exist for repairing and securing any control boxes which may be damaged.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide a footway at Moss road, Millisle, from the Orange hall as far as the car park on the opposite side of Moss road; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: A scheme to extend the existing footway on the south side of the Moss road, Millisle from the Orange hall to the A2 junction is planned for the next financial year subject to finance being available. There are no proposals to provide a footway on the opposite side of the road.

Schools and Colleges (Rates)

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what services and support local district councils provide for secondary schools and further education colleges in respect of rates payments.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 14 May 1991]: There are two rates in Northern Ireland, the regional rate determined by the Department of Finance and Personnel, which funds regional services, including education, and the district rate struck by each district council to meet the costs of district services which include the provision of leisure facilities—playing fields, leisure centres, swimming pools, and so on—and environmental services—refuse collection and disposal, street cleansing and litter control, building control, environmental health enforcement and so on. District services are provided for secondary schools and further education colleges.

WALES

Speech Therapy

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time speech therapists are currently employed by each Welsh health district board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information requested is given in the following table:

Number of staff in post as at 30 April 1991

District health authority	Full-time	Part-time
Pembrokeshire	4	3
Clwyd	18	10
East Dyfed	12	3
Gwent	16	5
Gwynedd	9	3
Mid Glamorgan	19	4
Powys	6	3
South Glamorgan	26	10
West Glamorgan	8	5

There has been a significant and welcomed increase in the number of speech therapists employed by district health authorities in Wales since this Government took office. Since 1979 the number of whole-time equivalent speech therapists employed has increased from 65 to 154, an increase of 137 per cent.

Brymbo Steelworks

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the quality of training provided for people from Brymbo steelworks who were recently made redundant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Training for those recently made redundant at the Brymbo steelworks is provided under the iron and steel employees' readaptation benefits scheme which is jointly funded by the Department of Trade and Industry and the European Commission. In the course of administering the scheme the Department of Trade and Industry has discussed the quality of training, both with trainees and with training providers, and has drawn apparent deficiencies to the attention of the providers. That Department is continuing to monitor the situation closely.

TRANSPORT

Severn Crossing

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will require that local companies and jobs will be given priority when considering supply and service contracts for the John Laing-GTM second Severn crossing joint venture.

Mr. Chope: The concession company for the second Severn crossing scheme will be required to comply with the normal competitive rules for sub-contracting. It will not therefore be allowed to discriminate on the grounds of nationality or location in its selection of sub-contractors. But I hope that local firms and individuals will bid for the work.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which authorities are responsible for determining the charges or tolls for the carriage of freight traffic through the channel tunnel for those portions of the journey (a) on the continent (b) within the United Kingdom and (c) between Frethun and Cheriton; and if the payer of such moneys can be made aware of the components of any combined charge for any class or quantity of traffic attributable to each part of the journey.

Mr. Freeman: Charging for international rail freight services through the channel tunnel will be a commercial matter for British Rail and SNCF, who have a commercial agreement with Eurotunnel for the use of the tunnel.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assistance is being provided out of public funds, other than that for grants toward the costs of private railway sidings, for the development or equipment of freight terminals for cross-channel rail traffic on the basis of (a) general desirability and (b) reduction in road congestion.

Mr. Freeman: Investment in terminals for channel tunnel freight services is a commercial matter for British Rail and, where appropriate, its private sector partners. British Rail is prohibited under section 42 of the Channel Tunnel Act 1987 from receiving Government grants for international rail services.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is British Rail's target date for signing a contract for building the main fleet of international trains for the channel tunnel route; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when British Rail will order the fleet of 18-coach Euro-express trains; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail, SNCF and SNCB signed the contract for the 30 inter-capital trainsets in December 1989. British Rail are still discussing with the manufacturers the design of and terms for the specially modified trainsets needed for north of London services.

Essex Roads

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to increase the capital allocation to Essex county council for road construction in this or following financial years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The allocation of transport supplementary grant, annual capital guideline and supplementary credit approval for local authority expenditure on roads in 1991-92 was announced last December. The resources available were fully distributed among the 108 authorities and none held back for later allotment.

The allocations are decided in the light of information in authorities' annual transport policies and programme documents, which have to be submitted to the Secretary of State by the end of July each year. The allocations for Essex county council for 1992-93 will be considered on this basis, taking into account the competing bids from other highway authorities and the total resources available. It is not therefore possible to anticipate the outcome.

Kingsway Underpass

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how long the underpass from Waterloo bridge to Kingsway has been closed to traffic; when it will be re-opened and how much is the estimated cost of the work.

Mr. Chope: Westminster city council, which is the highway authority for the underpass, closed it on 18 January 1989. I understand that it is to re-open within the next few weeks and that the estimated cost of refurbishment is £4 million.

24 Claremont Road, E11

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the report of the Waltham Forest environmental health officer with regard to his Department's property at 24 Claremont road, E11; and what action he proposes to take on it.

Mr. Chope: Yes; I have placed in the Library a copy of the environmental health officer's report about 24 Claremont road, E11 dated 27 June 1990. This property has been acquired in connection with A12 Hackney-M11 link road and is temporarily occupied by tenants of the Department.

The Department has offered alternative accommodation to the tenants in order to vacate the property. They have turned the offer down. Since the report, essential repairs have been carried out. It is our intention to demolish the property after the tenancy agreement expires in November 1991.

British Transport Police

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidelines are laid down for investigations by the British Transport Police in cases of sudden death.

Mr. Freeman: The guidelines for investigations by the British Transport police in cases of sudden death are the same as those for Home Department forces. Investigations are conducted on behalf of Her Majesty's coroners of the areas in which such deaths occur. In apropriate cases, the facts are brought to the attention of the Crown prosecution service.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what statutory bases the British Transport Police is required to investigate and submit reports to Her Majesty's coroners in cases of sudden death involving British Rail trains.

Mr. Freeman: The British Transport police in its present form is established by section 69 of the Transport Act 1962 and its jurisdiction stems from section 53 of the British Transport Commission Act 1949 as amended. Constables are appointed in accordance with the provisions of the British Transport Commission Act 1949 as amended by section 70 of the Transport Act 1962, section 43 of the British Transport Commission Act 1962 and section 25 of the British Railways Act 1978. Parallel provisions apply in Scotland. BTP constables have the same powers and duties as any other constable in England, Wales and Scotland while acting within their jurisdiction. Within that jurisdiction, investigations into sudden deaths are conducted on behalf of Her Majesty's coroners in the same way as those conducted by other police forces.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what facilities of a technical and engineering nature are available to the British Transport police when investigating cases of sudden death suspected of having being caused by mechanical failure.

Mr. Freeman: The British Transport police has full access to the forensic science service, Home Office pathologists, the Metropolitan police forensic laboratory, and the Laboratory of the Government Chemist. In addition, it can use each and every technical and engineering facility avialable within British Rail. Should independent advice not available from these organisations be necessary, the force is free to obtain that advice from the most appropriate source, including the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the practice of the British Transport police with regard to making use of engineering and mechanical reports in the control and possession of British Rail when submitting reports to Her Majesty's coroners in cases of sudden death.

Mr. Freeman: The practice of the British Transport police is the same as that of any Home Department police force when investigating sudden deaths. If any relevant report is held by British Rail, it will be sought and, if obtained, disclosed to Her Majesty's coroner. If such a report is not disclosed by British Rail, Her Majesty's coroner will be informed of its believed existence enabling him to exercise his power to order the appearance of witnesses to give evidence on the contents at the inquest should he deem it necessary.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether there is a complaints procedure similar to the police complaints procedure in respect of the activities of the British Transport police.

Mr. Freeman: Arrangements for dealing with public complaints concerning the British Transport police are identical to those for Home Department police forces in England and Wales, except that the final appellate authority in respect of the police disciplinary appeals is the Secretary of State for Transport and not the Home Secretary. Arrangements in Scotland are identical to those operating in other Scottish police forces.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether he will list the present members of the British Transport police committee, indicating which members are employed full time and part time;

(2) what are the primary duties and function of the British Transport police committee;

(3) which members of the British Transport police committee are now, or have been, employees of the British Railways Board.

Mr. Freeman: The present membership of the British Transport police committee is as follows:

Mr. J. C. P. Edmonds (Chairman)
Mr. D. Tunnicliffe
Mr. C. J. D. Driver
Mr. A. P. Watkinson
Dr. J. D. C. Prideaux
Sir Lawrence Byford CBE, QPM, DL, LLD

All the above mentioned members are current full-time members or employees of the British Railways Board except for Mr. Tunnicliffe and Sir Lawrence Byford. Membership of the committee is not, however, a full-time responsibility.

The principal duties and function of the committee are set out in paragraph 4*(g)* of the British Transport Police Force Scheme 1963, made under section 69 of the Transport Act 1962. These are primarily to supervise the administration of the force, to make recommendations to the British Railways and London Regional Transport boards on any matter concerning the force, to exercise the powers of the Railways Board under section 53 of the British Transport Commission Act 1949 as amended by section 70 of the Transport Act 1962 and to do on behalf and in the name of the Railways Board all other things which may be necessary for performing its functions under the BTP force scheme.

Speed Limiters

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to publish regulations requiring speed limiters to be fitted to heavy goods vehicles; and whether he will extend the requirement to vehicles already in service.

Mr. Chope: A major consultation exercise earlier this year has shown that there is overwhelming support for fitting speed limiters to new vehicles. This measure should significantly reduce both the number and severity of accidents involving speeding HGVs. I am therefore pleased to confirm that draft regulations are being published today, and they will require all new HGVs over 7·5 tonnes gross vehicle weight to be fitted with speed limiters as from 1 August 1992.

I am also proposing today to bring forward regulations which would require speed limiters to be fitted to at least the biggest and heaviest articulated vehicles first registered after 1 August 1988. There was firm support for this in the consultation exercise.

Speed limiters would pay for themselves in terms of fuel savings in just a few years and there would be environmental benefits, too.

Private Bills

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will complete his consultations on the 1988 report of the Joint Committee on Private Bill Procedure (HL Paper 97, HC625) insofar as it relates to transport matters.

Mr. Rifkind: We have completed our consideration of the responses to the Government's consultation document "Private Bills and New Procedures" (HMSO ref Cm. 1110) which set out proposals for a new order-making procedure to replace private Bills as the method by which railway, rapid transit and a wider range of harbour works would in future be authorised, as the Joint Committee recommended. Over 100 bodies or individuals responded and the majority supported the principle of the proposed reform, which would relieve Parliament of a significant, and growing, volume of private business relating to works projects.

The Government are persuaded, in the light of the generally favourable reaction to the proposals, that legislation should be introduced at the earliest opportunity to establish new order-making powers for railway, tramway and other rapid transit systems, and inland waterway works, and to extend the range of harbour orders. The procedures will be broadly similar to those outlined in paragraphs 14 and 15 and 23 to 29 of the consultation document except in regard to two important aspects.

For schemes of national significance we now propose that Parliament should have a role earlier in the procedure; issues of policy and principle would be considered by Parliament separately and in advance of public inquiries. This change will enable Parliament to debate and establish the principle of the very biggest schemes so that the subsequent public inquiry would be limited to considerations of more local and detailed aspects for which it is better suited. We see this as a more satisfactory arrangement. If Parliament does not like the scheme in principle neither promoters nor objectors would be put to the expense of a public inquiry. Moreover, public inquiries into schemes of national significance undertaken before the principle has been settled could become unmanageable and extremely long. Finally we were persuaded by the argument of some consultees that the rejection of a project by Parliament after a public inquiry might serve to undermine the public inquiry system.

Parliamentary consideration would take the form of a debate on a resolution moved by the Government in both Houses. Parliament would, of course, require sufficient information to make a decision. We expect that the draft order, including an assessment of the impact on the environment, would be available before a debate took place. This would provide the basis for justifying the project in broad terms.

Secondly, the Government have concluded that the proposal for local authorities to deal with a first tier of schemes of essentially local significance should be dropped. These schemes would instead be decided by Ministers or be delegated to persons appointed by the Secretary of State. Only a small number of respondents to the consultation document expressed enthusiasm for this proposal and we consider that too few schemes would be suitable for decisions by local authorities to warrant establishing a separate procedure to handle them.

The proposal to allow safety to be one of the factors in determining whether footpaths and bridleways should be stopped up or diverted—paragraphs 37 to 40 of the consultation document—will, in the light of the responses, be limited in the Bill to rights of way crossing railways.

The recommendation that other works projects which require a private Bill should also be dealt with by orders has been well received. We are still considering ways in which this might best be achieved, but we agree in principle that they should be dealt with outside Parliament.

The Government will continue to consult those directly affected by these proposals as detailed procedures are worked up. They are also in contact with a range of environmental and other interests who will wish to express views on these matters.

EMPLOYMENT

Unemployment

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current rate of unemployment in (a) the Cambridgeshire travel-to-work-area, (b) the Eastern region and (c) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Jackson: Only unadjusted unemployment figures are available down to travel-to-work-areas. In April 1991, the latest available date, the unadjusted unemployment rate was 3·7 per cent. in the Cambridge travel-to-work-area, 5·7 per cent. in the East Anglia region and 7·7 per cent. in the United Kingdom.

Careers Service

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the outcome of consultations between his Department and Berkshire county council with regard to the future of the careers service in Berkshire.

Mr. Jackson: My Department has received a response from the education committee of Berkshire county council to my consultation paper on the future of the careers service. I welcome the response. It is being considered prior to any decision being taken on the future of the careers service.

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress his Department has made in its consultation with local education authorities on the future of the careers service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: My Department has received a very high response from local education authorities to the consultation on the future of the careers service. All responses are being considered.

Job Clubs

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of the job club provisions in the area covered by Highlands and Islands Enterprise as at 1 April.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Employment Measures, Waveney

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on how much money his Department has contributed to retraining, training and employment schemes and job clubs and all other projects to reduce unemployment in Waveney in each of the past 10 years; and what his forward plans are for the next three years.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 14 May 1991]: The information is not available in the form requested. However, in the last 10 years the Employment Department has provided a range of opportunities to assist the unemployed in the Waveney area, including youth training, community programme, employment training, advisory services to jobseekers and job clubs. Although, because of changes to the content and collation of statistics, comparable figures are not available for previous years, in the last two financial years, 1989-90 and 1990-91, my Department has allocated a total of £842,735 million to the east midlands and eastern region to assist training and unemployment measures.

The Government are determined to ensure that unemployed people have the best possible advice and support to help them to find jobs and to provide special help where it is needed. On training, this year Government are spending more than two and half times in real terms the amount spent in 1978-79.

In the future training and enterprise provision will be delivered by the training and enterprise councils. Norfolk and Waveney TEC has been allocated a budget of £20 million in 1991-92 to enable it to plan and deliver training and enterprise provision in its area. The TEC will be paying particular attention to the needs of the unemployed.

Employment service offices in Waveney offer a full range of programmes and services to help unemployed people back to work, including advisory interviews, job club, job interview guarantee, travel to interview scheme, Restart courses and jobsearch seminars. The employment service Norfolk and Suffolk area office has a programme budget of £549,400 in 1991-92.

DEFENCE

Cluster Bombs

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of bombs dropped by United Kingdom forces in the Gulf conflict were cluster bombs.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: About 7 per cent.

Nuclear Weapons (Transport)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to commission a study into the transportation of nuclear weapons through urban areas in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No; I am fully satisfied with our arrangements for the transport of nuclear weapons.

Procurement Contractors

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations of facilities of United Kingdom-based defence procurement contractors paid £5 million or more for equipment by the Ministry of Defence in 1988-89.

Mr. Alan Clark: This information is a matter for the companies concerned.

Missile Technology Control Regime

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reassessment he has made of the work of (a) the co-ordinating committee on export controls or (b) the missile technology control regime following the conflict in the Gulf.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Gulf conflict has underlined the importance of the work of the missile technology control regime in preventing the proliferation of ballistic missiles. As to the co-ordinating committee for multinational export controls, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 28 March 1991, at column 571.

Sea King Helicopters

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to the possibility of chartering civil aircraft to transport Sea King helicopters to Bangladesh.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: RFA Fort Grange was considered by the Overseas Development Administration to represent the most cost-effective way of deploying and operating RN Sea King helicopters in aid of Bangladesh. The Fort Grange will provide a highly flexible operating base for both the Sea Kings and the six Royal Marine rigid raider boats which she is also carrying.

"Options for Change"

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the "Options for Change" study will have any further effects on the RAF beyond those announced on 10 May.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Arms Transfer

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 293, whether he supports the inclusion of non-lethal defence equipment on a United Nations arms transfer register.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall consider this question in the light of any relevant recommendations by the United Nations expert study group when its report to the Secretary General is circulated.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make it his policy to place in the Library a declassified copy of the report by the United Nations experts study group on measures to promote arms transfer transparency.

Mr. Alan Clark: When the Secretary General circulates the report I will be happy to place a copy in the Library.

Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has re-assessed the inspection and verification procedures of the non-proliferation treaty following the conflict in the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The need to strengthen the NPT regime is kept under contant review.

Overseas Development Agency

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money he has charged the Overseas Development Agency for the use of military resources in relief operations in (a) Turkey and (b) northern Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Charges have not yet been made, but the latest estimate for the cost to date of military assistance to the ODA is around £5 million. It is not possible to apportion costs between Turkey and northern Iraq.

RAF Squadrons

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what proposals he has to provide alternative postings within the Ministry of Defence to personnel from Nos. 16, 15, 92 and 20 Squadrons; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what proposals he has to offer early retirement or voluntary redundancy packages to personnel from Nos. 16, 15, 19, 92 and 20 Squadrons; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether he envisages having to compel any of the personnel of Nos. 16, 15, 19, 92 and 20 Squadrons to become redundant; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what discussions he has with local housing authorities about the future housing requirements of personnel from Nos. 16, 15, 19, 92 and 20 Squadrons.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no plans to make any of the personnel of Nos. 15, 16, 19, 20 or 92 Squadrons redundant, nor to offer them special terms for premature voluntary release. Squadron personnel will be posted to other units in the normal way. There is no need to hold discussions with local authorities about the future housing requirements of these personnel.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cambodia

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any planning for the deployment of a United Nations military force in Cambodia has taken place.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We understand that the United Nations secretariat has been working on preliminary arrangements for the implementation of all the provisions of the draft comprehensive settlement document, including those relating to the military aspects.

Mr. Ishtiaq Ahmed

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Ishtiaq Ahmed, date of birth 1 January 1974, reference IMM/A4162, applied to the post in Islamabad for entry clearance to the United Kingdom; and when a decision is to be taken on his application.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In accordance with the guidelines on the handling of representations by Members of Parliament in immigration cases, issued to Members on 14 December 1988, I have referred the question to the correspondence unit of the migration and visa department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The hon. Member will receive a reply from the unit as soon as possible.

Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council on 13 and 14 May.

Mr. Garel-Jones: A meeting of the Foreign Affairs Council took place in Brussels on 13 and 14 May. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council agreed on a 60 million ecu package of emergency assistance to help those suffering in Bangladesh. The aid will be financed by bilateral contributions from member states.

At the request of the United Kingdom, the Council discussed proposals for strengthening EC-Turkey relations. It instructed the Committee of Permanent Representatives to examine the proposals in more detail and to report to the Foreign Affairs Council in July.

The Council discussed the situation in Yugoslavia. It decided that the visit by the Prime Minister of Luxembourg and the President of the Commission, which was agreed by the informal European Council in Luxembourg, should take place soon.

After a brief discussion by the Council, the Commission agreed to continue funding for the international fund for Ireland.

EC and EFTA Ministers met on 13 May to review progress in the negotiations for a European economic area, which will extend the single market to the EFTA countries. My hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department of Trade and Industry represented the United Kingdom. Substantial progress was made on the outstanding issues and EC and EFTA Ministers confirmed their commitment to conclude the negotiations before the summer. They agreed a comprehensive joint declaration setting out the main elements of the European economic area. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

The ninth EC-Israel co-operation council on 14 May reviewed economic co-operation between the European Community and Israel. EC Ministers raised the appointment of a Commission representative in the occupied territories and the question of EC participation in a peace conference.

Political Union

Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a statement on the outcome of the ministerial meeting of the inter-governmental conference on political union on 13 and 14 May.

Mr. Garel-Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I attended the ministerial meeting of the inter-governmental conference on political union on 13 and 14 May. The meeting discussed presidency proposals on social policy, cohesion and European citizenship.

In discussion on social policy my right hon. Friend stressed that in the United Kingdom's view the existing treaty struck a just balance between the scope for Community action and the diversity of national practices and customs and that we saw no need for any change.

Spain, supported by other southern member states, argued that further measures to promote cohesion were necessary as the Community embarked on a new stage of political and economic integration. We, together with other northern member states, took the view that the IGC was not an appropriate forum to open a discussion on financial and budgetary issues, which would be raised in the context of next year's review of Community finances.

In the discussion on citizenship, many member states expressed the view that any new text should go no further on rights of free movement and residence than existing legal provisions. We made it clear that there should be no question of any concept of European citizenship cutting across member states' own nationality legislation.

Discussion of these and other aspects of the inter-governmental conference on political union will continue at future meetings of special representatives and Ministers. A further ministerial session will be held on 17-18 June. The inter-governmental conference will be on the agenda of the European Council to be held on 28 and 29 June.

Indo-Chinese Refugees

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the fourth meeting of the steering committee set up by the 1989 international conference on Indo-Chinese refugees.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The fourth meeting of the steering committee created by the international conference on Indo-Chinese refugees met in Geneva on 30 April and 1 May. The joint United Kingdom and Hong Kong delegation drew attention to the worsening situation in the colony caused by a sharp increase in the number of Vietnamese migrants arriving in Hong Kong, coupled with a low number of departures. Copies of the final statement are being placed in the Library of the House. The statement reaffirms the strong commitment of participants to implement the comprehensive plan of action of June 1989 in its entirety, and in particular that non-refugees are not eligible for resettlement and must return to their country of origin. The British Government fully support the Hong Kong Government's efforts to resolve this intractable problem through the full and balanced implementation of the comprehensive plan of action. The British Government intend to consult urgently with the principal countries concerned over alternative and additional measures for accelerating the return of non-refugees to the country of origin, which remains crucial if an effective and durable solution to the problem is to be found.

SCOTLAND

GPs' Contracts

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the higher and lower targets for primary immunisation, pre-school booster immunisation and cervical cytology set in the contract for general medical practitioners which came into force on 1 April 1990; what percentage of general medical practitioners have (a) now achieved and (b) not achieved these targets; what were the comparable figures in March 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The higher target for primary immunisation—that is, of children aged two and under—and for pre-school booster for children aged five and under is 90 per cent; and the lower target for these two categories is 70 per cent. The higher target for cervical cytology is 80 per cent., and the lower 50 per cent.

The percentages of general medical practitioners reaching target levels as at 1 October 1990, in comparison with the position as at 1 April 1990, are shown in the table. The figures show that considerable progress has been made since the new GP contract was introduced on 1 April 1990 and that the incentives provided by the Government under the contract are indeed producing results.

Public Libraries

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to allocate resources towards the promotion of public library services for blind and partially sighted people; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The allocation of resources to public library services is not a matter for the Secretary of State, but for individual local authorities—usually the district and islands councils, but Highland, Borders and Dumfries and Galloway regional councils in their respective areas—which have a statutory duty to secure the provision of adequate library facilities for all persons resident in their area.

Right to Buy

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research has been commissioned into the effects of the right-to-buy legislation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since the right-to-buy legislation was introduced in 1980, the Scottish Office has commissioned three research projects into its effects. The first, "Council House Sales in Scotland", was published in 1985 and is available in the Library. The other two projects, "The Right to Buy—Survey of Tenants" and "The Right to Buy—Survey of Purchasers", are still in progress and will be published in due course. Other agencies, including Scottish Homes, have also commissioned research projects about aspects of the right to buy.

Council Housing

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the percentage of council housing stock relative to the total housing stock, including private and rental, for each district council.

Mr. Lang: The latest available information, which relates to 31 March 1989, is set out in the table.

Bus Companies

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were (a) the numbers of buses owned, (b) the numbers of staff employed and (c) the net book value of the assets of the Scottish Bus Group subsidiary, Eastern Scottish, at the time of its sale; and what were the net proceeds from the sale.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following information relates to the position as at 22 April 1990:

(a) 391.
(b) 1,119.
(c) £6,574,000. The net assets are stated on an historical cost basis, with the exception of heritable land and buildings which were re-valued on a current use basis.

Sale prices for the subsidiaries of the Scottish Bus Group will be made public only after privatisation of all subsidiaries has been completed.

Islay

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if there are any plans to designate the Isle of Islay an environmentally sensitive area; what consultations are under way to review the present arrangements; what consultations are under way or planned by the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland and other interested parties; when he expects consultations to conclude; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend has no plans to designate the Isle of Islay as an environmentally sensitive area. He is, however, currently reviewing the present arrangements for such areas and will, if necessary, honour his statutory obligation to consult the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland and the Countryside Commission for Scotland on any proposal to change these arrangements flowing from the review.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the maximum net weekly incomes that would qualify for a local tax rebate in each property band in every local authority in Scotland if the exemplifications recently published by him applied with 100 per cent. rebates of those on income support and a 15 per cent. taper applied for (a) a married couple with two children under 11 years, (b) a married couple with no children and (c) a pensioner couple aged 60 to 74 years.

Miss Widdecombe: I have been asked to reply.

Estimates of rebates under the council tax cannot be provided, since the detailed arrangements have yet to be determined.

Organisation	Grant paid in 1990-91 (£)	Grant likely to be paid in 1991-92 (£)
Section 9 grants
Age Concern (Scotland)	47,700	45,100

Scottish Spina Bifida Association	14,200	10,200

In addition, grants to 10 organisations were not renewed in 1991-92. Two section 9 grants were not renewed. These grants are based on three-year blocks of funding and are subject to renewal only in exceptional circumstances. Of the eight section 10(1) grants which were not renewed, five were for time-limited projects which had come to an end. In the other cases, one organisation did not submit an application for grant in 1991-92, one organisation was no longer representative following a reduction in membership and one organisation had largely completed the development work for which it was being funded.

The numbers of grants given to organisations, and grant which ceased, in each of the past five years are as follows:

Year	Number of grants	Number of grants which ceased

1986-87	15	0

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Salmon

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the causes of the decline in rod-caught salmon during the 1990 season.

Mr. Curry: Only provisional rod data for 1990 are so far available. I am aware of reports that in some cases rod catches were lower than in previous years. The distribution and variation in catches is being analysed by scientists in the Fisheries Departments and by the National Rivers Authority. It is too early to draw firm conclusions. Year on year fluctuations in catches of migratory fish are normal and can be the result of a number of factors, including low water levels due to drought and higher than normal levels of natural mortality. It is not yet known whether there are any other abnormal factors in relation to the 1990 catches.

Tuberculosis

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether his Ministry has carried out post mortems on rats found on farms where a herd outbreak of tuberculosis occurred to establish whether the rats themselves were carriers of the disease; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement about the work his Ministry is carrying out into investigating the possibility that rats might be vectors of tuberculosis, passing the disease on to cattle;

(3) if he will list all the mammals which have been investigated by his Ministry as possible vectors of tuberculosis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Rats are not examined as part of an investigation into a cattle herd breakdown. Past studies have looked at the possibility of rats and other wildlife being involved in the transmission of tuberculosis to cattle. This work was reviewed by Professor Dunnett in his report on badgers and bovine tuberculosis in 1986. No actual lesions have been revealed, other than in deer, and it has been concluded that where visible lesions are absent infected animals are not likely to be infectious. Appendix 8 of Professor Dunnett's report lists those species examined and information on wildlife examined is published annually in the reports on bovine tuberculosis in Badgers which are available in the Library of the House.

NATIONAL FINANCE

EC (Finance Ministers)

Mr. Conway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest informal meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Ministers.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Community met informally on 10 to 12 May. The Governor of the Bank of England and I represented the United Kingdom.

Discussion of economic and monetary union focused on the content of stage 2 and the transition to stage 3. Differing views emerged on a number of issues and, in particular, the date for the establishment of a European system of central banks.

I made it clear that the United Kingdom was not prepared to commit itself to moving to stage 3 without a further vote by the House of Commons in the future. There was some suggestion that it might be possible to meet the United Kingdom's concern on this point. I took the view that this was a constructive step in our direction but that the IGC was still at an early stage in negotiations and that many issues, including the content of stage 2, would have to be resolved before this question could be addressed in detail.

A proposal from the Presidency setting out frameworks for the approximation of VAT and excise duties in the Community was also discussed. I argued that the approximation of VAT rates at Community level was not necessary for the removal of fiscal frontiers in the single market and I also emphasised the importance to the United Kingdom of continuing to apply our existing zero rates. In the discussion of excise duties, I argued for high minimum duty rates or effective restrictions to take account of the important health and social concerns attached to alcohol and tobacco. In both discussions other Ministers also expressed their different concerns and no agreements were reached.

The President of the Commission gave an account of his approach towards future financing issues in the Community over lunch. In a brief discussion of aid for Bangladesh, I urged that aid should be given through national channels and through the Community's existing budgetary resources.

Interest Rates

Mr. Lawson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing, for each quarter from the first quarter of 1977 to the first quarter of 1991 inclusive, the total United Kingdom short-term interest rate, using (a) the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments and (b) the retail prices index as the deflator.

Mr. Lawson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing, for each month from January 1986 to the present (a) the average three-month interbank rate, (b) the average three-month interbank rate in real terms, using the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments as the deflator and (c) the percentage growth in bank and building society lending over the same month in the previous year.

Tobacco Taxation

Sir David Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress is being made towards the harmonisation of tobacco taxation within the European Community; and what effect this will have on the current level of tobacco taxation in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 16 May 1991]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave today to my hon. Friend the Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham (Mr. Conway).

There has been no agreement on tobacco tax rates and the Government view remains that centrally imposed tax harmonisation is unnecessary for completion of the single market. The United Kingdom remains free to set its own duty rates.

Civil Research and Development

Mr. Wray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, further to his reply of 8 May, Official Report, column 461, to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Provan, what are the comparable figures of per capita spending on civil research and development in 1989 for Canada, Belgium, France, Germany, Japan and Sweden.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 16 May 1991]: The information is not available in the form requested. Relevant information currently available for these countries relating to the years 1984 to 1990 is published in table 6 of the OECD publication "Main Science and Technology Indicators 1990(2)", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Written Answers to Questions

TRANSPORT

East-West Trunk Route

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the terms of reference under which Acer Consultants Ltd. has been appointed to consider the alignment of an east-west trunk route for the A5 to M11 (Stansted) section.

Mr. Chope: I have placed a copy of the consultant's brief in the Library today.

Cars (Carbon Canisters)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to require the fitting of large carbon canisters to cars; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Government are keen to ensure that there is a substantial reduction in evaporative emissions from petrol engined cars. From the end of next year all new cars will have to be fitted with carbon canisters as standard equipment to achieve this reduction. We are working on further measures which will probably involve minimising evaporative emissions while cars are running or being refuelled. The fitting of larger carbon canisters to cars is one technical means of achieving this. We also hope that the European Commission will soon make long-overdue proposals to minimise evaporative emissions in the petrol distribution network.

Seat Belts

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been central Government expenditure on publicising (a) the law requiring children in the back of cars to wear seat belts where fitted and (b) changes in the law about adults wearing seat belts when rear seat passengers.

Mr. Chope: Government expenditure to date on publicising the law requiring children in the back of cars to wear seat belts, where fitted, has been £748,000. We intend to mount a campaign to publicise the proposed changes in the law about adults wearing seat belts when rear seat passengers, subject to the outcome of debate on legislation currently before Parliament. But to date no expenditure on publicity has been incurred.

Bus Companies

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of registered bus companies for each year for 1979 to 1990.

Mr. Freeman: The approximate numbers of bus and coach companies are as follows:

December
1979	5,600
1980	5,600
1981	5,500
1982	5,600
1983	6,000
1984	5,800
March
1986	5,800
1987	5,900
1988	5,900
1989	6,000
1990	6,200

These figures are based on the total number of PSV operators' licences issued by the traffic area offices. There is considerable uncertainty about the number of smaller operators because of the high rate at which such operators enter and leave the industry.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he received the final report from W. S. Atkins on the evaluation of the schemes for the high-speed rail link; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that W. S. Atkins expects to deliver its final report to British Rail shortly, and that British Rail will then send copies to us.

Geomagnetism

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the value of the work done for his Department on (a) geomagnetism and (b) his assessment of the future importance of geomagnetism studies to his Department.

Mr. McLoughlin: Information on magnetic variation is used in the preparation of charts for marine and civil aviation use. The Hydrographer of the Navy is responsible for providing information about magnetic variation for marine navigation purposes and the Civil Aviation Authority undertakes in conjunction with Ordnance Survey the production of civil aviation charts. To this end the CAA requires only a forecast of the general trend of magnetic variation 18 months ahead. No work has been done on geomagnetism for the Department of Transport, as geomagnetic studies are not of importance to the Department other than to the extent outlined.

Pedestrians (Fatal Injuries)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give an age breakdown of pedestrians fatally injured in road accidents for each year since 1980.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many pedestrians were fatally injured in road accidents for the years: 1970, 1975, 1980, 1985 and 1990.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Pedestrians killed in road accidents: Great Britain

Year	Number
1970	2,925
1975	2,344
1980	1,941
1985	1,789
[1]1990	1,636

[1] Figures for 1990 are provisional.

Speed Limiters

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has considered a requirement to fit speed limiters to motor cars; and whether his Department will make an assessment of the effects of fitting speed limiters to all cars in respect of (a) emissions of air pollutants and (b) road safety.

Mr. Chope: Our top priority has been to require coaches and HGVs to be fitted with speed limiters. There are no plans to extend this requirement to cars.

Flight Training

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to bring in regulations to allow flight training to take place other than at United Kingdom licensed airfields; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The statutory responsibility for the safety regulation of United Kingdom civil aviation rests with the Civil Aviation Authority. I understand that the CAA has no immediate plans to propose regulatory changes which allow flight training to take place other than at United Kingdom licensed airfields. The CAA has, however, recently received a request from the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association that this requirement be relaxed in the case of certain smaller aerodromes operating light aircraft training types. This request is being examined.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost of implementing the Civil Aviation Authority's regulations concerning fire cover for flight training; if there are any plans to amend the regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Currently the need to provide adequate rescue and fire fighting facilities is part of the Civil Aviation Authority's requirement for the issue of an aerodrome licence. Fire cover is related to the proposed aerodrome usage and it is, therefore, not possible to isolate the cost element associated solely with flight training.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of fire have been reported at aerodromes licensed for the purpose of flight training; how many fatalities have occurred in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The issue by the Civil Aviation Authority of an aerodrome licence permits various activities including flight training. I understand that the authority has information only on incidents attended by the rescue and fire-fighting services and that these are not necessarily incidents where fire has been reported. The information is therefore not available in the format requested.

Train Deaths

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the composition, independence and time constraints authorised for Her Majesty's railway inspectorate's inquiry into the pattern of falls from moving trains; and when they are due to report.

Mr. Roger Freeman: The Health and Safety Executive's investigation into falls from moving trains, which the railway inspectorate will be leading, will also involve the scientific, technological and statistical sections of the executive. The statutory functions of the Health and Safety Commission and Executive guarantees the independence of the investigation. This will be a complex and detailed investigation, but I hope very much that the report will be completed by the end of the year.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the correlation in his illustrative tables on the council tax between the percentage over standard spending assessment and the average value of homes in the district giving the increase in band D property for each 10 per cent. increase in SSA depending on whether the average value home is in band A, B, C or D;

(2) further to his answer on 29 April, Official Report, column 13, if he will assess the increase in council tax in each band for each 1 per cent. increased spending over standard spending assessment for a council most of whose properties are in (a) band A, (b) band B, (c) band C and (d) band D;

(3) further to his answer on 29 April, Official Report, column 13, if he will give the council tax for band B property in the illustrated figures for a standard level of service and the variations in the figures for bands A, B, and G in areas in which the majority of properties in a district are in (a) band A, (b) band B, (c) bands C and D and (d) band D;

(4) further to his answer on 29 April, Official Report, column 13, if he will list the size of increase in council tax for each percentage point of increased spending above the standard spending assessment, up to 40 per cent. above SSA, for Grimsby; and what would be the figures if the average value of households in Grimsby were in (i) band A, (ii) band B, (iii) band C or (iv) band D of the tables published to illustrate his proposals;

(5) what is the effect on the level of the proposed council tax of the average value of properties in the district; and if he will give illustrative examples of the differences in level of tax, with all other factors held constant, where the majority of houses in a district are (a) in band A, (b) in band B, (c) in band C, (d) in band D, (e) in band E, (f) in band F and (g) in band G.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 9 May Official Report, column 548.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each county (a) the total revenue support grant distributed to district councils in that county plus grants distributed to the relevant county council, (b) on a per head basis, (c) those figures for the previous year and (d) the percentage difference between the figures for each year and ranked according to the levels of grant per head.

These figures exclude specific grants paid to county councils, as specific grants for 1991-92 are not yet available. Amounts per head are shown in terms of amounts per head of relevant population for the year. Differences between columns (5) and (6) therefore reflect changes in the sum of the districts' relevant populations between 1990-91 and 1991-92. The figures are ranked according to revenue support grant per head in 1991-92.

Households

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the number of households nationally and regionally, the numbers in each type of household as defined in the family expenditure survey and the number he expects not to contribute to the council tax.

Mr. Key: Liability for the council tax will fall to the occupier of a property. It will be up to that person to decide how the bill will be shared if there are other adults in the household. It is not possible to estimate how many will contribute in this way.

The Government propose that householders on income support or equivalent levels of income will be entitled to 100 per cent. rebates under the council tax. They will make no contribution to the council tax.

The table shows the most recent estimates of the numbers of households in each region together with the percentage of one-adult—aged 18 or over—two-adult, and three or more adult households.

Architectural Competitions

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table listing (a) the architectural competitions for public buildings organised by his Department since 1979, (b) the names of the winning firm of architects in each case, (c) the names of the jury panel in each case and (d) which buildings were erected.

Mr. Heseltine: I am arranging for copies of this table to be placed in the Library of the House.

Poll Tax

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the most recent guidelines given to local authorities regarding the payment of poll tax by those serving in the Gulf.

Mr. Key: My Department wrote to local authorities on 16 May with further advice on this issue. A copy of the advice is in the Library.

Derelict Land Grant

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money has been spent through derelict land grant in each of the last four years in Teesside; and which projects have been supported.

Mr. Yeo: The information requested is as follows:

Rents-to-Mortgages Scheme

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many inquiries from Basildon new town tenants have been received regarding the rents-to-mortgages scheme since the announcement of its introduction in autumn 1990; how many sales through rents-to-mortgages have been achieved to date; what representations he has received regarding the progress of rent-to-mortgages scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: There were more than 900 initial inquiries following the announcement of the rents-to-mortgages scheme in Basildon last autumn. Since its official launch in February there have been 180 firm applications and the first sale is expected to be completed next month. There have been no recent representations about the progress of the scheme, which is being monitored carefully.

Community Charge

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will withdraw "Community Charge Practice Note 25" as it relates to people who change addresses within one local authority charging area.

Mr. Key: My Department has ceased production of all the community charge practice notes. The issue of practice notes on the community charge is now a function of the Institute of Revenues Rating and Valuation.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to issue the planning policy guidance note on sites for wind, tidal and other alternative energy plants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning to my hon. Friend the Member for Norfolk, North-West (Mr. Bellingham) on 28 March, Official Report, columns 543-44.

Solar Heating

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to make a condition of domestic planning consent the installation of solar panels in all new dwellings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: I have no plans to advise local planning authorities to impose conditions on all residential planning permissions requiring the installation of solar panels.

Child Abuse

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many social workers with specialist training in child abuse are employed by each local authority in England and Wales.

Mr. Key: This information is not held centrally.

"Kill the Messenger"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will acquire for his Department's library a copy of Sir Bernard Ingham's "Kill the Messenger".

Mr. Heseltine: No.

Buildings (Environmental Assessment)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the environmental assessment method programme launched by the Building Research Establishment.

Mr. Yeo: The Building Research Establishment environmental assessment method—BREEAM—was developed by the BRE in association with private sector interests and launched in July 1990. It is a method by which the environmental impact of new office buildings can be assessed against defined criteria at design stage and, where appropriate, improved. The scheme is voluntary and its operation self-financing. I welcome this collaborative initiative by the Building Research Establishment and the firms associated with it.

Public Sanitary Facilities

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance is given to local authorities on the cleaning up of public sanitary facilities.

Mr. Baldry: None, but they have an obligation to ensure that public sanitary conveniences, whether provided by themselves or others, are not prejudicial to health or a nuisance.

Brandon Estate, Southwark

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why the Estate Action bid by Southwark council for the Brandon estate was rejected;

(2) if he will reconsider the application of Southwark council for Estate Action funding for the Brandon estate.

Mr. Yeo: The Department did not offer Estate Action support for 1991-92 to Southwark council towards the cost of its proposed works on the Brandon estate as the application failed to satisfy the objectives of the programme. The Department would be willing to consider a new bid for this estate in a future year, but approval would depend on the quality of the proposed scheme in competition with other bids received.

Estate Action

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the criteria for awarding Estate Action funding.

Mr. Yeo: Estate Action resources are allocated on the basis of published ministerial guidelines. The detailed criteria applicable to 1992-93 will be published shortly.

Right to Buy

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 18 April, Official Report, column 227, to the hon. Member for Kingswood (Mr. Hayward), how much discount, in cash terms, has been granted as a result of these sales under right-to-buy legislation.

Mr. Yeo: Information on the value of discount allowed under right to buy is not separately identified. Between October 1980, when the right-to-buy scheme was introduced, and December 1990 about £14 billion was granted as discount to all purchasers of local authority dwellings in England.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to the impact of the European Commission's report about quality assurance in the management of radioactive waste in the European Community on United Kingdom policy on nuclear waste.

Mr. Baldry: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the report by the European Commission entitled "Objectives, standards and criteria for radioactive waste disposal in the European Community"—EUR 12570. The report was produced by a working group on which my Department was represented. I fully agree with the European Council conclusions that the report was a good assessment of the current situation for radioactive waste disposal.

Dog Registration

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he now considers it necessary to introduce a dog registration scheme by which dog ownership is linked to the animals owned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The Environmental Protection Act 1990 contains a package of measures to enforce the requirement that dogs wear a collar and identifying tag when in a public place; and to ensure that stray dogs are collected up. We remain of the view that the package provides a practical and effective solution to the problems caused by irresponsible owners and that registration would be costly, bureaucratic and ineffective.

Council Tax

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people in the North Devon district council area would benefit from reduced payments under his council tax proposals.

Mr. Key [holding answer 15 May 1991]: Information about the effect of the council tax on individuals is not available. The tables issued on 23 April show the effects on households of the council tax as compared with headline community charges in 1991-92.

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the estimated cost of using the district valuers and their staff to undertake the valuation of properties for the proposed council tax;

(2) how many estate agents will be employed to undertake the valuation of properties for the proposed council tax; how these estate agents will be chosen; and what is his estimate of the cost of employing them.

Mr. Key [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Paragraph 2.29 of the consultation paper "A new tax for local government" set out the Government's proposals for the initial banding of properties. We are presently considering the best way of combining Valuation Office expertise and that of private sector valuers, with a view to enabling all domestic properties to be placed into seven bands by value, and the council tax to be in place by April 1993.

Housing (Southwark)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how long it will take under the current housing reference system for the London borough of Southwark to receive an actual management and maintenance allowance equivalent to the target management and maintenance allowance.

Mr. Yeo: [holding answer 17 May 1991]: Our aim is to move progressively towards a system of targeted housing revenue account subsidy allowances for management and maintenance based upon an assessment of need rather than on historic spend. This will involve a redistribution of resources between local housing authorities. The rate of progress of introducing targeted allowances will depend on annual decisions about the overall provision for allowances and will be subject to consultation with local housing authorities and their associations.

PRIME MINISTER

European Monetary Union

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the recent proposals by the President of the European Comission for a delayed consideration of entry into European monetary union.

The Prime Minister: As my right hon. Friend the Chancellor told the House on 24 January, we cannot accept any changes to the treaty of Rome that would bind us to move to a single currency or a single monetary policy without a separate decision by the United Kingdom Government and Parliament. The suggestion made at the informal ECOFIN on 12 May is a step in the right direction. But there remain many issues to be discussed in the economic and monetary union intergovernmental conference before a final agreement can be reached.

International Arms Transfers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if he will seek a debate on the United Nations on the United Nations Publication, "Topical Paper 3—Transparency in International Arms Transfers".

The Prime Minister: We are in favour of greater transparency in international arms transfers. On 8 April I proposed the establishment of a United Nations register of arms sales. We are discussing this with members of the Security Council, the Twelve and others. We fully expect it to be the subject of debate at the next general assembly.

Special Forces

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Prime Minister if it has now become the policy of Her Majesty's Government to reveal details of the operations of United Kingdom special forces.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 17 May 1991 at column 281.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Non-audit Fees

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what draft statutory instrument he has circulated on disclosure of non-audit fees paid by companies to their auditors; to whom it has been circulated; and with what closing date.

Mr. Redwood: Officials have circulated a draft of possible regulations to be made under section 390B of the Companies Act 1985, as inserted by section 121 of the Companies Act 1989. The draft was sent to the major professional accountancy bodies with an interest; to the larger accountancy firms; to the Law Society and the Law Society of Scotland; to the CBI; and to a number of other persons who asked to see it. Comments were invited by 16 May, or shortly thereafter.

Liquidators

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will propose legislation under which anyone acting as a liquidator will be required to publish financial information about his business.

Mr. Redwood: I have no plans to do so.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times since 1986, his Department has taken action to remove company liquidators.

Mr. Redwood: The Secretary of State has the power to remove a liquidator only where he made the initial appointment following an application by an official receiver. Since 1986 the Secretary of State has not removed any liquidators whom he has appointed.

Auditors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what representations he has received from shareholders expressing dissatisfaction with the work and standards of United Kingdom auditors;

(2) what representations he has received from company directors expressing dissatisfaction with the work and standards of United Kingdom auditors.

Mr. Redwood: My Department receives a variety of such representations.

Official Receiver (Investigations)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to introduce legislation to require the results of the Official Receiver's investigations into companies to be published.

Mr. Redwood: The Secretary of State has no plans to introduce legislation to require the Official Receiver to publish the results of his investigations. Under the provisions of the Insolvency Act 1986, the Official Receiver has a statutory duty to investigate the affairs of companies in compulsory liquidation and report prima facie evidence of criminal misconduct to officials at Insolvency Service headquarters. He also has a duty under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 to report unfitted conduct by directors of companies in compulsory liquidation to the Secretary of State. The Official Receiver is required to make a report to creditors and contributories on the proceedings in the liquidation and the state of the company's affairs and to file a copy of that report in court.

Companies Inspectors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, further to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 580, he will indicate which of the inspectors have come from the auditing firms criticised by his Department's inspectors.

Mr. Redwood: Of the six cases listed, two inspectors come from accountancy firms criticised in reports of inspectors published since June 1979.

Name of Inspector	Name of Firm	Published Inspectors Report	Date of Publication
Mr. J. White FCA	KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock	Orbit Holdings Limited	23 December 1981
		Alexander Howden Holdings plc	29 August 1990
Mr. J. K. Heywood FCA	Price Waterhouse	Norwest Holst Limited	23 June 1982
		Ramor Investments Limited	22 March 1983

Insolvency Practitioners

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many liquidators/receivers have been appointed by the insolvency service.

Mr. Redwood: The Secretary of State has power to appoint liquidators in compulsory liquidations and trustees in bankruptcy following application by an Official Receiver. Statistics do not differentiate between liquidators and trustees, but during the year to 31 March 1990, a total of 2,081 appointments were made, and in the year to 31 March 1991 there were 2,356.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints have been lodged with him or the Insolvency Service about the conduct of insolvency practitioners.

Mr. Redwood: Statistics relating to the number of complaints received by the Secretary of State or the Insolvency Service are not kept. However, I can confirm that, in addition to ministerial correspondence, the Insolvency Service receives correspondence from interested parties of companies in liquidation or receivership, or of bankrupts where some dissatisfaction concerning the practitioner is voiced.

Bankruptcies

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give details of companies (a) in the west midlands and (b) in north Staffordshire which have gone bankrupt in each of the last nine months.

Mr. Redwood: This information could not be provided without disproportionate cost.

Clothing Industry

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact on jobs in the knitwear and hosiery industry of state intervention in Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia and the lifting of import controls on goods from these countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: At present, in almost half the multi-fibre arrangement knitwear and hosiery categories, no quota limits are imposed on imports from the three countries and in nearly all the remaining categories the quotas are either little used or not used at all. It is not therefore anticipated that trade liberalisation is likely to have a significant effect on knitwear and hosiery in the United Kingdom.

Geomagnetism

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what approaches he has had from the British Geological Survey on geomagnetism; and what response he has given.

Mr. Redwood: A number of approaches were made to officials in the early part of last year. While sympathetic to the requirement for a continued programme of regular monitoring of the earth's geomagnetic field, the response given was that the programme was of marginal relevance to the work of the Department and that support could not therefore be provided.

"Kill the Messenger"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will acquire for his Department's library a copy of Sir Bernard Ingham's "Kill the Messenger".

Mr. Lilley: A copy is being acquired by the departmental library and information services.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from industry on the proposed changes to the ECGD; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: A number of exporters, representatives of trade associations and representatives of the ECGD's staff have written to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State about the proposed privatisation of the short-term business of the ECGD.

European Coal and Steel Community

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the position taken by his Department on the future of the European Coal and Steel Community treaty which was discussed at the meeting of the EC Industry Council on 29 April.

Mr. Sainsbury: My noble Friend the Minister for Industry welcomed the initiative the European Commission had taken in looking at the future of the European Coal and Steel Community treaty. He indicated that the Government's preferred solution was an immediate termination of the treaty so that coal and steel would be governed by the EEC treaty in the same way as other industries. While the Government were disappointed that the Commission had not taken the same view, they welcomed the Commission's view that a much less interventionist interpretation and application of the treaty was necessary pending a transition to the EC regime in 2002. To this end, my noble Friend asked the Commission to set out a timetable for the necessary work and to report regularly to the Council on the results.

ENERGY

Iraqi Nuclear Materials

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether his Department, the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority or the nuclear installations inspectorate was (a) asked for or (b) offered any assistance to the International Atomic Energy Agency in developing appropriate methods of taking custody and verifying inventories of Iraqi nuclear materials before 17 May, as mandated by United Nation Security Council resolution 687 of 2 April.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No formal request has been received from the IAEA or formal offer made by the UK authorities in relation to the matters raised in the question. However, there have been a number of discussions with the agency on points relating to the implementation of UN Security Council resolution 687. The agency's board of governors held a special meeting on the matter on 6 May.

Plutonium (Transport)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer of 25 April, Official Report, column 497, if he will list all the options being considered for the transportation of plutonium that has been reprocessed to its country of origin; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: This is a matter for British Nuclear Fuels plc which is currently considering the transport options for returning the plutonium arising from reprocessing spent fuel from overseas.

Trawsfynydd Nuclear Power Station

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer of 25 April, Official Report, column 497, when he expects to receive agreement from the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate to restart the two reactors at Trawsfynydd nuclear power station; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In my reply to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan) on 14 March, Official Report, columns 634-35, I explained that the shutting down of the two reactors at Trawsfynydd nuclear power station was an operational matter for Nuclear Electric plc, and that the reactors would not be returned to power until the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate is satisfied with NE's safety case for such action. NE's preparation of the safety case is continuing.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment has been made (a) by his Department and (b) by the energy technology support unit of the feasibility and potential benefits of the interspacing of trees grown for bio-fuels and aero-generator wind power machines at suitable sites in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Moynihan: No detailed assessment of the potential benefits of interspacing trees and aero-generators has been made. Basic principles dictate that the ground around wind generators should be as smooth as possible. The extra roughness arising from trees would be detrimental to the efficiency of the wind turbines. Wind farms are therefore likely to be on land which is otherwise used for normal agricultural purposes.

Energy Market

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what regulations and economic incentives he proposes to introduce to intervene in the energy market.

Mr. Wakeham: The Government work to promote the operation of market forces in the energy sector wherever practicable, while taking action to fulfil their responsibilities in relation to security and diversity of supply, health and safety, energy efficiency, the protection of the environment and other matters.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting in Brussels on 13 May between his Department and the European Commission's directorate-general XVII on energy conservation policy.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The meeting to which the hon. Member refers was a seminar organised by the European Commission's DGXVII on improving energy efficiency in buildings, with particular reference to labelling and insulation. Member states, industry and other interested parties gave their views on work which DGXVII has commissioned prior to drawing up proposals for legislation. The Commission indicated its intention to formulate draft directives for consideration by the Council in the light of the views expressed.

Departmental Headquarters

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to respond to the 10th report of the Committee of Public Accounts on the new headquarters building for his Department.

Mr. Wakeham: A response to the Committee's report is expected to be presented to Parliament in a Treasury minute before the summer recess.

Electricity Consumption

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many units of electricity per person are used currently in each region of England and Wales.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Sales of electricity and numbers of consumers, by type of consumer, are analysed for each of the old area electricity boards in England and Wales in table 58 of the "Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics 1990".

Greenhouse Gases

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to offer to the International Energy Agency and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, a technical review by his Department of the report entitled "Greenhouse Gas Emissions: The Energy Dimension".

Mr. Moynihan: "Greenhouse Gas Emissions: The Energy Dimension" was produced by the secretariats of the International Energy Agency—IEA—and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development—OECD—with the guidance of their relevant committees. An earlier version was provided as informal input to the deliberations of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change—IPCC. As its explanatory note makes clear, the report reflects the perspectives of the secretariats and not necessarily those of all the IEA and OECD member countries.

The Government regard this report as another useful contribution to the discussion on global climate change. It represents a view assembled by the IEA and OECD secretariats at a particular time, and a wide range of further work is continuing, both in international organisations and in countries. For that reason, the Department does not propose to offer a technical review of the report.

Onshore Petroleum Exploration

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about further onshore petroleum licensing.

Mr. Moynihan: The Petroleum (Production) (Landward Areas) Regulations 1991—SI 1991 No. 981—came into force on 9 May. I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses the text of a notice, which will be published as soon as possible in the official Gazette, inviting companies to apply for exploration licences in respect of unlicensed areas in Great Britain and certain near shore waters. The notice specifies that applications should be made on 19 or 20 June 1991. Application forms and guidance notes will be available from my Department.

I shall separately be inviting holders of production licences to apply to transfer exploration acreage within their existing licences to the new style exploration licences, subject to agreement being reached on a satisfactory work programme for the area.

Successful applicants will be offered exploration licences containing the conditions set out in the new Regulations. The licences will grant rights for a term of six years and entitle the licensee to carry out seismic surveys and deep drilling subject to the need to obtain the requisite permission from the appropriate mineral planning authorities and land owners and occupiers.

WALES

Farm Diversification

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any proposals to offer farmers in Wales new schemes for on-farm diversification; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The farm diversification grant scheme already provides grant assistance to farmers wishing to diversify into non-agricultural profit-making activities on their farm.

Ynysyplwm Hospital

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if agreement has been reached on the planned road links between existing highways and the new district general hospital to be constructed at Ynysyplwm.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Mid Glamorgan health authority is presently in negotiation with the Mid Glamorgan county council about the access road proposals for the proposed new district general hospital at Ynysyplwm.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if agreement has been reached on the sources of funding for the planned road links between existing highways and the new district general hospital to be constructed at Ynysyplwm.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The planned road links from the existing highways will form part of the overall construction cost of the new hospital.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the estimated costs of the planned road links between existing highways and the new district general hospital to be constructed at Ynysyplwm.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The planned road links for this new hospital have not yet been finalised or costed.

Manufacturing Industry

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many new jobs have been created in Wales in the manufacturing sector since 1 January;

(2) how many jobs have been lost in Wales in the manufacturing sector since 1 January.

Mr. David Hunt: Comprehensive information detailing jobs lost or created in the manufacturing sector since 1 January 1991 is not available.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the percentage of manufacturing firms recorded as working below capacity in Wales in the first quarter of 1991.

Mr. David Hunt: Comprehensive information on the percentage of manufacturing firms recorded as working below capacity is not recorded centrally.

Employment Statistics

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the level of employment in (a) the car component manufacturing sector and (b) the electronics sector in Wales in each month since 1 January.

Mr. David Hunt: Information detailing levels of employment in the car component and electronics sectors in Wales since 1 January 1991 is not available.

Welsh Development Agency

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who is the head of the inward investment division of the Welsh Development Agency.

Mr. David Hunt: The inward investment division of the Welsh Development Agency, Welsh Development

International, is the responsibility of the agency's executive director, marketing, Mr. Ian Rooks. The appointment of a new head of Welsh Development International, reporting to Mr. Rooks, is expected to be announced shortly.

Earnings

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give a breakdown of current earnings in Wales, showing the numbers and percentages of employees earning in each £5,000 band of income per annum up to £30,000 per annum and over £30,000 per annum.

Mr. David Hunt: Estimates for the total earned income of residents of Wales, obtained from the 1988-89 survey of personal incomes, are given in the table. Earnings are for individuals—husbands and wives shown separately—regardless of source, with investment income excluded. The estimates are net of superannuation contributions. Coverage of earned income below £5,000 is incomplete and, as a result, the percentages requested cannot be calculated.

Earned income per annum	Number of individuals (thousands)
£5,001 to £10,000	428
£10,001 to £15,000	223
£15,001 to £20,000	72
£20,001 to £25,000	20
£25,001 to £30,000	8
£30,001 and over	16

Company Stock

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the change in the level of company stock in Wales between April 1990 and April 1991.

Mr. Hunt: The information requested is not available.

Groundwater Monitoring

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether underground flows of water in Wales are being monitored for signs of pollution originating in badly drained and maintained silage clamps on farms.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Yes. The National Rivers Authority monitors groundwater in Wales, principally that used for potable supplies, at points of emergence. The Control of Pollution (Silage, Slurry and Agricultural Fuel Oil) Regulations 1991—SI No. 324—which come into force on 1 September will reduce considerably risks to controlled waters by setting construction standards and strengthening the NRA's powers.

Underground Mines

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the planning appeals relative to applications for underground coal mines currently under consideration by his Department.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

Water Pollution

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many prosecutions of water polluters have been started in Wales since the formation of the National Rivers Authority; and how many have been successful.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This is a matter for the National Rivers Authority.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Taiwan

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what machinery exists to enable communication between the Taiwanese authorities and Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have no governmental dealings with the authorities in Taiwan. There are established unofficial means through which British interests are promoted.

Tristan da Cunha

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will dispatch fishery protection vessels to Tristan da Cunha to prevent illegal drift net fishing in the exclusion zone around the islands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Royal Navy and Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels visiting Tristan da Cunha supplement the fisheries protection work of the Tristan authorities. The most recent visit was by RFA Diligence on 15 and 16 May. She did not locate any unlicensed fishing vessels.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Taiwanese authorities concerning drift net fishing in the exclusion zone around the Tristan da Cunha group of islands.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have no governmental dealings with the authorities in Taiwan. The Taiwan authorities are, however, aware of our concern over press reports that Taiwanese vessels have been undertaking drift net fishing in the exclusion zone around the Tristan da Cunha group of islands.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he intends to take to prevent drift net fishing in the exclusion zone around Tristan da Cunha.

Mr. Garel-Jones: At present RN and RFA vessels visiting Tristan da Cunha supplement the fisheries protection work of the Tristan authorities. We are considering what further action we might be able to take to prevent drift netting in the exclusion zone around Tristan da Cunha.

"Kill the Messenger"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will acquire for his Department's library a copy of Sir Bernard Ingham's "Kill the Messenger".

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Yes.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters concerning environmental protection and pollution control were discussed between members of the European Foreign Affairs Council and their counterparts from the European Free Trade Association member states in their meeting on 13 to 15 May.

Mr. Garel-Jones: EC and EFTA Ministers met on 13 May to review progress in the negotiations on a European economic area—EEA. This will extend the single market to the EFTA countries, and promote co-operation in a range of other areas, including in the environmental field. Ministers noted that there was a substantial convergence of views between the two sides on those elements which should figure in the EEA agreement.

Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contacts have taken place between the Indian high commission and Ministers or officials in his Department since 1987 about Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I will write to the hon. Member.

UNESCO

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will undertake a further substantive review of the situation at the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation with a view to making a decision on the United Kingdom renewing its membership of the organisation.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No. I met the Director-General of UNESCO on 5 April, and made clear that we needed to see more concrete progress before we could consider rejoining the organisation.

Border Controls

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will place in the Library an English language translation of the Shengen agreement.

Mr. Garel-Jones [pursuant to his reply, 23 April 1991, c. 413]: We are arranging to place a copy of the document in the Library of the House.

Privatisation

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support the German proposal for an EC treaty amendment to the effect that member states should endeavour to transfer state-owned companies to private ownership.

Mr. Maude: I have been asked to reply.

Although the Government support the objective of the German amendment, they do not believe that this should be a matter for Community competence or legislation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Racial Attacks

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to protect the black community on Thamesmead estate in Greenwich following the recent murders there.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Operational decisions and the deployment of officers in Greenwich, as in the rest of the Metropolitan police district, are the responsibility of the Commissioner. I have every confidence in the ability of the Metropolitan police to protect the black community on the Thamesmead estate. Within days of the murders of Mr. Rolan Adams and Mr. Orville Blair, suspects were arrested and charged.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what efforts are being made to increase the level of reporting to the police of racial attacks.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: All chief officers are fully aware of the need to respond to racial attacks as a priority and to ensure that such attacks are properly recorded. Police forces have developed a range of methods to improve reporting, In co-operation with other local agencies, which are closely monitored by HM inspectorate of constabulary. These include the provision of information to ethnic minority communities, support and counselling for victims of racial attacks and an effective priority response in dealing with perpetrators. The police service's implementation of broader policies on equal opportunities and quality of service has one of its central objectives improving the confidence of ethnic minority communities in reporting crimes to the police.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many racial attacks were reported to the police during 1990.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Six thousand four hundred and fifty-nine racially motivated incidents were reported to police forces in England and Wales during 1990.

Police, Leicestershire

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the budget allocated to policing Leicestershire for each of the years from 1979 to 1990, together with the percentage increase or decrease from year to year over this period, discounting inflation.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The budget of a police force is set by its police authority. Expenditure on the Leicestershire police force between 1979-80 and 1989-90, in cash and real terms, is set out below. During this period, the Home Office paid specific grant on the net expenditure of provincial police forces at the rate of 50 per cent. up to 1985-86 and 51 per cent. from 1986-87.

[1] At 1989-90 prices using GDP deflator.

The real terms increase in expenditure between 1979-80 and 1989-90 was 53 per cent.

Forensic Science Service

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what system of charging the new forensic science service will introduce to cover its costs; (2) what was the annual average expenditure on the Crown forensic service for each of the past three years; and what will be the annual rate of expenditure of the new forensic science service.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many forensic scientists employed by the forensic science service have moved to managerial posts under the new arrangements for an executive agency; and how many years' experience as forensic scientists these individuals had accumulated before undertaking managerial posts.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: These have been passed to the director general of the forensic science service who will be replying shortly. A copy of her reply will be placed in the Library.

Taxi Drivers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has had with the National Association of Taxi and Private Hire Licensing and Enforcement Officers, regarding the disclosure of criminal records; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The association wrote to my right hon. Friend about this in April. Our reply informed them that the matter would be considered in the context of the response to the scrutiny of criminal records which reported at the end of April.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received on the disclosure of criminal records of the convictions of taxi licence applicants since last October and over the last 12 months.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have received 65 representations on this subject during the period 17 June 1990—16 May 1991, some 50 of them after 1 November 1990. In addition, we have had regular discussions and exchanges of correspondence with the Association of County Councils, the Association of District Councils and the Association of Metropolitan Authorities.

Taxi Drivers

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations, and from whom, he has received on the disclosure of criminal records of taxi licence applicants.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not available.

Prisons

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in England and Wales have been diagnosed as having a mental illness.

Mrs. Rumbold: On 31 March 1990, the latest date for which figures are available, 290 inmates were reported by prison medical officers to be mentally disordered as defined by the Mental Health Act 1983. Of these, 237 were reported to be mentally ill.

The Government encourage the diversion of mentally disordered offenders from the penal system whenever custody is not necessary in the public interest.

Violence

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constables of police on police policy on reconciliation in (a) domestic violence cases and (b) other criminal violence cases.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. Home Office guidance on domestic violence advises police not to attempt reconciliation in such cases, although they may give advice about the appropriate sources of help which are available.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which other EC countries have developed reciprocal systems for ensuring absent parents contribute towards the maintenance of their children.

Mr. John Patten: All EC countries are party to conventions which facilitate the reciprocal recognition and enforcement of child maintenance. In the past, not all have invested the same effort as the United Kingdom in the enforcement process, and we have played a leading part in the preparation of a new convention. We signed this last year and have already met its requirements for some time. The convention will establish common administrative arrangements to support previous international agreements.

Miners Welfare Act 1952

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to reverse the effect of the Charity Commissioners' decision to interpret the Miners Welfare Act 1952 so as to define miners, rather than ex-miners and families, as the sole beneficiaries of the social and welfare activities within the meaning of the Act.

Mr. John Patten: The provisions of the 1952 Act already include ex-miners and their dependants within the social and welfare benefits of the Act. I have no information about any decision of the Charity Commissioners which would affect the provisions of the Act, but if the hon. Member has further details she may wish to write to the chief commissioner direct.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the local authorities that have adopted his Department's model byelaw on the banning of skateboarding on carriageways and roads under section 235 of the Local Government Act 1972.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Our records indicate that 66 local authorities have adopted the model byelaw which prohibits the use of skateboards and roller skates on footways and carriageways to the danger of other persons lawfully using the footway or carriageway. The local authorities are as follows:

Child Abuse

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, following the conclusion of the Crown court case in Liverpool concerning the wardship of children involved in Operation Clementine, he has any plans to review procedures used in cases concerning allegations of child abuse; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I am not aware of any complaints about police procedures in this investigation, which was carried out by the Merseyside police and Liverpool social services department. My right hon. Friend has no plans for a fundamental review of police procedures. Home Office officials are assisting in the revision of "Working Together" which is being undertaken by the Department of Health. Some additional guidance for the police to complement Home Office circular 52/1988 is likely to be issued when the revised "Working Together" is published.

Criminal Injuries (Compensation)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases are currently awaiting consideration under the criminal injuries compensation scheme in England and Wales and in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: At the end of April 1991, 59,919 applications were awaiting decision by a board member, 11,560 cases were out on offer to applicants and 10,690 cases were awaiting an oral hearing by the board. Figures for cases in progress are not available separately for England and Wales and for Scotland.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to implement sections 108 to 117 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988; and what he estimates the timetable of that implementation will be.

Mr. John Patten: Sections 108 to 117 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 provide a statutory basis for the present ex-gratia criminal injuries compensation scheme. No date has been set for implementation, which has been deferred for the time being at the request of the board to allow it to concentrate on dealing with the present backlog of cases, which is being reduced. The then Home Secretary set out more fully the reasons for this decision, together with certain changes in the non-statutory scheme, to bring it more closely into line with the provisions of the 1988 Act, in a written answer on 8 December 1989 at columns 409-17 to my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler).

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claimants under the criminal injuries compensation scheme have their awards paid directly to a trust or sequestrator; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The board does not keep totals of such cases, but I understand that they are rare.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made to implement the recommendations of the Home Affairs Select Committee to appoint additional staff to the Glasgow office; what progress has been made in clearing the backlog of claims under the criminal injuries compensation scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: We agreed immediately to all the 60 extra staff recommended in the report of the Select Committee (HC 92) in February 1990 and they have been in post in the Glasgow office since last summer. As a result of this and other measures described in the Government reply to the report (Cm. 1153), the number of cases outstanding has been reduced by about 8,000 over the last year to 82,000.

Police Authorities (Expenditure)

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for county police authorities in England the amounts spent in the most recent year available in rank order, together with the standard spending assessment for the police service and the expenditure per head of population.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The table shows, for 1990-91, the net revenue budget of each English county police force, as notified by the police authority; the police component of each county's standard spending assessment; the relevant population of the county; and the budget divided by the population.

Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contacts have taken place between Ministers or officials in his Department and the Indian high commission since 1987 about Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I am not aware of any contacts of this kind having taken place with the Indian high commission about Mr. Bedi before or since 1987. If the hon. Member believes that such contacts have taken place, I should be grateful if he would provide me with the details.

Stuart Bower

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make a decision on the case of Stuart Bower.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend hopes to reach a decision shortly. I have promised to write to the hon. Member as soon as a decision has been reached.

Prisoner Transfers

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were transferred under the provisions of circular 3790, and its predecessor circular 1074 from dispersal prisons in England and Wales for each of the last five years.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for St Helens, South (Mr. Bermingham) on 16 May at column 239.

Derbyshire Police

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the standard spending assessment for police in Derbyshire for 1991-92 and for previous years.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Standard spending assessments were introduced in 1990-91. Previously the Government's assumptions of local authorities' spending needs were expressed in grant-related expenditure assessments. The police component of GREAs contained elements for interest receipts and capital financing costs, which are now included in a separate component of local authorities' SSAs.

The police components of Derbyshire county council's GREA or SSA since 1987-88 are shown in the table.

Foreign Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many male and female prisoners in England and Wales were subsequently deported; and if he will list the countries of origin, for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Figures in the form requested have been held centrally only for the years since 1986. The figures in the table relate to deportation under section 3(6) of the Immigration Act 1971, where a recommendation for deportation made by a court was part of a custodial sentence, or under section 3(5)(b) of that Act where deportation on conducive grounds followed a custodial sentence.

THE ARTS

Works of Art (Export Licences)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister for the Arts what consideration is given to their likely end use when consideration is given to whether to issue on export licence for important works of art; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Exports of works of art go to private or public collections. The likely end use of a work of art after export is not a relevant consideration for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he is deciding whether to grant an export licence.

Edinburgh Art Galleries

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister for the Arts what discussions he has had with Professor Alan Peacock, chairman of the Scottish Arts Council, about the closure of art galleries in Edinburgh; what representations he has received on this matter; if he will instruct his Department to carry out an inquiry into the work of the Scottish Arts Council and its funding of the visual arts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: My last meeting with the chairman of the Scottish Arts Council was during my visit to Scotland from 4 to 7 May. I am aware of the difficulties facing some Edinburgh art galleries, but I have received no written representations about them. I can see no need to call for an enquiry into the council's funding of the visual arts.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Indirect Tax

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what stage has been reached in the European Council's deliberations concerning an indirect tax regime; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham (Mr. Conway) on 17 May 1991, Official Report, columns 314-15.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish tables showing separately for England, Wales and Scotland grants to local authorities from central Government net of non-domestic rate income, for 1990-91 and 1991-92, and showing separately expressed in £ million and as a percentage for (i) specific grants within aggregate external finance, (ii) revenue support grant, (iii) area protection grant, (iv) Inner London education grant, (v) housing grants and (vi) other specific grants.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is set out in the tables. The figures given are consistent with those published in the "Statistical Supplement to the Autumn Statement"—Cm. 1520; the 1991-92 figures also incorporate the additional grants announced this year to reduce the levels of community charge bills.

Mortgages

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the total increased costs to a married couple with two children on average earnings with an average mortgage, of the interest rate rises over the past two years.

Mr. Maude: The monthly interest payment, net of basic rate tax relief, on an average mortgage in May 1989 was £210·94. At the May 1991 interest rate of 12·9 per cent., the payment on that mortgage would be £201·56.

Charities (VAT)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the additional revenue to Her Majesty's Government in the current year from the income of registered charities, as a result of the increase in VAT.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that detailed information of this sort is not readily available.

School Meals (VAT)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the levying of value-added tax on meals provided to pupils in schools by private firms, and the treatment of school meals provided directly by local education authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have received one recent letter on this matter. VAT arises only on supplies made by way of business by a VAT registered person. Where a local authority supplies school meals incidental to its provision of education, either direct or via a contractor, those supplies are not by way of business and thus fall outside the scope of VAT. If a local authority ceases to provide a school meal service, and a private firm supplies catering direct to pupils, that is by way of business and VAT falls to be charged.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what provisions exist for the Inland Revenue to ascertain the beneficial ownership of large estates in order to levy appropriate rates of inheritance tax.

Mr. Maude: Inheritance tax is levied on chargeable transfers of value, mainly deemed transfers on death. The Inland Revenue has power to require personal representatives of deceased persons, the trustees of settled property, the donees of chargeable lifetime gifts and others to deliver accounts and to pay inheritance tax. It also has the power, with the consent of the Special Commissioners, to require any person to supply such information as the Board of Inland Revenue requires for inheritance tax purposes. There are no special provisions for large estates.

Football Pools Betting Duty

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his best estimate of the amount of money that has been provided to Vauxhall Conference clubs through the pools betting duty for each of the past 10 years and as a total over the same period.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 17 May 1991]: None. Pool betting duty was reduced in 1990 on condition that the whole of the amount saved would be passed onto the Football Trust 1990 and spent on ground improvements of clubs in the Football League and the Scottish Football League and on the three national stadiums—Wembley, Hampden Park and Windsor Park.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to render clubs in the Vauxhall Conference eligible for financial aid via the revenue provided as a result of the reduction in the football pools betting duty announced in the 1990 Budget; if he will state the proportion of revenue provided through pools betting duty for which clubs in the Vauxhall Conference are eligible to apply; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 17 May 1991]: I do not intend to make clubs in the Vauxhall Conference eligible to benefit from the reduction in pool betting duty announced in the 1990 budget. They receive no such support at present. They are, of course, eligible for support from the Football Trust 1990 provided the finance comes from other sources, such as donations resulting from the spotting-the-ball competition.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his best estimate of the total amount of money raised in football pools betting duty from matches played in the Vauxhall Conference or its predecessor league for each of the past 10 years and as a total over the same period.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 17 May 1991]: I am unable to make any estimate, as pool betting duty is charged on aggregate weekly stakes regardless of the individual events to which the stakes relate.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Meals

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing the expenditure on the school meal service in each year since 1976 in cash and real terms.

Mr. Fallon: The information is not collected centrally.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate the average price of a school meal in cash and real terms in each year since 1976 in (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools and (c) special schools.

Mr. Fallon: The readily available information for primary schools is shown in the table. Information before 1979 is not readily available. Information was not collected centrally for secondary or special schools, nor for primary schools after 1988.

Polytechnics

87. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list his detailed powers with respect to the financial conduct of a polytechnic.

Mr. Howarth: Generally, polytechnics are responsible for their own financial conduct. The powers of my right hon. and learned Friend in respect of the polytechnics and colleges sector are set out in the relevant provisions of the Education Reform Act 1988. Details of his financial relationship with the sector are in the financial memorandum between the Department and the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Postgraduate Students

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the percentage of current postgraduate students in (a) the social sciences, (b) the arts, (c) applied sciences and (d) pure sciences who are British.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Information on the nationality of students on postgraduate courses is not collected centrally.

Geomagnetism

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on (a) the value of the work done for his Department on geomagnetism and (b) his assessment of the future research priority given to geomagnetism.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department supports work on geomagnetism through the Natural Environment Research Council at the Council's institutes—the British Geological Survey and British Antarctic Survey—and in higher education institutions, on the theory and past behaviour of the earth's geomagnetic field; on observing, monitoring and modelling activity of the contemporary geomagnetic field; and on the interactions of the earth's magnetic field with solar phenomena. The current value of NERC support for observation and monitoring of present-day geomagnetic activity is £201,000 per annum. The future priority to be given to NERC science budget support for geomagnetism research is a matter for NERC to consider against its other priorities.

Teachers (Indecency Convictions)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will introduce legislation to require annual disclosure to parents of all convictions of offences involving indecency recorded against teachers in schools attended by their children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. and learned Friend does not plan to introduce such legislation. Applicants for teaching posts are already obliged to disclose any criminal convictions they have incurred to the prospective employer, and employers are able to check applicants' declarations by reference to police records. In addition, when a serving teacher is convicted of a criminal offence the police report the conviction both to the teacher's employer and to the Department.

Primary School Tests

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his policy to permit parents to opt out of primary school tests for their children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Head teachers have a general duty under section 10 of the Education Reform Act 1988 to secure the implementation of the national curriculum in their schools and, consistently with that, must ensure that all pupils eligible for assessment are assessed. Pupils may be excepted only under the following exceptional circumstances.

(a) Where they have a statement of special educational needs which, in conformity with section 18 of the Act, provides for the disapplication or modification of the statutory assessment arrangements in whole or in part.

(b) In cases governed by regulations made by the Secretary of State under section 17 of the Act.

(c) Where a head teacher has made a direction under section 19 of the Act temporarily excepting a pupil from the assessment arrangements in whole or in part. The making of such exceptions is governed by the Education (National Curriculum) (Temporary Exceptions for Individual Pupils) Regulations 1989, and explained further in the accompanying circular 15/89. A parental request for an exception to be made based on the parent's own opposition to testing would not in itself constitute a sufficient ground for such a direction.

The duty to assess pupils under the Education Reform Act 1988 is not overridden by LEAs' duty under section 76 of the Education Act 1944 to have regard, in the exercise of their functions, to the principle that pupils should be educated in accordance with the wishes of their parents.

Art Psychotherapy

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has made to the Universities Funding Council to ensure that the courses in art therapy and group therapy offered by the art psychotherapy unit at Goldsmiths college, university of London, are properly funded for the academic years 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Alan Howarth: These are issues for the college to decide within its aggregate resources. The Department has no role in such matters.

"Kill the Messenger"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will acquire for his Department's library a copy of Sir Bernard Ingham's "Kill the Messenger".

Mr. Eggar: No, purchasing decisions are the responsibility of the Department's professional librarian.

Bird Report

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to complete his consideration of the issues raised by the Bird report about the right of institutions to award degrees, quality assurance provision and related matters.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer the hon. Member to the statement my right hon. and learned Friend is making today.

Stirling University

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the actual cost incurred in building and equipping Stirling university; and what is the projected cost at present prices, adjusted for inflation.

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Payments of capital grant allocated by the University Grants Committee between 1966 and 1985 for building and furnishing Stirling university, excluding student residential accommodation, were as follows:

Asset Sales

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will bring forward proposals to permit local education authorities to reinvest 100 per cent. of capital receipts associated with the sale of assets used for educational purposes.

Mr. Key: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have no plans at present to make changes in the debt redemption rules of the local authority capital finance system. Local education authorities are already permitted to reinvest up to 100 per cent. of capital receipts associated with the sale of land and buildings used for educational purposes in the acquisition of land or buildings for educational purposes in the same area.

SCOTLAND

Written Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many written questions he or his predecessor answered in each year since 1980.

Mr. Lang: On a sessional basis, the number of written parliamentary questions answered from 1983-90 is set out in the table. Figures for 1980-82 are not available.

	Number
1983-84	3,200
1984-85	2,185
1985-86	2,316

	Number
1986-87	3,386
1987-88	4,982
1988-89	3,339

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how long on average the Scottish Office takes to reply to parliamentary written questions for (a) priority and (b) ordinary written answers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: On average, and if the information is readily to hand, my Department replies to priority written questions on the date they are due for answer and to ordinary written questions within one week.

Renfrewshire

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the level of central Government contribution to Renfrewshire Enterprise in the current financial year; and what criteria he has applied to its expenditure.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Following consideration of the business plan submitted by Renfrewshire Enterprise, Scottish Enterprise has decided to allocate a budget in 1991-92 of £28·834 million, inclusive of training allowances. Allocations to local enterprise companies, and the criteria used to determine them, are matters for Scottish Enterprise.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make additional resources available to promote tourism within Renfrewshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Scottish tourist board is happy to consider any applications from the Renfrewshire area for financial assistance towards the capital development of tourism projects. The promotion of tourism in Renfrewshire also benefits from the district council's membership of the Greater Glasgow tourist board, which receives financial support from STB.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what he anticipates will be the proportion of local authority income derived from (a) the poll tax/local tax, (b) non-domestic rates and (c) Government grants in Scotland in 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Allan Stewart: For 1991-92, the expected proportions are:

	Per cent.
Community charge	[1]15
Non-domestic rates	24
Government grants	[2]61

[1] Gross figure—that is, before Community Charge Benefit and Community Charge Reduction Scheme assistance.
[2] Grants concerned are—Revenue Support Grant, specific grants and Community Charge Grant.

At this stage it is not possible to provide figures for future years.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what consultations took place with Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on the distribution of the accelerated revenue support grant payments given to local authorities as compensation for loss of community charge revenue;

(2) if he will list those local authorities which have received less compensatory income from the accelerated revenue support grants made than that lost in revenue from community charge income.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Provided that its assumptions about community charge collection prove correct, no local authority should lose income for 1991-92 as a result of the reduction in charges made by the Community Charges (General Reduction) Act 1991. The combined income from revenue support grant, community charge grant and revised community charges should be equal to the total amount which each authority budgeted for originally in revenue support grant and community charge income.

My right hon. Friend announced on 18 April that, through a combination of revenue support grant and community charge grant, Scottish local authorities would receive by the end of June a total of £281 million more grant than they would have done under the normal arrangements for the payment of revenue support grant. This was broadly in line with the amount requested originally by the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities.

In accordance with the past practice, each Scottish authority is being paid the same percentage amount of revenue support grant each week. Prior to its introduction this year, this arrangement was neither the subject of consultation with nor representation from the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities. But following recent representations from the convention and a small number of authorities, my right hon. Friend is considering the matter further.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 26 April, Official Report, columns 614-16, if he will provide the same information in real terms.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The information requested is detailed in the table and is derived directly from the figures given in the answer of 26 April. These have been converted to real terms and adjusted to 1990 prices using the GDP deflator.

Special Needs Training

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the number of training places provided under Government-funded schemes by the Scottish Association of Mental Health in the year ended 31 March 1991; and how many places are available in the current year 1991-92.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Information about the number of training places provided under Government-funded schemes by the Scottish Association for Mental Health in the year ended 31 March 1991 is not available. However, the number of employment training places contracted between that organisation and the Training Agency as at 20 August 1990 was for a maximum of 591 places. Dealings with the Scottish Association for Mental Health concerning the number of places for the current year, 1991-92, are a matter for individual local enterprise companies. I understand that information on the number of places contracted with individual training providers is not held centrally by Scottish Enterprise or Highlands and Islands Enterprise.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the average increase in Scottish electricity prices in each of the last five years.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The average tariff increases announced by the two Scottish electricity companies and their predecessors in each of the last five years are shown in the table.

Average electricity tariff increase (per cent.)

	[1]1987	1988	1989	1990	1991
Scottish Power	3·30	4·75	8·00	8·50	9·00
Scottish Hydro-Electric	3·00	4·70	8·00	8·50	9·00

[1] In 1987, the date of implementation was 1 September; in the subsequent years the increases were implemented with effect from 1 April in the relevant year.

Training Funds

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to reinstate the funds available for training if the anticipated increase in contributions from the private sector does not materialise.

Mr. Lang: Decisions about the level of resources available for training through Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise were not based on assumptions about particular levels of contributions from the private sector. Responsibility for negotiating contracts with individual training providers which maximise the value obtained for public funds is a matter for local enterprise companies; and training providers will no doubt have assured themselves of the prospects of securing adequate employers' contributions before entering into the contracts. I understand that contracting between local enterprise companies and training providers for 1991-92 is largely completed.

Prisoners (Transfers)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many foreign nationals serving a sentence of imprisonment have been transferred to complete their sentence in their country of origin in each of the last five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: One prisoner was transferred to the United States of America in 1987 and one to Finland in 1988.

Prisoners (Drugs Offences)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) males and (b) females convicted or charged with a drug-related offence are currently imprisoned; if he will list their countries of origin; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the offences of the current prison population is not collected on a day-to-day basis. Nor is information collected on the country of origin of prisoners convicted of certain categories of offence.

Yearly breakdowns are, however, available of the offences of convicted prisoners received into prison. The number of direct receptions of prisoners convicted of drugs offences for two years 1989-90 was 613. Their average sentence length of 590 days, allowing for remission, suggests an average daily population of such prisoners of approximately 325. The inclusion of fine defaulters convicted of drugs offences might boost that figure to approximately 350. Information is not collected on the charges faced by remand prisoners.

Of the 40 foreign nationals in Scottish prisons on 15 May 1991, 14 were serving sentences for drug offences—four from Pakistan, two each from Colombia and the Netherlands, and one each from Cyprus, Denmark, Guyana, Malta, Nigeria and Peru.

Prison Suicides

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners have brought about their own deaths in each of the past five years; and if he will list the prisoners and institutions, whether those who died were serving sentences or were on remand, their ages and whether inquiry reports are known.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is provided in the table except for the prisoners' or young offenders' names, which have been omitted out of consideration for their family and friends. If the hon. Member wishes these details I should be happy to write to him.

Fatal accident inquiries have been held in each case. The sheriffs' determinations are matters of public record.

Foreign Prisoners

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements exist for visits from relatives, including children, to foreign nationals in gaols; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Arrangements for visits by family members to foreign nationals in Scottish penal establishments are no different from arrangements for visits to other prisoners, except that governors make particular efforts to accommodate the needs of foreign nationals whose visitors may have travelled a great distance to see them. Foreign nationals may speak with their visitors in their own language.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) male and (b) female foreign nationals are serving a sentence or are on remand in a prison; and if he will list their countries of origin.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: On 15 May 1991 there were 40 foreign nationals in Scottish penal establishments. All were male. Thirty-six were serving sentences and four were on remand. Their countries of origin are given in the table.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many foreign nationals imprisoned in gaols in Scotland are accompanied by dependent children.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration the Parole Board gives in its deliberations to the difficulties experienced by foreign nationals; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This is entirely a matter for the Parole Board for Scotland, which is an independent body with responsibility for exercising the functions conferred on it by section 18 of the Prisons (Scotland) Act 1989.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many foreign nationals in gaols have dependants resident in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Such information is not available. Prisoners are under no obligation to divulge to the Secretary of State whether or not they have dependants or where they are resident.

Fatal Accident Inquiries

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether legal aid will be available to the close relatives of the deceased at fatal accident inquiries; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is open to close relatives of deceased at fatal accident inquiries to make application for legal aid to the Scottish Legal Aid Board.

Careers Service

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish comments from official bodies on the consultative document on the future of the careers service in Scotland and related review documents.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In accordance with usual practice, responses to the consultation document will be available to the public unless the writers of the responses request otherwise.

Prisoners (Deportations)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, by country of origin for each of the last 10 years, the numbers of (a) male and (b) female prisoners in Scotland who were subsequently deported.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally.

Scottish Bus Group

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the pension arrangements for employees of the Scottish Bus Group prior to the beginning of the current privatisation programme; and what steps he is taking to protect these pension arrangements in the post privatisation period.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Bus Group operates two pension schemes, the transport operatives pension scheme and the staff pension fund. The arrangements for pensions following privatisation are set out in the Scottish Bus Group disposal programme published on 6 February 1990, copies of which were made available to the House.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if bidders for Scottish Bus Group subsidiaries are required to include a minimum allocation of equity shares to employees in their bids.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No. A 5 per cent. price preference is, however, available to bids involving the acquisition by the employees of a controlling interest in the companies being sold, provided that at least 25 per cent. of the ordinary shares will be owned by or on behalf of non-management employees.

Storm Damage

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what schemes are being considered to provide grants to individuals and local authorities in addition to the Bellwin scheme for the repair of severe storm damage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: In May 1990, my Department issued a circular to all local authorities setting out the various sources of central Government funding available to them to offset expenditure arising out of an emergency. In addition to the Bellwin scheme, grant may be payable on emergency works carried out by authorities under the Coast Protection Act 1949 and on confirmed flood prevention schemes under the Flood Prevention (Scotland) Act 1961.

The British Red Cross Society has recently assumed responsibility for the receipt and distribution of European Commission grant aid. This may be awarded at the European Commission's discretion to member states for the relief of families worst affected by abnormally severe weather conditions.

Inverary Bypass

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made to assess the economic viability of options for the proposed bypass at Inverary; when he expects to conclude consultations; when he expects to produce draft road orders; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Consultations with the principal landowner are currently being pursued. Subject to a satisfactory road alignment being agreed, it is the intention to ask the district council to safeguard this line. The scheme cannot command priority at present in the trunk road programme given the high returns available from competing projects of national importance. Further design work including detailed economic assessments will proceed only when there is a reasonable prospect of early funding being available. Present indications are that this is unlikely to be the case within the next five years.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the reasons that no advertising for the Scottish electricity privatisation has been placed in the Northern Ireland press or television; on what basis the level of advertising there was fixed; and what efforts have been made to contact investors in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The marketing activity for the flotation of the two Scottish electricity companies was planned to ensure that the target audiences were reached in a cost-effective manner. The decision not to advertise specifically in Northern Ireland was taken after consultation with our marketing and advertising advisers.

Everyone from Northern Ireland who applied for shares in the sale of the regional electricity companies in England and Wales has been sent information about the Scottish flotations. Information packs have also been provided at branches of the Ulster bank, where prospectuses and application forms will be available early in June.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the future funding of further education colleges.

Mr. Lang: I have received a number of representations since I announced on 21 March the Government's intention to introduce legislation to transfer the funding of further education colleges from local to central Government from 1 April 1993. I have presented to Parliament today a White Paper, "Access and Opportunity" (Cm. 1530), which sets out our proposals in more detail.

Further education colleges are a key element in the Government's education and training policies. Our policies have achieved much over the last decade, including the reform of vocational qualifications and the creation of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise and the local enterprise companies.

The White Paper builds on these achievements with further measures to stimulate participation and to improve opportunities and access. We propose to extend the training credit scheme to permit local enterprise companies to develop solutions to suit their areas taking account of the experience gained from the pilots that are presently under way. Local enterprise companies will be invited to submit bids for local schemes to operate training credits in their locality from April 1993. The aim will be to extend the coverage of training credits to include a further 10 per cent. of 16 and 17-year-olds leaving full-time education in Scotland. Our further aim is to extend credits progressively year by year to ensure that by 1996, within the lifetime of the next Parliament, every young person in Scotland who leaves full-time education will be able to have a training credit.

An important theme of the Government's education and training priorities has been the need to foster close links between employers and the education system. Local enterprise companies have already made it clear that improved links between education and business are one of their key objectives. The compact initiative, which currently operates in urban partnership areas, is a means of developing links between education and employment. It will be extended outwith the urban partnership areas.

Raising skills levels of the work force and of those qualifying with relevant and worthwhile qualifications is necessary if we are to match the skill of our economic competitors. The SCOTVEC system of vocational qualifications is now well established and is continuing to develop with the reforms of advanced courses and the recent introduction of Scottish vocational qualifications. SVQs are an important part of the system and are based upon competence to undertake a particular job. However, there is a need for a range of more broadly based qualifications to be developed. Accordingly, I will be inviting SCOTVEC to develop such qualifications within the SVQ framework. This will open up more opportunities for people to prepare themselves for a range of occupations and for entry to higher education.

As now, half the members of college councils will be employers, but in future councils will employ their own staff and control and manage assets. They will be given maximum freedom to be responsive to the needs of industry and students. In funding the colleges I will seek to achieve an appropriate balance between rewarding those colleges which perform better than others and achieving the financial stability necessary during a period of structural change.

The second White Paper, "Higher Education—a new framework", (Cm 1541), which I have also presented to Parliament today with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Northern Ireland will further enhance this policy. One of the Government's major achievements has been to secure sufficient places in higher education for the flow of young people who have the intellectual competence, motivation and maturity to benefit from it and who wish to do so. Our policies have helped to secure record levels of participation. Our higher education White Paper commits us to yet further expansion and increased access in higher education.

The policies set out in the White Papers will lead to a more skilful and prosperous Scotland. Taken together, they represent a major advance for tertiary education and training. The challenges that lie ahead are great. So are the opportunities.

A77

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much funding has been allocated to date on upgrading the A77; and if he will report on the progress of upgrading the A77.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 30 April 1991]: Since 1979 two major improvements on the A77 have been completed at a cost of some £7 million. A further major improvement costing an estimated £4 million is currently under construction. Current plans for the Ayr road route—the proposed link between the M77 and the A77—envisage a start to construction of the trunk road section in line with progress by Strathclyde regional council on the construction of the Glasgow city section of this jointly funded scheme. Strathclyde regional council was given a supplementary capital allocation of £1·4 million in 1990-91 to enable it to bring forward work which would otherwise have had to be paid for in 1991-92 and thus free resources to allow a start to be made to the advance works of the local road section in 1991-92. The regional council was given a further addition of £1·6 million to its capital allocation for 1991-92 to encourage it to proceed with the project. These additions have created the opportunity for Strathclyde to advance the main works if it chooses. After completion of the Ayr road route, dualling of the remaining four-lane single carriageway section of the A77 between Glasgow and Ayr is planned. Four further improvement schemes on the route south of Ayr are also in course of preparation.

Local Enterprise Companies

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice and guidelines have been given to the local enterprise companies in respect of their obligations to provide employment training courses to those citizens who suffer from mental and/or physical handicaps; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 15 May 1991]: The Government aim to offer unemployed claimants with disabilities a place on employment training or in a job club, an enterprise allowance or a job interview guarantee. An offer of one of these options is guaranteed to unemployed claimants with disabilities who are aged between 18 and 24 and who have been unemployed for between six and 12 months. These priorities have been communicated to local enterprise companies and the conditions of their operating contracts require them to play their part in fulfilling the Government's aim and guarantee.

Any more general advice and guidelines to local enterprise companies concerning the mentally or physically handicapped would be a matter for Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise; and I have asked the chairmen of both bodies to write to the hon. Member.

ATTORNEY GENERAL

Treason

33. Mr. Archer: To ask the Attorney-General whether the law Commission is proposing to report on a codification of the law of treason.

The Attorney-General: The Law Commission is examining the whole of the criminal law, with a view to proposing a criminal code, and in that context will in due course examine the law of treason.

Serious Fraud Office

34. Mr. Hind: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the number of successful prosecutions brought by the Serious Fraud Office since its creation.

The Attorney-General: Fifty-one cases have been brought to trial in which 82 out of 120 defendants have been convicted.

Appeals

35. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement about the number of appeals he has made about sentences; and whether any further appeals are pending.

The Attorney-General: A total of 26 cases referred by me have been heard by the Court of Appeal, and a further two by the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland. In 24 of them a substantially heavier sentence has been substituted. Seven cases remain pending.

"Kill the Messenger"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Attorney-General if he will acquire for his office's library a copy of Sir Bernard Ingham's "Kill the Messenger".

The Attorney-General: Many claims compete for the resources in present circumstances available for acquisitions by this library and I do not forsee the library purchasing the work to which the hon. Member refers.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Vietnam

38. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will establish a bilateral aid programme with Vietnam.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government have no immediate plans to establish a direct aid programme to Vietnam, but we are keeping this question under review. Meanwhile we are providing financial support to British agencies for projects in Vietnam.

Bangladesh

41. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total aid, additional to previously planned aid, given to Bangladesh since 1 May.

Mrs. Chalker: Our response to the Bangladesh cyclone, bilaterally and through the European Community, now amounts to £7·85 million. All this is additional to our regular development aid to Bangladesh, which is running at about £50 million a year.

Baltic States

42. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held with EC counterparts on technical aid to the Baltic states.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary last discussed technical asistance to the Soviet Union, including the Baltic states, at the Foreign Affairs Council on 4 March. Mr. Needham: In line with provisions which were contained in the Electricity Act 1989, the proposed Electricity (Northern Ireland) Order will allow regulations to be made which will ensure that privatisation does not adversely affect the benefits payable to members and pensioners in the NIE pension scheme at the point of transfer.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Foyle on 27 February, Official Report, Vol. 186, columns 515-16. Only the Northern Ireland standing advisory commission on human rights has made representations to me on this matter.

Prison Rule 25

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 24 April, Official Report, column 475, for what reason Gerald Clarke was removed from association with other prisoners at Crumlin Road gaol under prison rule 25 (Northern Ireland) 1982; what type of confinement and association he is now receiving; whether he is still on hunger strike; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Gerald Clarke was removed from association with other prisoners under prison rule 25 (Northern Ireland) 1982 as there was concern for his personal safety. He resumed eating prison food on 25 April and after being declared fit by prison medical staff the prisoner was returned to ordinary location on a wing with other untried prisoners.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Residential Homes

14. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he next expects to meet Age Concern to discuss problems which arise for persons in residential homes who have difficulty in meeting the difference between income support and the actual cost of places.

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met Age Concern last Monday.

Young Persons (Income Support)

16. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review his Department's policy on 16 and 17-year-olds' entitlement to income support; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The Government's policy is to offer 16 and 17-year-olds the positive options of education, entering employment, or taking up the Government's guarantee of quality training through youth training. But income support is still available to those vulnerable groups of young people who are unable to participate in YT or those seeking a YT place who would otherwise suffer severe hardship.

Child Support Agency

17. Mr. Dickens: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what long-term savings he expects to make as a result of the operation of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Jack: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Mr. Amess).

Poor Families

18. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the latest measures to improve the living standards of families living in poverty in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Jack: Our reformed social security system enables us to concentrate help, over and above maintaining the real value of benefits, wherever it will do most good. That is why, for example, from this October, families with children will have seen the real value of their income-related benefits increase by £0·5 billion a year compared with the position before the reforms.

Arcola Street Office

19. Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he next plans to visit Arcola street social security office to discuss the operations of the office.

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Social Fund

20. Sir William Shelton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost of converting all social fund loans to grants.

Mr. Scott: As at 31 March 1991 the accumulated net cost of outstanding loans over the lifetime of the fund stands at £142 million. This is the difference between gross loans expenditure up to 31 March and recoveries repaid at that date. This represents the cost to the taxpayer of writing off all current loan debt.

21. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the social fund budgets for Finsbury Park and Highgate offices for 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr Scott: Information concerning the social fund budgets of particular offices is in the Library.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the net Treasury input to the social fund has been each year since its inception and in the current year.

Mr. Scott: Social fund net expenditure is as follows:

Year	£m
1988-89	152
1989-90	131
1990-91	[1]156
1991-92	[2]161

[1] The figure quoted for 1990-91 is provisional.
[2] The figure quoted for 1991-92 is the estimated net provision.

National Insurance

22. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the revenue which would arise from the removal of the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions.

Mr. Scott: If the ceiling for employees and self-employed national insurance contributions were abolished, it is currently estimated that contribution yield would increase in a full year by £2·5 billion and £0·5 billion respectively. Based on 1990-91 figures it is estimated that some 3·4 million employees and 0·5 million self-employed people would pay more in contributions.

Refugees

23. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if any additional resources are being made available to London offices to deal with the number of refugees arriving in London.

Miss Widdecombe: Yes. The staffing position is always kept under review. Additional staff are added to offices with high numbers of refugee claims. Area reserve staff are also available to assist district offices. In Newham district, the office has eight staff more than their calculated staff resources based on workload data and has received extensive help from the area reserve staff.

Child Benefit

24. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the impact of the change in single-parent benefit on child benefit.

Mr. Jack: One-parent benefit is paid as an addition to child benefit for anyone bringing up a child alone. Its structure has not changed since the introduction of child benefit.

Pensioners

25. Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of pensioners own their own homes; and what assessment he has made of how this is likely to change over the next 20 years.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, South-East (Mr. Paice).

28. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of pensioners have some form of private income to top up the state pension and benefits.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, North-East (Mr. Moss).

Lone Parents

26. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will state the latest available figures showing the proportion of lone parents who receive maintenance.

Mr. Jack: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway).

Invalid Care Allowance

27. Sir Marcus Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have benefited from increases in the earnings disregard in invalid care allowance in the last two years.

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Mr. Norris) earlier today.

Young Persons (Benefits)

Mr. Benton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost of the MORI research commissioned by his Department into benefit provision for 16 and 17-year-olds.

Mr. Jack: The cost of the MORI research was £120,000.

Long-stay Hospital Patients

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the treatment of long-stay hospital patients in receipt of income support with respect to mortgage interest payments.

Mr. Scott: Income support help with mortgage interest could continue for up to 52 weeks in such circumstances. This is in line with the rules for others on housing benefit or income support who are temporarily absent from their homes. It would not be right to use public funds to subsidise empty housing indefinitely.

Claimants, Blyth Valley

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of appeals heard in his Department's Blyth Valley areas decided by tribunals concerning (a) income support, (b) mobility allowance, (c) attendance allowance, (d) injury and disablement benefit, (e) invalidity benefit and (f) non income related benefits in 1989 and 1990.

Miss Widdecombe: The latest available statistics relating to social security appeal tribunals are for the period ending 30 June 1990. National administrative statistics for appeal tribunals are not available for areas smaller than a former social security region. The relevant information for the former north-eastern region is in the table.

Total Number of Social Security Appeals heard and decided

Next Steps

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his Department under the next steps initiative; and whether he has identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Miss Widdecombe: The agencies currently established within the Department are:

The Benefits Agency, established in April 1991;
The Contributions Agency, established in April 1991;
The Information Technology Services Agency, established in April 1990;
The Resettlement Agency, established in May 1989.

We plan to establish the Child Support Agency in early 1993.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the estimated numbers of severely disabled people who will meet the present criteria set out by the independent living fund for each of the next five years.

Mr. Scott: It is not possible to estimate the numbers of people who will all meet the criteria set by the trustees for receiving help from the ILF.

The number of people receiving help from the ILF at the end of March 1989 was 890. The number at the end of March 1990 was 4,262; and 7,724 at the end of March 1991.

Pensioners

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham of 29 January, Official Report, column 486, whether the weekly incomes on which the figures are based include or exclude (a) SERPS and (b) means-tested benefits.

Miss Widdecombe: The table in the answer given to my right hon. Friend the Member for Chesham and Amersham on 29 January at column 486 shows the number of married couple pensioners and the number of single pensioners with incomes in excess of basic state retirement pensions, net additional (SERPS) pension and graduated pension plus supplementary pensions, but not housing benefit.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update the answer given to the then hon. Member for Kensington on 14 July 1987, Official Report, column 451, showing the number of pensioners with gross weekly incomes other than the state basic pension of up to £5, £5 to £10, £10 to £15, £15 to £20, £20 to £30, £30 to £40, £40 to £50, £50 to £60, £60 to £70, £70 to £80, £80 to £90, £90 to £100, £100 to £110, £110 to £120, £120 to £130, £130 to £140, £140 to £150, £150 to £200, £250 to £300, £300 to £400, £400 to £500 and over £500, distinguishing between single and married pensioners.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is given in the table.

	Numbers (thousands)

DEFENCE

RAF Caerwent

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether projectile ammunition is stored at RAF Caerwent;

(2) if he will list the movements by road or rail of ammunition and weapons to and from RAF Caerwent in each of the last 12 months;

(3) if he will list the types of ammunition and weapons and their tonnages currently stored at RAF Caerwent.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer given to the hon. Member on 9 May 1988 at column 1.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish details of the safeguarded areas around the perimeter of RAF Caerwent in which his Department has in the past sought restrictions on planning applications for new developments.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Copies of the Ministry of Defence (Caerwent) Explosives Storage Area Direction 1988 are held by those local planning authorities whose areas are affected by it. The direction is freely accessible to the public via those authorities. I have, however, placed copies in the Library of the House.

The Gulf

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the approximate number of battle casualty reinforcements attached to the 1 Armoured Division during Operation Granby.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our policy to give details of operational contingency plans.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the operational ability of those forces deployed with RAF Germany which were not deployed to the Gulf declined or increased during the course of Operation Granby;

(2) whether the supply of spare parts for Tornado and Jaguar aircraft and Puma and Chinook helicopters deployed with the RAF in Germany altered as a result of the deployment of RAF forces to the Gulf as part of Operation Granby;

(3) pursuant to his answer of 28 November 1990 to the hon. Member for Rhondda (Mr. Rogers), what was the approximate degree of the adverse effect on BAOR forces that remained in Germany during Operation Granby resulting from the decision to deploy the 1 Armoured Division to the Gulf;

(4) pursuant to his answer of 28 November 1990 to the hon. Member for Rhondda, what was the approximate degree of the consequential effects on the spares position in BAOR resulting from the deployment of 1 Armoured Division to the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Army and RAF units which deployed on Operation Granby were given priority in terms of equipment, including spares, and personnel. This had some effect on the operational availablility or readiness of forces which remained in Germany and on certain spares holdings, but it is not our practice to comment in detail on such matters.

Defence Equipment Exports

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the financial effect on his equipment procurement budget of the export of British defence equipment.

Mr. Alan Clark: Where the export of British defence equipment enables United Kingdom companies to spread the cost of their overheads, it reduces the cost of equipment to my Department. However, it is not possible accurately to quantify this effect. In addition, the Department benefits from receipts from commercial exploitation levies paid on exports of defence equipment whose development the Department funded.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will now change his policy regarding the release of information on the export of non-lethal British defence equipment to (a) Iraq and (b) the rest of the world.

Mr. Alan Clark: I see no reason to do so.

Defence Budget

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 292, whether in the last 12 months he has provided any non-governmental organisation or individual with details of the contents of the long-term costing.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement on 2 May, at column 292.

United Nations Military Staff Committee

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 28 March, Official Report, columns 570-1, what is the service rank of the United Kingdom representative at the United Nations military staff committee and the amount and type of administrative support provided to the United Kingdom representative; and whether he has submitted any documents for consideration by the committee in the last four years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The head of the British defence staff, which is a major general level appointment, acts as the head of the United Kingdom delegation to the United Nations military staff committee. Administrative support for the United Kingdom delegation is provided by members of the British defence staff, Washington. No papers have been submitted to the military staff committee by the United Kingdom delegation in the last four years.

HMS Fearless and Intrepid (Replacement)

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in defining and designing replacement assault ships for HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State confirmed on 25 July 1990 that we intend to retain an amphibious capability. We are considering how best to maintain in the longer term the capability currently provided by the assault ships HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid.

"Kill the Messenger"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will acquire for his Department's library a copy of Sir Bernard Ingham's "Kill the Messenger".

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Ministry of Defence library has one copy of Sir Bernard Ingham's "Kill the Messenger" on order.

HEALTH

Benzodiazepines

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of funds provided to help drug misusers is being given to those addicted to benzodiazepines.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not available centrally.

Doctors and Dentists (Pay)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions during the last 12 years the recommendations of the review board have not been implemented in respect of the salaries of doctors and dentists; and what is his estimate of the cumulative shortfall resulting from variation of, or delays in, implementation.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government have implemented in full the recommendations of the review body on doctors' and dentists' remuneration except in 1981, when the award was abated, and in 1989 and 1990 when two recommendations were rejected in each year. The 1981 abatement was restored at the start of 1984. Implementation of the award has been staged or deferred in 1984, 1985, 1986, 1990 and 1991, but in all cases the awards were or will be in full payment by the end of the financial year to which they related.

By the time this year's awards are in full payment from 1 December, doctors' and dentists' pay will have increased by 37·4 per cent. in real terms since 1978, a rate of increase well above that of most other groups in the public and private sectors.

Health Authority Reports

Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the cost of producing annual reports of the local health authorities.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally.

Braille Services

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the reasons for the reductions in the Braille grant last year to the Royal National Institute for the Blind; and when he expects to make a statement concerning the future level of grant.

Mr. Dorrell: We have funded the Royal National Institute for the Blind's braille service for many years. In the light of RNIB's comparatively strong financial position, the scope for it to generate alternative sources of income for the braille service and the very pressing demands on the limited available funds, we decided that we could no longer justify the generous level of grant which RNIB had previously received. Accordingly we advised it that its grant of £250,000 would be reduced by £50,000 in 1990-91 and that the situation would be reviewed in 1991-92. We have now awarded a grant of £200,000 a year for three years starting on 1 April 1991 and will review the situation again when the grant expires.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions have taken place between his department and office bearers of the Royal National Institute for the Blind in connection with the funding of Braille publications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met representatives of the Royal National Institute for the Blind on 26 March following two earlier meetings with my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State. As well as a very full discussion about the Braille grant we discussed other funding possibilities and have subsequently invited RNIB to submit a funding proposal for a community care project.

HIV Virus and AIDS

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total planned expenditure into research by Her Majesty's Government relating to the HIV virus and AIDS; and what is the planned total for the national health service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Fearn) on 19 March 1991 at columns 85-86.

The Government make available earmarked funds to regional health authorities as a contribution towards the costs incurred in helping prevent the spread of HIV infection and providing treatment, counselling and support for those affected by HIV and AIDS. Since 1985 over £500 million has been made available in this way. Regional and district health authorities have discretion to use these funds for research purposes, but there is no central record kept of the amounts spent or planned to be spent.

Northumberland Area Services

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average general practitioner list size for the Northumberland family health services authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: At 1 October 1990, the latest date for which figures are available, the average general practitioner list size in the Northumberland family health services authority's area was 1,773.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the average unit cost of bed spaces in Northumberland in (a) Northumberland local authority, (b) private care homes, (c) private nursing homes and (d) voluntary homes for elderly persons.

Mr. Dorrell: The 1990-91 estimates published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy give the gross cost per place filled in Northumberland's own homes for elderly people, excluding capital charges, as £163 per resident per week. Information on the costs of private and voluntary homes is not held centrally.

Hospital Waste

Mr Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much funding has been given to health authorities to update their existing waste incinerators since 1987; and how much of that has been given to Leicestershire health authority;

(2) how many waste incinerators, for disposing of contaminated waste from hospitals, are currently in use in England and Wales; and what information he has on how much it costs to run them each year;

(3) how many hospital waste incinerators are classified as out of date in England and Wales; and what estimate has been made of how much it will cost to upgrade them to new Environmental Protection Act 1990 standards;

(4) what information he has on how many health authorities in England and Wales are preparing to send hospital waste to Germany to be changed to safe fuel before returning it to Britain to be disposed of.

Mr. Dorrell: Financial provision for the disposal of clinical waste is subsumed within overall annual allocations to health authorities. There are approximately 600 NHS-owned incinerators in England. Their running costs, maintenance, upgrading and any plans for replacement are a matter for individual health authorities.

A "Strategic Guide for Waste Management" was issued to health authorities/NHS trusts in March 1991 (ELM(a1)M/1), a copy of which is available in the Library. It included guidance on meeting incinerator standards required by the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and arising from relinquishment of NHS Crown immunity on 1 April 1991. It recommended that health authorities/NHS trusts examine a wide range of options for future clinical waste disposal of which wholly NHS owned and operated incinerators is only one. Decisions remain the province of individual health authorities/NHS Trusts.

We are not aware of any proposals to send clinical waste to Germany for reprocessing.

South Yorkshire Ambulance Service

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received during the last six months from residents in South Yorkshire expressing support for the transfer of the South Yorkshire ambulance service to trust status.

Mrs Virginia Bottomley: The application from the South Yorkshire ambulance service will be subject to a statutory period of public consultation conducted by Yorkshire regional health authority for a three-month period commencing 13 May 1991.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what salaries are currently paid to those officials within the national health service who are in charge of the ambulance service and their respective areas, including the chief ambulance officer of the South Yorkshire ambulance service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally and details of payments awarded to individual NHS employees are a confidential matter between employer and employee. I understand that most officers in charge of ambulance services are employed on NHS senior manager terms. Senior managers are on performance-linked contracts and paid a flat rate salary on a 30-point pay spine. The spine ranges from £13,560 to £42,290 per annum.

Elderly People

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department is proposing to take action to respond to the European Parliament resolution B-1537/90 which calls on member state Governments to realise the needs of elderly people and make proper provision for them.

Mr. Dorrell: We have noted the terms of the motion for a resolution. It is for the Parliament to decide whether it wishes to refer the issue to the Commission.

The Government are promoting a wide range of measures to develop services for older people. In doing so, we encourage the involvement of the voluntary sector and of older people themselves wherever possible.

Following agreement on the decision of the Council of the European Communities on actions for the elderly, the United Kingdom intends to play a full part both in the programme of activities and in the European Year of the Elderly in 1993.

Ambulance Service Trusts

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has given to national health service trusts on the salaries and fringe benefits to be paid to those who are the principal directors of the ambulance services which have become trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Non-executive directors of NHS trusts are remunerated at a rate of £5,000 per annum. Remuneration for executive directors of NHS trusts is a matter for the trust board.

Disposable Needles

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has completed his discussions about supplying, on prescription, disposable needles to diabetics using pen type insulin injectors.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The discussions with suppliers referred to in my reply to my hon. Friend on 18 December 1990, at column 155, are continuing.

Cot Deaths

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the report of the independent experts set up in March 1990 to investigate whether the emission of toxic gases from fungal growth on cot mattresses could be a cause of cot deaths; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The report of the working group of independent experts set up by the chief medical officer will be published shortly.

Hornsey Centre for Children Learning

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his medical advisers visited the Hornsey centre for children learning; and what his policy is in publishing advice from medical advisers in relation to such centres.

Mr. Dorrell: The most recent visit was on 9 April. Reports on such visits are confidential to the institution visited and the Departments concerned.

Midwives

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwives were working in the national health service in 1979 and in the latest year for which figures are available; and what has been the trend in perinatal and maternal mortality rates since 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There were 19,2000 whole-time equivalent qualified midwives working in the hospital and community health service in England at 30 September 1989. The equivalent figure for 1979 was nearly 4,000 lower at 15,500.

The perinatal and maternal mortality rates have both fallen further since 1979.

The perinatal mortality rate has fallen from 14·6 to 8·1 per 1,000 total births and the maternal mortality rate has fallen from 0·11 to 0·09 per 1,000 total births.

Women GPs

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women general medical practitioners there were in 1970, 1979, 1989 and 1990.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The figures are provided in the table.

Last year the number of women GPs increased by a further 4·5 per cent. continuing the encouraging trend of previous years. Now nearly one in four GPs are women.

	Number of women GPs (England)	Percentage of females to the total
1970	2,082	11
1979	3,261	15
1989	5,830	23
1990	6,093	24

Rehabilitation (Brain Injuries)

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the Government are doing to improve national health service rehabilitation services for people with brain injury.

Mr. Dorrell: We are pleased to announce a central Government initiative to improve rehabilitation services for people with brain injury. We will support the development of a number of centres around the country which can act as a model for the rest of the national health service. We shall be inviting bids for funds. We shall also be funding a research study to evaluate the services provided.

We recognise the vital contribution which skilled rehabilitation can make to recovery from the traumatic effects of brain injury. The aim is to restore normal functioning as far as possible and to return the patient to independent living in the community.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Commercial Whaling

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food with whom he has had consultations on commercial whaling.

Mr. Gummer: I have recently discussed our policy on this matter with the all-party parliamentary group for animal welfare and wildlife link, the umbrella group for the major United Kingdom environmental organisations. In addition, the House itself debated this subject on 30 April. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary discussed the issue with the Norwegian Government on his recent visit to Norway and my officials have had a number of meetings with representatives of Governments of some members of the International Whaling Commission.

Animal Cruelty, Spain

Mr. Parry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the representations he has received to date concerning cruelty to animals in Spain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: We have received representations from Compassion in World Farming and the RSPCA, which have both provided video-taped material alleging breaches in Spanish slaughterhouses of the EC provisions on pre-slaughter stunning. We are asking the Commission what action it intends to take and in the meantime we continue to refuse to license exports of food animals to Spain.

Farm Incinerators

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what consideration his Department is giving to exempting, under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, rules monitoring small farm incinerators, provided they are lined and fitted with flame-wash after-burners;

(2) if he will make a statement on progress on discussions he is having with the farming industry on exemptions on waste incineration under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 provisions; and when he expects to conclude discussions.

Mr. Maclean: Following discussions with farming and hunting interests it has been agreed that there should be an exemption from the inspection and authorisation requirements under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 for incinerators designed to incinerate certain farm wastes, including animal carcases, at a rate of no more than 50 kg per hour.

Pesticides

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the organisations which obtained contracts to carry out toxicological evaluations of pesticide active ingredients in 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Organisations with contracts to evaluate pesticide active ingredients in 1990-91 were:

Inveresk Research International
Life Science Research
British Industrial Biological Research
Dr. Brian Hunter (Independent Consultant)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the organisations which will be consulted over the review of pesticides; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The number of confirmed cases of BSE in the United Kingdom listed by month of onset of clinical signs, from October 1990 to December 1990, the latest month for which figures are available, is as follows:

Milk Quotas

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to phase out milk quotas; and if he will make a statement.

Written Answers to Questions

TRANSPORT

Bus Companies

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were (a) the numbers of buses owned, (b) the numbers of staff employed and (c) the net book value of the assets of the National Bus Company subsidiary, Yorkshire Traction Company.

Mr. McLoughlin: When the company was privatised in January 1987, it owned 328 buses, employed 1,470 staff and the net book value of its assets was £4·120 million.

Taxi Drivers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 306, on licences for taxi drivers, what assessment he has made of the difficulties created for local authorities in fulfilling the requirements of section 59(1)(a), and section 51(1)(a) of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1976 by their lack of access to criminal records from the police; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: I am aware that local authorities can encounter difficulties in satisfying themselves that applicants for such licences are fit and proper persons, and I understand that my Home Office colleagues and the Association of Chief Police Officers are considering this issue following the completion, in April, of the scrutiny study report on criminal records. The scrutiny study was undertaken in response to a Home Affairs Select Committee report in December 1990.

Agency Status

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his Department under the "next steps" initiative; and whether he has identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Mr. McLoughlin: There are currently four executive agencies in the Department of Transport:

The Vehicle Inspectorate (VI)
The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA)
The Driving Standards Agency (DSA)
The Vehicle Certification Agency (VCA)

VI was established as the Government's first executive agency on 1 August 1988; DVLA, DSA and VCA were established on 2 April 1990.

I announced, at column 1, on 15 April this year, that the Transport and Road Research Laboratory (TRRL) should become a candidate for executive agency status under the "next steps" initiative.

British Rail (Financing)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the external financing limit of British Rail in (a) 1979-80 and (b) 1990-91, in cash terms and at constant prices.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail's external financing limits and outturns for 1979-80 and 1990-91 were:

	Limit £ million	Outturn £ million

Newtownards (Aircraft Movement)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what restrictions apply to aircraft flying from Ards airport over the residential areas of Strangford Heights, Morstan Park and Bowtown road in Newtownards; whether any new restrictions have been applied to flight paths at this location in the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The rules applying to all civil aircraft in respect of the overflight of residential areas are contained in the Rules of the Air Regulations 1990. Essentially these prohibit any aircraft from flying over such areas below either a height which will enable it to alight clear of the area in the event of an engine failure on a single-engined aircraft or a height of 1,500 ft whichever is the higher, unless the aircraft is taking off or landing in accordance with normal aviation practice. These rules are applied by the Civil Aviation Authority, which has the statutory responsibility for the safety regulation of United Kingdom civil aviation and I am advised by the CAA that there have been no significant changes over the past five years.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether any agent on behalf of his Department inspected the light aircraft which crashed at Morstan Park in Newtownards on 14 May 1991, before the removal of the damaged aeroplane.

Mr. Rifkind: Following the initial notification of the accident, the air accidents investigation branch gave permission for the damaged light aircraft to be removed from the accident site. AAIB inspectors did not examine the aircraft before its removal.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what form of inquiry will be held to investigate the crash of a light aircraft at Morston Park, Newtownards, on Tuesday 14 May; when the inquiry will commence; who will preside at the inquiry; whether local residents of the Morston Park/Strangford Heights area of Newtownards will be invited to give evidence; whether the inquiry will be in public; whether the report of the inquiry will be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The air accidents investigation branch is investigating the circumstances of the accident to the light aircraft at Morston Park, Newtownards on Tuesday 14

May. The inquiry commenced on 15 May 1991 and is being conducted by an inspector of air accidents. Any person with evidence concerning the circumstances of the accident is invited to contact the chief inspector of air accidents. The inquiry will not be held in public but the circumstances will be published in an AAIB bulletin.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the various accidents and crashes involving aircraft in the vicinity of Newtownards during the past five years.

Mr. Rifkind: The Civil Aviation Authority's safety data and analysis unit records show that there have been 10 reportable accidents in the vicinity of Newtownards in the past five years. All have involved light aircraft.

Commercial Road, London

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date he first received a request from the hon. Member for Bow and Poplar for him to arrange a meeting with Ministers or departmental officials concerning road works in the Commercial road, east London; when a substantive reply was sent; when any meeting is to take place; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The hon. Member's letter was received on 25 April. I have copied to the hon. Member my letter of 17 May to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) on this subject. I shall arrange a meeting as soon as possible after the Whitsun recess.

Rail Freight (Safety)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the adequacy of safety precautions for the transport of toxic or flammable freight by rail, as evidenced by the derailment and fire on a train carrying flammable goods at Bradford-on-Tone, near Wellington, Somerset in the early hours of 16 May.

Mr. Freeman: Dangerous goods are carried by rail in accordance with the British Railways Board's list of dangerous goods and conditions of acceptance by rail on freight services and parcels service. Major incidents involving toxic substances or the spillage of large quantities of flammable substances, such as the one referred to, are infrequent. There have been no deaths and very few injuries since 1984.

Responsibility for operational safety rests primarily with the railway operator. Her Majesty's railway inspectorate, a part of the Health and Safety Executive, is responsible for enforcement of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 on the railways.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for sales by individuals of single dwellings the number and average value of transactions nationally and regionally in 1989 and 1990 by range of consideration as set out in his proposals for a council tax;

(2) if he will publish a table showing for disposals of (a) freehold and (b) leasehold residential property by individuals in 1989, as shown in Inland Revenue Statistics 1990, the number and average value of properties falling within each of his council tax bands together with the median within each band and the median overall; and if he will provide similar figures for sales by councils to sitting tenants.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 15 May at columns 173-74.

Household Composition

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the number of households with three or more adults and the numbers of those on national assistance;

(2) whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the number of two-adult households with one child and the number of those on national assistance;

(3) whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the number of one-parent households, the number with one, two and three or more children and the number of those on national assistance;

(4) whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the number of two-pensioner households and the number of those on national assistance;

(5) whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the number of one-adult, non-retired households and the number of those on national assistance;

(6) whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the number of three-adult households with children and the number of those on national assistance;

(7) whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the number of two-adult, non-retired households and the number of those on national assistance;

(8) whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the number of two-adult households with two children; and the number of those on national assistance;

(9) whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the number of single pensioner households and the number of those on national assistance.

Mr. Key: The only available information on household composition at district level is contained in table 39 of the county reports to the 1981 census, copies of which are in the House of Commons Library. Similar analyses from the 1991 census will become available during 1992. Information on income support by household type at district level is not available.

Local Government Management

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish his consultation paper on the internal management of local government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: When we have given due consideration to the issues.

Ministerial Duties

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the proportion of his ministerial duties that has been taken up by (a) the review into the structure and finance of local government and (b) achieving the objectives of the White Paper "This Common Inheritance" during the last (i) month and (ii) six months.

Mr. Heseltine: I do not keep timesheets.

Local Authorities (Government Grants)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the level of Government grant per head of the population for 1990-91 and 1992 in the local authorities of (a) Blyth Valley, (b) Wansbeck, (c) Castle Morpeth and (d) North Tyneside.

Mr. Key: The available information is as follows:

Government grants in 1990-91, consisting of revenue support grant, special grant, specific grants in aggregate external finance, community charge benefit grant and transitional relief grant, per head of relevant population, are £364 in Blyth Valley, £259 in Wansbeck, £236 in Castle Morpeth and £360 in north Tyneside.

Squash Clubs

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the impact of the uniform business rate on commercially operated squash clubs.

Mr. Key: We have received many representations on the new non-domestic rating system. As far as I am aware, however, there has been none on the impact on commercially operated squash clubs.

Local Government

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to consider the methods of organising local government in the United States of America and European Community countries in his review of local government.

Mr. Key: Yes.

Community Charge Reduction Scheme

Sir William Shelton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much community charge payers in Lambeth, who are eligible, will benefit in 1991-92 from the community charge reduction scheme, where the property in which they live paid (a) average rates in 1989-90, (b) half the average rate and (c) quarter the average rate; and what was the average domestic rate in Lambeth in 1989-90.

Mr. Portillo: As a result of the Government's general £140 reduction in headline charges and of the community charge reduction scheme, a couple in Lambeth living in a property of average rateable value for the area will have to pay £568 between them, in a property of half average rateable value £310 between them and in one quarter of average rateable value £181 between them. The average domestic rates bill in Lambeth in 1989-90 was £516.

Property Values

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether his estimate for illustrative purposes of the average value of residential properties included mobile homes; and if he will publish a table showing his estimate of (a) the average value for each region and (b) the difference for each region, and each price range between his estimate and that of the table 2b attached to his answer of 13 May on property transfers, Official Report, columns 21-24;

(2) whether he will publish a table showing, on the basis of the number and average values shown in the answer of 13 May, Official Report, columns 21-24, on property transfers, the amount of council tax payable in each region as a percentage of their value.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 15 May at columns 173-74.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing for each of his seven bands the numbers and average values of privately owned and publicly owned dwellings on the basis of the latest quarterly survey, together with the amount of council tax which would be payable in respect of those dwellings, grossed up, at the seven tax rates in his consultative document.

Mr. Key: The information requested is not available.

Local Tax, Germany

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the yield from local tax of 0·5 per cent. on the value of residential property in Germany.

Mr. Key: None.

Abandoned Trolleys

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities have made use of the powers available under section 99 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not held centrally by my Department. We would expect authorities to use section 99 powers only as a last resort. We would prefer them to enter into voluntary arrangements on trolley control with trolley owners. But if local traders are unwilling to follow the code of guidance on trolley control issued by the Retail Consortium, authorities now have the power to operate a statutory trolley collection scheme.

Train Fire and Pollution

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what pollution has resulted from the derailment and fire on a train carrying kerosene, petrol and diesel at Bradford-on-Tone, near Wellington, Somerset in the early hours of 16 May.

Mr. Trippier: I understand that prompt action by the National Rivers Authority helped to ensure that little pollution ensued.

The spillage of some 50,000 gallons of fuel oil was confined to an area close to the railway and a minor water course. A few small fish were killed. The River Tone was not affected. The NRA will take further action if necessary.

Travelling People

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to publish draft planning guidance on sites for travelling show people.

Mr. Yeo: My Department has today published draft guidance which emphasises to planning authorities that in formulating development plan policies, in development control decisions, and in considering enforcement action, they should take account of travelling show people's need for secure, long-term sites. The text has been sent to a wide range of consultees, who have been invited to submit their views by 19 July. A separate but parallel consultation is being carried out by the Welsh Office.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out (a) the level of central Government grant assumed to be paid to Hertfordshire county council and each district council in the country in the indicative tables of council tax produced by his Department and (b) the level of rate support grant assumed to be paid to each district council for 1991-92 under the community charge.

Mr. Key [holding answer 13 May 1991]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given at column 12 on 29 April to my hon. Friend the Member for Tynemouth (Mr. Trotter).

Urban Development Corporation

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 661, with regard to the number of jobs created in each urban development corporation area, if he will update the table to include information to March 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The totals of permanent jobs created or attracted, net of losses, are as follows:

UDC	Net gain in jobs to March 1991
Black Country	9,381
Bristol	484
Central Manchester	1,496
Leeds	[1]4,605
London Docklands	31,000
Merseyside	4,626
Sheffield	7,787
Teesside	4,500
Trafford Park	3,267
Tyne and Wear	2,544
Total	69,690

[1] The figure previously given for jobs created in the Leeds Development Corporation's area to March 1990—5,241—was a gross figure; the net figure, not available when the reply was given, was 3,964.

Local Authority Spending

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further measures the Government intend to take to strengthen their powers to curb excessive local authority spending.

Mr. Heseltine: Stronger capping powers are necessary to enable the Government to protect all charge payers from excessive spending by local authorities. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his March Budget a fundamental and permanent shift from local to national taxation for the funding of local services. We are determined to ensure that in future the very substantial extra sums of money we are now providing are not wasted in higher spending by local authorities but continue to keep charges down to reasonable levels. All authorities must exercise restraint and play their part in the fight against inflation.

My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and I have therefore decided to introduce before the Whitsun recess a Bill to abolish the exemption from capping of English and Welsh authorities with budgets of less than £15 million, and to bring the Scottish capping powers into line with those which apply in England and Wales. If approved, it would, inter alia, enable my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland for the first time to cap an authority whose year-on-year increase in expenditure he considered to be excessive.

The Bill will also contain provisions enabling properties to be allocated to bands in preparation for the introduction of the new council tax from 1 April 1993.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Refugees

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what he treats as economic migration, in respect of refugees arriving in this country;

(2) if he will list for the last 12 months in respect of asylum seekers deemed to be economic migrants seeking refuge in this country (a) from what country they came and (b) to which country they were returned.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: "Economic migrant" is not a distinct category in the determination of asylum claims. Asylum seekers come to the United Kingdom for various reasons. Economic factors are often significant. Applications fall to be determined according to the criteria laid down in the United Nations convention.

Crime, Leicestershire

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give the total numbers of offences recorded in Leicestershire in 1990 and the numbers that have been cleared up, together with any monthly figures that are available for 1991;

(2) if he will give the annual totals of crimes reported in Leicestershire that involve violence, or the threat of violence, from 1975 to 1990; and if he will give the numbers cleared up as a percentage of the above totals for each year.

Mr. John Patten: The information is published in the annual reports of the chief constable of Leicestershire copies of which from 1980 are available in the Library; and for 1986-89 in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", tables 2.19, 2.20 and 2.21, and for 1989 Cm. 1322, copies of which are also available in the Library. Corresponding information for 1991 is not yet available.

West Midlands Police

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers and civilians were employed in the Walsall H division of the West Midlands police authority for each year since 1978.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is as follows:

Tote Board

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the definition of the role and duties of the chairman of the Horserace Totalisator Board which were given to him prior to his re-appointment.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is for the chairman to determine his role and duties within the confines of the statutory duties and functions of the Horserace Totalisator Board under the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963 and the Horserace Totalisator and Betting Levy Boards Act 1972.

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the annual contribution to racing of the Horserace Totalisator Board in each year since 1964.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The annual contribution to racing by the Horserace Totalisator Board is set out in its report and financial statements for the year laid annually before Parliament, together with that of the levy board.

The figures for the years in question, which have been derived from the reports by the Tote, are as follows:

Year	Total
1964-65	1,048,842
1965-66	885,150
1966-67	964,616
1967-68	875,965
1968-69	631,945
1969-70	626,996
1970-71	195,000
1971-72	195,000
1972-73	270,000
1973-74	501,305
1974-75	410,000
1975-76	441,000
1976-77	488,704
1977-78	625,411
1978-79	988,268
1979-80	1,449,433
1980-81	1,803,176
1981-82	1,834,207
1982-83	1,599,921
1983-84	1,589,094
1984-85	1,768,329
1985-86	2,004,000
1986-87	2,510,000
1987-88	3,172,000
1988-89	4,317,000
1989-90	4,765,000

Notes:

1. The contribution to racing excludes capital contribution to joint project (£1,240,000) in 1989-90 bringing the total contribution to racing to £6,005,000.
2. In the year 1973-74—1977-78 the Tote repaid a levy board loan of £465,605 at an annual rate of £93,121. This repayment has been excluded from the figures for the appropriate year.
3. The Tote paid no levy in the year 1970-71 and 1971-72 and only £75,000 in 1972-73 due to its precarious financial position.

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will arrange to publish the annual accounts of the Horserace Totalisator Board as separate business divisions covering, respectively, the racecourse totalisator, Tote credit and Tote bookmaking.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. It is for the Tote to decide how to publish its accounts, subject to statutory provisions. As well as its annual report to Parliament, the Tote also makes annual returns to Companies House, concerning Tote Credit Ltd. and Tote Bookmakers Ltd. The figures for turnover of the three divisions are set out separately in the annual report. The Tote does not otherwise provide detailed breakdowns of its separate divisions as it regards such information as commercially sensitive.

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions were held with the chairman of the Horserace Totalisator Board to establish business priorities prior to his re-appointment.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is for the Horserace Totalisator Board to establish business priorities for the Tote within the statutory framework set out in the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963 and the Horserace Totalisator and Betting Levy Boards Act 1972.

Defence Component Equipment Exhibition

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of policing the defence component equipment exhibition (a) between 14 and 16 May and (b) during the visit of General Pinochet.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I understand from the West Midlands police that no additional police costs were incurred in the policing of the defence component equipment exhibition between 14 and 16 May.

Football Matches

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has made a decision on the guidance to be given to police authorities on the charges to be made for police officers deployed at football matches under section 15 of the Police Act 1974; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have given careful consideration to the views of Lord Justice Taylor, the Audit Commission, the Home Affairs Committee and interested parties. I have concluded that full economic costs should be charged for police officers deployed on the private property of football clubs. It cannot be right for police budgets to provide a hidden subsidy to the football industry, particularly in view of the considerable costs borne by the police for policing football crowds in public places before and after matches.

However, in view of the difficulties that may be faced by some clubs, particularly those facing considerable costs in meeting Lord Justice Taylor's other recommendations, I am advising police authorities to exercise their discretion and phase in full charges over a period of up to five years where appropriate. The same principles will apply to charges made for special police services at other events.

Guidance will be issued shortly and copies will be placed in the Library.

Adoption

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many adoptions have been approved by his Department for parents wishing to adopt Romanian children; how many have been turned down; how many are in the process of application; and if he will make a statement on adoptions from other countries.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since December 1989, 238 Romanian children have been granted entry clearance with a view to adoption. Ten applications have been refused, 14 withdrawn and 37 are currently outstanding, 25 of which have been made since 1 April 1991. Information about children from other countries granted entry clearance with a view to adoption is not collected centrally.

Asylum

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims for asylum were outstanding as at (a) 31 December 1988, (b) 31 December 1989 and (c) 31 December 1990.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 17 May 1991]: The available information is given in the table.

Number of asylum applications outstanding

Date	Total
As at:
31 December 1988	10,710
31 December 1989	[1]16,190
31 December 1990	[1]34,500

[1] Provisional estimates. The figure for 31 December 1990 is likely to understate due to delays in recording.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Soviet Union

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill, of 14 May, Official Report, column 94, if he will list the specific services offered by overseas trade services staff; and what efforts have been made to overcome the difficulties created by problems in the Soviet economy.

Mr. Sainsbury: The services offered are: market information inquiries; overseas status report service; support for missions, trade fairs and overseas seminars; new products from Britain; export intelligence service; export market research scheme; overseas project fund; consultancy under the export initiative, as well as practical advice. These are described in the brochure, "The Export Initiative", a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, further to his reply of 13 May, Official Report, column 39, on ECGD cover for export credits for the Soviet Union, if he will take into account in his review the competition faced by firms in the United Kingdom from firms in other countries whose Governments do not intend to withdraw cover.

Mr. Sainsbury: I can confirm that the review will take account, inter alia, of the cover position of the other export credit agencies.

Export Restrictions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the enhanced proliferation control initiative launched by President Bush in November 1990 had any impact on British exports.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 20 May 1991]: There is no evidence to indicate that the United States initiative has had any direct impact on British exports.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for how many of the chemicals denoted as precursors of concern by the Australia Group Her Majesty's Government do not require export licences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The Australia Group has identified on its warning list 50 chemical weapons precursors of concern, of which 37 are specifically subject to control under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1989 (as amended). Controls were further strengthened last year by addition of an end-use control which renders the export of any chemical from the United Kingdom subject to control, where the exporter knows or suspects that it is for use for chemical or biological weapons purposes.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on British armaments exported since 1979 which were (a) retained by the designated end user and (b) illegally transferred to persons or organisations not designated as end users by the export certificate.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 14 May 1991]: It has been the policy of this and successive Governments not to reveal details of individual licence applications.

Company Liquidations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will propose legislation under which the auditor of a creditor company will be prevented from acting as the receiver or liquidator of a company owing money to that creditor.

Mr. Redwood: I have no such plans.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to propose legislation under which the firms auditing a company will not be allowed to have one of their partners appointed as a liquidator.

Mr. Redwood: I have no such plans.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the statutory arrangements for monitoring the work of insolvency practitioners.

Mr. Redwood: The insolvency service monitors the estate accounting of insolvency practitioners to seek to ensure that funds are paid into the insolvency services account by them in accordance with the legislation. The insolvency service also monitors compliance by insolvency practitioners with the requirements to report on the conduct of directors under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any proposals under which senior partners from accountancy firms criticised by his Department's inspectors will be required to attend courses on business ethics.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Satellite Television

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals have been made by the European Community for the harmonisation of satellite television-receiving equipment, what will be the impact of these proposals on individuals who have such equipment in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The European Commission is consulting interested parties on how to follow up directive 86/529/EEC which imposes the MAC family of transmission standards on high-power direct-to-home satellite broadcasts. Currently the majority of viewers receive satellite broadcasts in PAL from medium-power satellites. It is understood that the Commission will make its proposals known shortly. The Government are not in favour of any regulations which impose on viewers the obligation to purchase new or additional equipment in order to receive the services they currently enjoy. The Government believe that consumers should be free to invest in new technology when they decide the time is right.

WALES

Labour Statistics

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those travel-to-work areas, together with the respective percentages, where 40 per cent. or more of employees are employed in production.

Mr. David Hunt: The most recent estimates of employees in employment in travel-to-work areas are from the September 1989 census of employment. The table shows those Welsh travel-to-work areas where 40 per cent. or more of employees are employed in production (divisions 1-4 of Standard Industrial Classification, Revised 1980) industries:

TTWA	Employees employed in production as percentage of all employees
Neath and Port Talbot	42·7
Wrexham	41·5
Merthyr and Rhymney	41·4
Llanelli	40·1

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of all employees in Wales are employed in (a) production and (b) services.

Mr. David Hunt: In December 1990, it is estimated that 26·7 per cent. and 66·5 per cent. of all employees in employment in Wales were employed in the production (divisions 1-4 of Standard Industrial Classification, Revised 1980) and services (divisions 6-9 of SIC 1980) industries respectively.

Abandoned Trolleys

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many local authorities have made use of the powers available under section 99 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This information is not held centrally.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for 21 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Antarctica

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cambridgeshire, South-East (Mr. Paice), Official Report, of 10 May, column 604, whether Her Majesty's Government now intend to pursue the objective of creating an international wilderness reserve in Antarctica.

The Prime Minister: The Government have welcomed the draft text from the Madrid meeting. Article I of the draft protocol would designate Antarctica as a natural reserve, devoted to peace and science. We support that designation.

General Pinochet

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Prime Minister how much official expenditure has been incurred in connection with General Pinochet's visit to the United Kingdom.

The Prime Minister: The visit to this country by General Pinochet was a private visit. No additional official expenditure was incurred.

"Kill the Messenger"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will acquire for the library at No. 10 Downing street a copy of Sir Bernard Ingham's "Kill the Messenger".

The Prime Minister [holding answer 20 May 1991]: Sir Bernard has already sent a copy of his book to my office.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Zimbabwe (Retired Police)

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to Zimbabwe about the fall in value of both the pensions and the Zimbabwe funds paid to former members of the British South Africa Police who served there throughout their active careers and are now living in retirement in Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I understand that the Zimbabwe Government are meeting their legal obligations on the payment of pensions to their ex-public servants. No representations have therefore been made to them about this. The question of exchange control is an internal matter for the Zimbabwe Government, but we take every opportunity to remind them of the hardship which their controls can cause for people who wish to transfer funds from Zimbabwe.

Refugees (Iraq)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Iran is paying for the transport of British aid to refugees in Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: No. The costs of transport for supplies of British aid are paid by the ODA.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Trade Statistics

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, further to his answer to the right hon. Member for Blaby (Mr. Lawson), Official Report, 17 April, columns 179-80, if he will provide the same information for each year since 1979 at constant 1990 prices.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The current account balance is not available at constant prices.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the gross domestic product at constant prices in each year since April 1979, excluding North sea oil and gas production.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Figures of the output measure of the gross domestic product at constant 1985 factor cost excluding the contribution of the oil and gas extraction industry are available in index form only as shown.

Property Transfers

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, further to his answer of 13 May, Official Report, columns 21-24, concerning residential property transfers, whether he will publish a table giving for the latest quarterly samples information on the same basis as in table I in his reply; and if he will add an estimate of the number and average value of transactions where the price was less than £40,000 and more than £160,000.

Mr. Maude: Owing to the size and structure of the sample used in the survey of property transactions, it is not possible to provide reliable quarterly estimates. The following table gives the other information requested:

Source: Survey of property transactions 1989 and 1990.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, further to his answer of 13 May, Official Report, columns 21-24, concerning residential property transfers, whether transfers of residential property under category L of the Stamp Duty (Exempt Instruments) Regulations 1987 are included in his figures; and whether he will provide an estimate of the proportion of (a) transfers at nominal value between connected persons and disposals and transfers of part shares in a house, (b) council house sales under the right-to-buy scheme, and (c) other miscellaneous transactions.

Mr. Maude: Transfers to which category L of the Stamp Duty (Exempt Instruments) Regulations 1987 apply are not transfers on sale and are not generally included in the survey of property transactions which was used to provide the estimates given in the answer of 13 May.

As regards the second half of the question, it is not possible to give estimates from the survey of property transactions for each of the categories requested.

Heathrow Airport (VAT-free Goods)

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the terms of the agreement between Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and BAA whereby goods will be sold at Heathrow airport free of VAT.

Mr. Norman Lamont: There is no agreement as such. Her Majesty's Customs and Excise are prepared to consider applications from any airport operator for VAT-free shopping facilities where it can be demonstrated to Customs' satisfaction that sales will be restricted to outbound passengers who will export their purchases. There is no question of goods being sold free of VAT for consumption at airports or to passengers on domestic flights.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all those Inland Revenue forms and associated documentation which (a) require to be completed and (b) require to be read as a result of his proposals to tax mobile telephones.

Mr. Maude: There are no new forms to be completed because the tax charge on mobile telephones is not new. The Budget proposal for a standard benefit charge on mobile telephones, extended to include those fitted in company cars, simplifies the records which employers need to keep.

As part of the normal Budget information service to employers, they have been issued with guidance on how to complete the existing return for benefits in kind—the form P11D.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the use of mobile telephones by size of firm; and if he will give the proportion of the total number of mobile telephones in use by employment size bands in firms with (a) one to two, (b) three to five, (c) six to 10, (d) 11 to 19, (e) 20 to 49 and (f) over 50 employees.

Mr. Maude: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the approximate number of (a) 1990-91 P11D forms, (b) 1991-92 tax code forms and (c) 1991-92 P11D forms that are required to be completed or acted upon by employers as a result of his proposal to tax mobile telephones.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend's Budget proposals for mobile telephones will not require employer returns (forms P11D) for 1990-91 since they do not take effect until the following year. For 1991-92 the extension of the benefits in kind charge to mobile telephones in cars will also not increase the number of P11Ds required. This is because a return is already needed for mobile telephones not fixed in cars, which are provided by employers and subject to private use, and because company cars are subject to a benefits-in-kind charge in any case whether or not they have a mobile telephone fitted. As a transitional effect of the proposals, there will be an increase in amended PAYE tax codes for 1991-92, but a reliable estimate of the number involved is not possible.

Personal Allowances

Mr. Clay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much the value of income tax personal allowances has increased in real terms since 1979; and how this amount has been distributed to each band of income taxpayers, both in total and in amount per taxpayer.

Mr. Maude: Since 1978-79, the personal allowance has increased in real terms by about 27 per cent., the married man's allowance by 24 per cent. and the age-related allowances by at least 16 per cent. If, for 1991-92, the personal, married couple's and higher age-related allowances were reduced to levels equivalent to the 1978-79 allowances indexed to 1991-92, total income tax liability would be increased by some £5 billion, distributed as follows:

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Clay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing (a) the total cost of mortgage interest tax relief in 1991-92, (b) the average value of relief per mortgagor and (c) the numbers receiving mortgage relief broken down in the income ranges, under £4,000, £4,000 to £5,000, £5,000 to £6,000, £6,000 to £7,000, £7,000 to £8,000, £8,000 to £9,000, £9,000 to £10,000, £10,000 to £12,000, £12,000 to £15,000, £15,000 to £20,000, £20,000 to £25,000, £25,000 to £30,000 and over £30,000.

Mr. Maude: Estimates are based on projected information from the 1988-89 survey of personal incomes and the 1989 family expenditure survey and are provisional. They are also based on the assumptions that interest rates remain at their current levels for the rest of 1991-92.

Goodman Meat

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what gifts Customs staff in Northern Ireland have received from interests associated with the Goodman Meat firm; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Customs have no evidence that any members of their staff in Northern Ireland have received gifts from Goodman Meat firms.

Income Tax

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the yield in 1991-92 and 1992-93 from introducing a new rate of income tax of 50 per cent. on incomes above £50,000.

Mr. Maude: The estimated revenue yield is about £¾ billion in 1991-92 and £1¼ billion in 1992-93. These estimates take no account of any behavioural effects that might result from such a change.

PSA Services

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the progress of the arrangements introduced in 1990-91 for payment by Government Department clients for works services supplied by PSA Services.

Mr. Mellor: Arrangements for payment were introduced on schedule from 1 April 1990. However, some teething problems with the invoicing arrangements have meant that client Departments have not been able to complete all the normal checks on some of the invoices presented to them by PSAS. In order to ensure that amounts paid by PSAS to contractors on clients' behalf are brought to account in appropriation accounts for 1990-91, interim arrangements have been made. Under these, Departments will pay from their votes, as adjustable advances, amounts shown on PSAS invoices, provided that they can identify the expenditure as relating to buildings or projects for which they are responsible; that they are aware that work has been done, or services provided, in respect of the building or project concerned; and that the amount charged is not grossly excessive. Any payments of this nature will be identified in a note to the appropriation accounts for 1990-91. PSAS will take any significant balance of expenditure reflected in invoices still unmet to its own Vote. Customer Departments and PSAS will pursue outstanding queries and make any necessary adjustments as early as possible in 1991-92. Such adjustments will be noted in the appropriate accounts for that year.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report the names and addresses of honorary British consuls in the United States and honorary American consuls in the United Kingdom.

The position of the honorary consul in Norfolk, Virginia is vacant. Our embassy in Washington is seeking the approval of the State Department for our proposed replacement.

There are no American honorary appointments in the United Kingdom.

Polish Citizens (Visas)

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will now change the arrangements for the issue of visas to Polish citizens wishing to come to the United Kingdom, so that visas can be obtained by post instead of requiring personal attendance at the British embassy in Warsaw to obtain the necessary documents.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: It is possible for anyone to apply for a visa without personal attendance, by using the services of Orbis or another recognised travel agent. This is safer and more reliable then the postal service, and the cost is comparable with that of registered mail.

Iraq (Missing Journalists)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has made any representations to the Iranian Government to seek their assistance in finding Nicholas Della Casa, Rosanna Della Casa and Charles Maxwell, British journalists missing in Iraq.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Yes. The British embassy in Tehran has asked Iranian authorities on a number of occasions for help in finding the missing journalists.

There is no evidence that the journalists entered Iran.

The Gulf

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to satisfy himself that the provisions of Security Council resolution No. 687 in relation to the Gulf are being adhered to.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 20 May 1991]: We and other members of the Security Council keep Iraqi compliance with the council's resolution 687 under close review.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs with whom he has discussed proposals to use the US nuclear emergency search team to verify Iraqi compliance with United Nations Security Council resolution 687.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 20 May 1991]: Any proposals to use personnel in support of the work of the IAEA and the Special Commission to implement UNSCR 687 are for discussion between the IAEA and the Special Commission and the United States authorities.

British Embassy, Teheran

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the visa section of the British embassy in Teheran to resume operations.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 20 May 1991]: We have no plans to open a visa section in our embassy in Teheran.

Ballistic Missiles

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those states identified by Her Majesty's Government as (a) already possessing ballistic missiles and (b) having the potential to build ballistic missiles.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The following countries are known or believed to possess ballistic missiles:

Afghanistan
Belgium
Bulgaria
China
Czechoslovakia
Egypt
France
Germany
Italy
Korea, Republic of Libya
Netherlands
Poland
Romania
Saudi Arabia
Syria
Hungary
Iran
Iraq
Israel
USSR
United Kingdom
United States of America
Yemen

In addition, North Korea, which is not recognised as a state by Her Majesty's Government, is believed to have deployed ballistic missiles.

In addition, the following countries have in the past shown an interest in developing ballistic missiles.

Argentina
Brazil
India
Pakistan
South Africa

Albania

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about resuming diplomatic relations with Albania.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The Albanian Foreign Minister called on me on 13 May. We discussed the question of the resumption of diplomatic relations between the United Kingdom and Albania. We hope to give an early reply to the Albanian offer to restore diplomatic relations.

IAEA Safeguards

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek to include on the agenda of the next meeting of the international organisations in Vienna a discussion of the proposals by ambassador Tetsuya Endo to extend the scope and increase the budgets of the International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards budgets.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 20 May 1991]: Safeguards are on the provisional agenda of the June IAEA board of governors meeting and any related issues will no doubt be discussed then. We are studying the issues involved and will carefully consider all proposals.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Hackney Education Directorate

4. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when the Minister next plans to visit Hackney education directorate.

Mr. Eggar: I have arranged to visit Hackney on 13 June. I am also meeting the leader of the council on 6 June to discuss the action plan to improve the education service in Hackney.

Education and Training

13. Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has to increase the proportion of students in education and training post-16 years.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short).

Student Unions

15. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the responses he has received in connection with his examination of the future of student unions.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I am giving careful consideration to the various responses which I have received as a result of my letter of 29 November 1990. As the consultations are still in progress, it would be inappropriate for me to comment further.

Cricket

16. Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any further proposals to promote the playing of cricket in schools.

Mr. Atkins: Both schools and local sports clubs have an important role to play in the development of cricket for young people. Physical education in the national curriculum will be compulsory up to the age of 16 with effect from September 1992 and I am urging teachers and coaches to ensure that cricket is one of the competitive team games which is encouraged.

Teachers

17. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to change the basis of funding teachers' salaries under the local management of schools.

Mr. Fallon: Pupil-led funding is a basic principle of local management and we have no plans to change that. However, we have said that we shall review the effects of our policy on the treatment of salary costs as the transitional arrangements governing the change from historic to formula funding unwind.

25. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to encourage women to return to teaching; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: We are already encouraging women to return to teaching through our grants for education support and training (GEST) programme, which supports LEA measures to recruit returners and mature entrants to teaching. In 1991-92 about £10 million is available for this purpose and we have already earmarked a further £10 million for expenditure in 1992-93. Most potential returners are women who may need particular help to enable them to re-enter teaching. Many GEST-funded activities are directed specifically towards providing such help.

29. Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on morale in the teaching profession.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend and I have taken every opportunity to praise the dedication and achievements of teachers. The Government's intention to establish a pay review body for teachers recognises that commitment and will give practical effect to our desire to enhance the status of the profession. The interim advisory committee of school teachers' pay and conditions has noted an improvement in morale as the national curriculum is successfully introduced and the benefits of local management of schools start to be felt.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average length of time prospective teachers have to wait before being vetted for suitability for specific teaching posts.

Mr. Fallon: Recruitment of teachers, including deciding an applicant's suitability for a specific post, is a matter for individual employers: LEAs, and the governing bodies of schools and other establishments. The Department does not collect statistics about the length of time taken by employers' recruitment procedures.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teachers are currently employed in sixth form colleges organised under school regulations.

Mr. Fallon: The number of qualified teachers employed in sixth form colleges in England in January 1990 was 7,278.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his Department's latest estimate of the number of qualified teachers who are not currently teaching.

Mr. Fallon: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what his Department estimates to be the average cost per year of (a) a primary school teacher and (b) a secondary school teacher.

Mr. Eggar: In April 1991 the estimated average cost, including employers' on-costs, of employing a primary school teacher outside London was some £19,340. The comparable figure for a secondary school teacher was about £21,160.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the number of teachers employed in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools on a yearly basis since 1970.

Mr. Fallon: The number of qualified full-time and part-time teachers employed in primary and secondary schools in England for the period 1970 to 1990, the latest date for which information is available, is given in the table.

Number of qualified teachers employed in maintained primary and secondary schools in England 1970 to 1990

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the latest figures for the number of full and part-time teachers employed by each of the local education authorities in England.

Mr. Fallon: The latest figures relate to January 1990 and are contained in the DES Statistical Bulletin 5/91, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Teesside Polytechnic

18. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the proposed linking of Teesside polytechnic with the university of Durham.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I understand that discussions are continuing between the polytechnic and the university about their joint plan to extend higher education opportunities in Teesside.

City Technology Colleges

19. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current progress and development of city technology colleges.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The CTC programme continues to make excellent progress. By this September 13 colleges will be up and running and I announced plans for new colleges in Bristol and Derby only last month. CTCs have proved extremely popular with pupils and their parents.

A-levels

20. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy towards the position of the A-level in the curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

21. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to broaden the A-level examinations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: As is clear from the White Paper, "Education and Training for the 21st Century", which we published yesterday, the Government remain committed to maintaining A-levels and the standards that they represent.

Grant-maintained Schools

22. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools are grant maintained; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: There are 62 grant-maintained schools in operation. To date we have approved applications from a further 16 schools.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to increase the number of grant-maintained schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The number of schools seeking and acquiring grant-maintained status is rising very rapidly. To date we have approved 78 applications. A further 74 schools have either published proposals or are committed to doing so following ballots in favour of applying for GM status. Seventy-nine ballots are pending. In the last three months alone, 49 schools have voted to apply for grant-maintained status.

We shall continue to make clear that we believe schools generally should consider the opportunities afforded by grant-maintained status.

Stratford School

23. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what funds are being made available to Stratford school following the granting of grant-maintained status.

Mr. Eggar: The level of annual maintenance grant for Stratford for 1991-92 has not been finalised. The proposed figure, issued to the school and to Newham local education authority for comment, is £1,551,435. Stratford school has received £52,950 in transitional grant. The school will receive special purpose grant (development) of £31,700 for the financial year 1991-92. A formula allocation of capital grant of up to £25,900 is available to the school for small capital works and the purchase of equipment. The governing body has made bids for capital grant for specific capital projects. These bids are being considered.

Further Education

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has received any communications from the directors of further education colleges concerning his statement on 21 March.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have received a large number of letters from principals of further education colleges since 21 March. The great majority have expressed support for my proposals for the reorganisation of further education.

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list all local education authorities in England in rank order showing the percentages of 16-year-olds and 17-year-olds participating in full-time and full-time plus part-time day education for 1989-90.

Mr. Eggar: The information is as follows:

Infant Education

26. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the treatment of voluntary aided schools with respect to nursery provision.

Mr. Eggar: Where the governors of a voluntary aided school wish to establish a new nursery unit, they must publish statutory proposals under section 13 of the Education Act 1980. In considering whether these should be approved, the Secretary of State will take into account the circumstances and needs of the school and its surrounding area and the level of grant aid being sought.

Sir John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will introduce legislation imposing a statutory duty upon local education authorities to provide for the education of all children to begin in the autumn term of the school year in which they attain their fifth birthday; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No. This country is almost alone in providing compulsory education from as early as five. We believe that the requirements of younger children and their parents are best met by a diversity of provision.

Middle Schools (National Curriculum)

28. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements he has made to monitor the implementation of the national curriculum in middle schools.

Mr. Eggar: The implementation of the national curriculum in middle schools is being monitored by Her Majesty's inspectorate and by local education authorities.

Schools Expenditure

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will list all local education authorities in England in rank order of central administration expenditure per school pupil per year, starting with the highest spending authority, for the latest year for which figures are available;

(2) if he will list all local education authorities in England in rank order of total combined expenditure per school pupil per year on school meals, central administration, debt charges or revenue contributions to capital outlay, for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Fallon: The data for 1991-92, drawn from local education authorities' budget statements published under section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988, are still being collected and analysed. I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Schools (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what proportion of the education capital expenditure authorised for schools maintained by local education authorities is attributable to the need to replace and/or refurbish premises which are no longer fit for their purpose in the current planning period;

(2) what additional capital expenditure has been authorised in 1990-91 and 1991-92 in order that local education authorities may provide maintained schools with the accommodation and equipment required to introduce the national curriculum effectively.

Mr. Fallon: Of the £472 million of annual capital guidelines distributed to local education authorities in respect of capital expenditure at county and voluntary controlled schools in 1991-92, £109 million was distributed by formula specifically to contribute towards new replacement and refurbishment work in schools, and a substantial proportion of the balance will also cover such work. Of the £83 million available for grants for capital building work in voluntary aided and special agreement schools in 1991-92 £7·8 million is for new major improvement and replacement work, and a substantial proportion of the balance will likewise go towards such work.

The substantial increases in the amount available for distribution as capital allocations and annual capital guidelines in the last two years will assist local education authorities to provide maintained schools with the accommodation and equipment they require to introduce the national curriculum effectively.

Education Costs (Northumberland)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average cost of educating (a) a primary school pupil and (b) a secondary school pupil in the local education authorities within Northumberland.

Mr. Fallon: In 1988-89, the latest year for which information is available, information returned by Northumberland local education authority indicates that its average net institutional expenditure was £1,090 per nursery and primary pupil and £1,630 per secondary pupil. Net institutional expenditure covers the cost of salaries and wages, premises and certain supplies and services. It does not include the costs of central administration, school meals and capital expenditure.

Refugees

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science which local authorities have applied, under section 210 of the Education Reform Act 1988, for a grant to (a) finance existing provision for refugees or displaced persons living in camps or reception centres and (b) finance provision for 1991-92; how many of (a) and (b) have received a grant; what is the amount of grant allocated to each local authority; and if he will review the grant available for these purposes in the light of the increased number of asylum seekers entering the United Kingdom in 1990.

Mr. Eggar: In 1991-92 Derbyshire, Kirklees, Oxfordshire, Richmond and Surrey sought continued grant to support existing provision for refugees or displaced persons living in camps or reception centres. Camden, Hackney, Hillingdon and Lambeth applied for grant to support new work starting in 1991-92. Richmond also applied for grant to expand its existing provision. The expenditure to be supported in these authorities is as follows:

Derbyshire	74·2
Kirklees	84·0
Oxfordshire	65·9
Richmond	56·7
Surrey	40·9
(b)
Camden	36·3
Hackney	34·4
Hillingdon	19·7
Lambeth	77·7

Mixed-age Classes

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of third-year infants are in mixed-age classes where seven-year-olds are in a minority.

Mr. Fallon: The information requested is not available.

Conductive Education

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from the south-east retail group of the Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd. about the threatened closure of a positive achievement through conductive education centre; what reply is being sent; if any action will be taken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: Representations have been received from the south-east retail group of the Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd. concerning the positive achievement through conductive education centre. A reply has been sent which has made clear that, whilst the Government believe that conductive education for those children who are able to benefit from it should in time be made available in this country, this is a matter for local provision.

Thames Polytechnic (Merger)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science for what reasons he has not approved the merger of the South West London college and Thames polytechnic.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. and learned Friend has consulted South West London college and other institutions about advice from the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council that student preferences should be taken into account in determining the future location of work at the college. He hopes to make a final decision about the future of the college shortly.

Voluntary Aided and Controlled Sector

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has for the voluntary aided and the voluntary controlled sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: We are firmly committed to the dual system of county and voluntary schools and we value the contribution of the churches to state education. Overall capital expenditure on church schools on a per pupil basis increased by 80 per cent. in real terms between 1979-80 and 1990-91.

We have no proposals to make significant changes to the status of the voluntary schools sector, beyond the plans announced by my right hon. and learned Friend on 21 March to transfer voluntary sixth form colleges to a new sector of post-16 education from April 1993. These colleges will retain their voluntary status.

HEALTH

Northumberland Area Services

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in (a) Blyth Valley and (b) Northumberland were received into local authority care where the specific cause was family homelessness, in each year since 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Figures for the numbers of children in care of local authorities are not available centrally for county districts. The latest figures available about children in care in Northumberland are for the year ending 31 March 1990.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the numbers of beds available to national health service patients within the Northumberland health authority.

Mr. Dorrell: At 31 March 1990, the latest date for which this information is held centrally, there were 3,014 such beds.

Since 1979, the number of beds has fallen by 25 per cent. but the number of patients treated has increased by around 17 per cent.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names, addresses and qualifications of the directors of the Northumberland Ambulance Trust.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Trust boards are made up of equal numbers of executive and non-executive directors and a chairman. The appointment of the executive directors is a matter for the trust.

The chairman and non-executive members of the Northumbria ambulance national health service trust are:

Mr. Roy Stewart
Mr. P. Moth
Dr. J. Higson

Mr. A. Ferguson
Mr. A. Knight
Mr. D. Smith

The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the NHS trust for further details.

Convalescent Homes

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on (a) the provision of residential homes for short-term post-operative surgical convalescence and (b) the availability of advice and information on the placing of patients in such homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: We have received no such representations. Guidance on discharge procedures is provided for local health authorities in circular HC(89)5 "Discharge of Patients from Hospital" and its accompanying booklet of good practice, copies of which are available in the Library.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the awards given to voluntary organisations under the section 64 procedure for the financial years 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Dorrell: In 1990-91 grants totalling £14·8 million were awarded under the section 64 general scheme to 262 voluntary organisations. This represents a real-terms increase of 43 per cent. over 1978-79. Details of the grants are given in the following table.

In 1991-92 we plan to increase the level of support to the voluntary sector under the section 64 general scheme by a further £1·1 million to £15·9 million. So far grants to the value of £11 million have been awarded to 238 voluntary organisations. Further grants will be awarded throughout the year. Existing "core" grants which help to fund headquarters running costs will generally be held more or less steady to enable us to extend the support which we can give to the voluntary sector through new core grants and project funding. Significant core grants have already been renewed for such bodies as Alcohol Concern, Age Concern, MIND and the Disabled Living Foundation. Major new projects funded this year under the section 64 general scheme include ones undertaken by Mental Health Foundation—Homeless in London (£80,000), National Institute for Social Work (£55,000), Stillbirth and Neonatal Death Society (£27,000) and East London Asian Family Counselling (£24,000).

These figures and the number and range of organisations supported clearly demonstrate Ministers' commitment to the voluntary sector. They also underline the Government's recognition of the special and valuable contribution which voluntary organisations bring to the provision of health and personal social services.

Gulf Casualties

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 397, when he expects to receive and validate the final figures from regional health authorities in respect of Gulf casualties.

Mr. Dorrell: Regional health authorities have been asked to submit final figures for the costs they incurred in making preparations to treat casualties. We expect that final figures will be received and validated within a few weeks.

Nurses' Grading

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects nursing clinical grading appeals in Northumberland health authority to be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Information is not held centrally on district level appeals.

Creuzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps his Department is taking to establish a counselling service for those individuals who may have been infected with Creuzfeldt-Jakob disease by the use of contaminated growth hormone, and the families of those individuals;

(2) what steps his Department has taken to notify all those individuals who may have been infected with Creuzfeldt-Jakob disease from injections of contaminated growth hormones of the nature of their position;

(3) if his Department has successfully identified all those individuals who may have become infected with Creuzfeldt-Jakob disease from injection of contaminated growth hormone.

Mr. Dorrell: Those at risk were the 1,908 patients treated with human pituitary derived growth hormone in clinical trials conducted between 1959 and 1985. From records kept of these trials, 1,699 patients have been identified as currently resident in Great Britain. Of these, 80 per cent. have been traced and their general practitioner notified. We expect that a substantial number of the remaining patients will be traced over the next few weeks.

The GPs are asked if they wish to advise their patients of the risk or if they would prefer the approach to be made by hospital specialists. If the doctors requested further help with counselling we would consider what additional assistance we could provide.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations and practices have been instituted since 1985 to ensure that those infected with diseases such as Creuzfeldt-Jakob disease through the use of contaminated products are informed at the earliest possible opportunity of their condition.

Mr. Dorrell: These instances are rare and the complex clinical and ethical issues that determine how best to proceed need to be considered in each instance. Generally, we believe that the doctors involved in treatment are best placed to decided when and how to convey such information.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals have been infected with Creuzfeldt-Jakob disease by the use of contaminated growth hormone.

Mr. Dorrell: At present, there is no specific test for Creuzfeldt-Jakob disease (CJD) in the living patient and diagnosis can be confirmed only in post-mortem histological examination. Post-mortems carried out on 110 patients treated in the trials of human-derived growth hormone show that six died with CJD. I am advised that the great majority of the remaining patients treated in the trials are unlikely to have been infected.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department has successfully identified all those batches of growth hormone that were infected by Creuzfeldt-Jakob disease.

Mr. Dorrell: On the basis of current knowledge it is not possible to identify which batches of human-derived growth hormone used in the clinical trials conducted between 1959 and 1985 were infected with Creutzfeldt Jakob disease. Human-derived material has not been used since 1985, when a genetically engineered hormone treatment became available.

General Practitioners

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many general practitioners in Britain with over 3,000 patients on their list are working single-handed;

(2) how many general practitioners in Britain have over 3,000 patients on their list.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: At 1 October 1990, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 2,585 general practitioners in England with a personal list size of over 3,000 patients, of whom 373 are working single-handed. The information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries for State for Wales, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will consider amending the regulations to provide that the maximum number of patients for whom any doctor can receive payment is 2,500.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No. List sizes have been falling steadily for a number of years, with the average now below 2,000.

Eye Tests

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of eye tests taken by men over 65 years and women over 60 years for each year since 1987.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not collected on the age of adults receiving national health service sight tests.

Medical Products (Contamination)

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has taken since 1985 to screen all products such as growth hormones for contamination by serious disease.

Mr. Dorrell: The Medicines Control Agency, which is responsible for the grant of licences under the Medicines Act 1968, requires that applicants for licences supply scientific information to support the application. The agency has issued guidance on the selection of human and animal-derived materials used in the manufacture of medicinal products. Manufacturers are expected to apply appropriate criteria for selecting the sources of such material including screening tests so that contaminated material may be excluded. The agency evaluates data submitted in support of applications with advice, when required, from expert advisory committees set up under the Medicines Act.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement regarding the nature and extent of screening of blood products by the blood transfusion service for contamination by highly infectious diseases.

Mr. Dorrell: In the interests of maintaining the safety of the blood supply, all potential donors are advised not to donate blood or plasma if they consider that they are in one of the high-risk groups for infectious diseases. Additional specific groups are also excluded—such as recipients of human growth hormone, although there is no evidence that Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease infection is transmitted by blood or blood products.

In addition, all blood and plasma donations collected by the National Blood Transfusion Service are routinely tested for HIV 1 and HIV 2, hepatitis B and syphilis. These arrangements are kept under review in the light of any new developments. The Blood Transfusion Service is currently evaluating tests for the hepatitis C antibody and it is expected that routine tests for hepatitis C will be introduced from September 1991.

All factor VIII and IX produced from screened and tested donations are heat treated to inactivate HIV and other viruses. Blood itself cannot be heat treated.

Schoolchildren (Blood Lead Levels)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by place and date all his Department's surveys into lead levels in the blood of schoolchildren since 1979.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department has not carried out any such surveys. However, surveys have been commissioned by the Department of the Environment (DOE) and the Medical Research Council (MRC) which is the main agency through which the Government support bio-medical and clinical research in the United Kingdom.

The DOE has published the results of the surveys it has commissioned in its Pollution Report Series "United Kingdom Blood Lead Monitoring Programme, 1984-1987". Report No. 28 (1990) summarises all the results for 1984-87. Details of the results for 1984-1986 are given in reports 22, 24 and 26. Copies of all these reports are available in the Library.

The surveys show a progressive fall in children's blood lead levels.

Agency Status

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his Department under the "next steps" initiative; and whether he has identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Mr. Dorrell: The NHS Estates Agency was launched on 1 April 1991. In a reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Nuneaton (Mr. Stevens) on 17 April at column 204, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced that the Medicines Control Agency had been identified as a candidate for executive agency status. Further candidates are being considered.

Romanian Children

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children from Romania his Department has recommended for entry clearance for adoption in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Since December 1989, the Department has recommended to the Home Office that entry clearance should be authorised in respect of 206

Romanian children for adoption in England. Information relating to Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Northern Ireland, for Scotland and for Wales.

Cleveland Child Abuse Inquiry

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which categories of persons or bodies received funding from his Department in respect of the inquiry into child abuse in Cleveland in 1987; what were the purposes for which funding was made available; what was the total amount of expenditure incurred by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department gave funds of £300,000 each to the Cleveland county council and the Northern regional health authority in respect of the inquiry into child abuse in 1987. The payments were made in recognition of the exceptional length of the inquiry to assist the local authority and health authority with the costs which they incurred; the total expenditure incurred by the Department including these payments which can be separately identified was about £1·25 million.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information on the salaries of the executive directors of national health service trusts will be included in the trusts' annual reports.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 20 May 1991]: Annual financial statements for each trust will show the number of employees, including executive directors, receiving remuneration of over £40,000 in bands of £5,000. These statements will also show the emoluments of the highest paid board member separately and the number of board members receiving emoluments in bands of £5,000 with no lower limit.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits and Allowances

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the saving if no social security, housing, or welfare benefits other than child benefit were paid to any single person whose income was more than £65 per week and to couples married or otherwise whose income was more than £130 per week.

Mr. Jack: The estimated savings in the income-related benefits are in the table.

	Savings (£ million)
Income Support	5
Family Credit	210
Housing Benefit	240
Community Charge Benefit	60

Comparable details are not held for benefits which are not income related and it is not therefore possible to give estimates for them.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the total anticipated costs of the Benefits Agency, including uniforms and office alterations.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Marginal Tax Rates

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the numbers of lower-paid families with and without children showing one and two-parent families with children separately, whose marginal tax rates, including benefit withdrawal, will be (a) 90 to 100 per cent., (b) 80 to 90 per cent., (c) 70 to 80 per cent., (d) 60 to 70 per cent., (e) 50 to 60 per cent. and (f) 40 to 50 per cent., taking into account the tax changes for 1991-92.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is set out in the table.

Claimants, Blyth Valley

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many adults in (a) Blyth Valley or (b) Northumberland over the age of 18 years were in receipt of income support for 1990-91.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many poll tax payers in the Blyth Valley district council area will lose rebate arising out of the proposed reduction in the poll tax.

Miss Widdecombe: This information is not available.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are receiving family credit in the areas covered by his Department's Blyth Valley offices.

Mr. Jack: The administration of family credit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Income Support

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many income support claimants had direct deductions for gas, electricity, rent arrears, poll tax arrears, water rates and social fund loans in 1990.

Miss Widdecombe: Figures for May 1989 are contained in table 10 of the "Department of Social Security Income Support Statistics Annual Statistical Inquiry, May 1989", a copy of which is in the Library. There were no deductions for community charge at that time. Figures for the numbers of claimants with deductions in May 1990 will be published shortly.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families with children were in receipt of income support in each year since 1979.

Miss Widdecombe: Income support was introduced in April 1988 when it replaced supplementary benefit. The numbers of families with children under the age of 16 years receiving those benefits since 1979 is in the table:

	Thousands
November 1979	477
December 1980	567

May 1987	1,138
May 1988	1,119
May 1989	1,106

Source: Annual Statistical Enquiries.
Note: There was no Annual Statistical Enquiry in 1985: the one due in December that year was deferred until February 1986.

Social Fund

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the gross and net budgets of the social fund for each year since its introduction for (a) the Greenock and Port Glasgow local offices, (b) local offices in Strathclyde and (c) local offices in Scotland; and if he will break down these budgets into (i) crisis loans, (ii) budgeting loans and (iii) community care grants and showing the change in real terms since 1988-89.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current practice of the mobility allowance unit in respect of the period for which mobility allowance to disabled people is awarded; and what is the relationship between the period of award and eligibility for the mobility scheme.

Mr. Scott: Decisions on eligibility and the duration of an award are for independent adjudicating authorities in accordance with the appropriate legislation. The minimum period awarded is one year and the maximum is until the disabled person reaches age 80.

The minimum period of award required to take advantage of the motability scheme is three years for a leased vehicle. To purchase on hire purchase requires an award of two years for a second-hand vehicle, or four years for a new one.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his Department's policies on the award of mobility and attendance allowance pending the introduction of disability allowance in 1992; and whether he has any information on the number of people currently receiving mobility allowance who will receive the lower rate of allowance when the new disability allowance is introduced.

Mr. Scott: Awards of attendance allowance and mobility allowance will continue to be made on the same basis as they are now until disability living allowance is introduced in April 1992. People who are in receipt of mobility allowance at the point of change will be automatically transferred to the higher rate of the mobility component of disability living allowance.

Poll Tax Deductions

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to his answer of 13 May, Official Report, column 29, to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher), what is the estimated cost to public funds of administering in the week of February containing the quarterly day, the 28th, the deductions from 36,448 people's income support to cover poll tax arrears; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information office.

Correspondence

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish in the Official Report the letter sent to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East in answer to his question of 1 May, Official Report, column 255.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the letter by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to all right hon. and hon. Members about the arrangements for handling parliamentary questions concerning operational matters within the remit of the Benefits Agency. In accordance with the terms of that letter, a copy of Mr. Bichard's reply to the hon. Member of 8 May, which set out the information requested in considerable detail, has been placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Next Steps

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the criteria for selecting those matters within his responsibility and the responsibility of the next steps agencies which are deemed to be operational matters.

Miss Widdecombe: The responsibilities of chief executives of DSS agencies on operational matters are set out in the framework document for each agency, copies of which are available in the Library. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State wrote to all right hon. and hon. Members about the new arrangements we were introducing for Members' correspondence and written parliamentary questions about the operational activities of DSS agencies. The arrangements are designed to provide a better service to Members. Ministers remain fully accountable for the work of the Department including its executive agencies.

Information Technology Services Agency

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the chief executive at the Information Technology Services Agency will meet NVCPS, CPSA, and other staff unions to discuss the agency's first-year business plan; when the second-year business plan will be published; and when the fifth-year strategic plan will be published.

Miss Widdecombe: Consultation with staff unions and the publication of agency business and strategic plans are matters for Mr. John Kenworthy, the chief executive of the Information Technology Services Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total expenditure by his Department on press and public relations in 1979-80 and in each following year; and what is his estimate for 1990-91 and budget for 1991-92.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 30 April 1991]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Industrial Development Board

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many jobs were promoted by the Industrial Development Board in each of the 17 parliamentary constituencies during the years 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Agency Status

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his Department under the next steps initiative; and whether he has identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Mr. Jackson: In April 1990, we established the Employment Service as a next steps agency. The Employment Service employs some 38,000 people and its aim is to give positive help to unemployed people through job placement services and other programmes, and by payments of benefits and allowances to those entitled to them. It is the second biggest agency to be set up under the next steps initiative.

There are no other candidates for agency status at present. However, we are currently considering the further application of next steps agency status to departmental functions.

Mr. Jackson: The additional £120 million for ET in 1991-92 was distributed on the basis of the allocation formulae agreed with the TECs and with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland for the original distribution of the ET budgets in 1991-92. The £120 million has been fully incorporated into TEC business plans which are commercially confidential.

for every offshore installation. The report's recommendations apply to both fixed and mobile installations. It is not possible to say in advance what changes any individual installation will be required to make.

I refer the hon. Member also to my answer of 15 May 1991, Official Report, column 211-12.

DEFENCE

Arms Dump, Caerwent

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any assessment has been made of the consequences on the surrounding area and the local population of an aircraft crash on the arms dump at Caerwent, Gwent.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There has been no such specific assessment. However, the base has a comprehensive plan for dealing with all types of emergency, particularly ones involving fire.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish details of restrictions on flying near and over the arms dump at Caerwent, Gwent.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There are no special restrictions on civil overflights of RAF Caerwent but military flying regulations take account of potential hazards at this and similar sites.

Low Flying

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish details of restrictions on low-flying exercises at or near the populated areas of south Gwent.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Aircrew carrying out low-flying exercises in the United Kingdom low-flying system are instructed to avoid overflying the centres of major conurbations and built-up areas and will, where practicable, seek to avoid all populated areas.

Sea Harrier Crash

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will instigate a full inquiry into the crash of a Sea Harrier into a hillside at Wentwood, Gwent, on the morning of 10 May.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It is standard procedure to convene a naval board of inquiry following an accident involving the loss of a Royal Navy aircraft. This inquiry will determine the cause of the accident and make recommendations on any lessons that may be learnt.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the flying pattern of the Sea Harrier that crashed into a hillside at Caerwent on 10 May, prior to the crash.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The aircraft was one of a group of three conducting a routine low-level reconnaissance sortie. The details of the accident are still being reviewed by a board of inquiry.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Sea Harrier that crashed at Wentwood, Gwent, on 10 May was on a low-flying exercise.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Yes.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish details of any emergency landing areas in Gwent that are recommended for use by aircraft in emergencies.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No emergency landing areas for military aircraft are specifically designated in Gwent. In any emergency it would be the reponsibility of the aircraft's captain to select the airfield most suited to deal with his particular circumstances. Details of military and civil airfields and emergency facilities are regularly promulgated.

Military Nuclear Materials

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to order a review of the safety of all facilities currently involved in the production and processing of military nuclear materials.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No. All United Kingdom facilities involved in the production and processing of nuclear materials for military purposes are subject to a continuing safety review.

Defence Industry

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 March, Official Report, column 165, what studies have been carried out regarding the ability of the United Kingdom defence industry to support military operations in the mid-1990s.

CSBM Negotiations

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 March, Official Report, column 166, whether any personnel from the Royal Navy have been involved in the negotiations on confidence and security-building measures in Europe.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no Royal Navy personnel directly involved in the CSBM negotiations. Naval staffs within the Ministry of Defence are consulted as necessary.

The Gulf

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personnel have been injured in non-combat accidents in the Gulf since 2 August 1990.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: According to our current records, some 540 armed forces personnel have been injured in non-combat accidents in the Gulf since 2 August 1990. This figure does not include minor injuries to Army personnel during the period up to 16 January 1991 when such injuries were not subject to central recording, nor does it include casualties who subsequently died.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 March about Operation Granby, Official Report, column 165, what is the approximate number of combat sorties carried out from the commencement of the air campaign that were (a) ground attack missions and (b) air defence missions.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: During hostilities in the Gulf, RAF Tornado GR1, Jaguar GR1 and Buccaneer aircraft flew some 2,400 sorties against targets in Iraq and Kuwait. RAF Tornado F3s flew about 700 air defence sorties.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the approximate number of (a) ground attack sorties, (b) tactical transport sorties and (c) non-combat sorties carried out by the Army Air Corps during Operation Granby; and if he will make a statement about army Air Corps operations during Operation Granby.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I regret that information on Army Air Corps activity was not recorded in the form requested. Army Air Corps Lynx and Gazelle helicopters were used during the allied operations to liberate Kuwait. During the night of 26 February, when 1st (British) Armoured Division was engaging an Iraqi armoured division, two Lynx, operating with two Gazelles, are believed to have destroyed four Iraqi tanks and three armoured personnel carriers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The explosives handling jetty construction programme has been subject to some delay, and we are currently examining what further steps are necessary in order to maintain the programme.

SCOTLAND

Elderly Forums

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial support the Scottish Office has provided to elderly forums; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend currently provides financial assistance to three elderly forums through the urban programme at a cost of £99,000 in 1991-92. They are in Strathclyde, Renfrew and Edinburgh. The funding over a period of four years represents 75 per cent. of the cost of the projects.

Scottish Homes

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will bring forward provisions which will enable Scottish Homes to claw back any subsidy given to transferred Scottish Homes housing stock which is subsequently sold on the open market and which thereby generates a windfall profit.

Mr. Lang: No. Scottish Homes already has the power to impose conditions on any financial assistance which it may provide in this connection. It is for it as owner of the stock to determine appropriate arrangements for clawback in the event of a subsequent disposal.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will bring forward provisions to ensure that in assessing the continuing need for transferred Scottish Homes housing stock to remain available for affordable commercial renting, Scottish Homes will be required to take account of the recommendations of the district councils in their role as statutory local housing authorities.

Mr. Lang: No. Scottish Homes has already been given guidance on the need to consult local authorities and to give careful consideration to their views. Scottish Homes in putting forward any proposals for the Secretary of State's consent will be expected to draw attention to any impact on the local authority's interest and on the authority's capacity to meet its continuing statutory housing obligations.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether valuations on Scottish Homes' housing stock will take account of any burdens on its disposal.

Mr. Lang: Valuation of Scottish Homes' housing stock which is to be disposed to a new landlord will be set by the district valuer who will take into account the market value subject to existing tenancies, the condition of the stock and the fact that tenants transferring will have a preserved right to buy.

Community Charge Relief

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people successfully claimed personal community charge transitional relief in (a) 1989-90 and (b) 1990-91 in each islands and district council area in Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Regional and island councils are required to provide information on the numbers of people who qualified for relief under the original and the enhanced transitional relief schemes. Information about qualifiers in district council areas is not available centrally. The table shows provisional figures provided by local authorities of qualifiers in 1989-90. The scheme was revised in January 1991 with backdated effect to 1 April 1990. In practice, only one authority paid out relief in respect of the financial year 1990-91 before the scheme was replaced by the personal community charge reduction scheme. Figures for 1990-91 are not therefore available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The cost of preparing and printing the application is of the order of £20,000. This will ensure that copies are widely available to interested parties during the statutory consultation period. The cost is being met from additional resources available for implementation of the NHS reforms.

Children (Special Needs)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of places available each year since 1979 in (a) list G schools, (b) list D schools and (c) children's homes.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not available.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on access to free legal services.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Legal services paid for under legal aid schemes are available free of charge to all those who satisfy the relevant merits tests and whose means are such that they are not required to make a financial contribution towards their legal costs.

Unfitness to Plead

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if it is his intention to introduce legislative provisions akin to those contained in the Criminal Procedure (Insanity and Unfitness to Plead) Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My hon. Friend keeps under review the law on mentally disturbed offenders in Scotland, and in that context will consider the implications of any changes to the law in this area which may be enacted for England and Wales.

Fish Processing

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many fish processing units are currently in operation, by Scottish region; and of these how many currently meet new EC hygiene requirements;

(2) what expenditure his Department expects to be necessary in each year until 1995 in the fish processing sector to meet EC hygiene regulations; what assistance is available for such investments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information in the form requested is not available. There are known to be over 300 fish processing units in Scotland, the majority of which are located in the Grampian region. Many fish processors already operate to standards above those that will be required under the draft EC fish hygiene directive because of the standards required by the customers. Others are already investing to bring themselves up to a higher standard. The transitional measures that will apply are still under negotiation within the Community so the dates by which the various requirements must be met have not yet been settled. In any case, it would not be possible to separate the expenditure anticipated to meet hygiene requirements from other investment in the development of fish processing businesses.

My noble Friend the Minister with responsibility for agriculture and fisheries in Scotland announced recently that some £15 million in European Community funded grant aid has been made available to the United Kingdom's fish marketing and processing industry for the period 1991-93.

The EC grants scheme provides for grants of up to 30 per cent. for fish marketing and processing projects along with a United Kingdom back-up grant of 5 per cent.

Scottish fish processors secured EC grant awards over the past 10 years of around £10 million under the previous EC scheme and there is every prospect that they will continue to be successful in attracting awards under the new scheme.

The proposed EC hygiene directive provides for a very basic set of hygiene requirements. The Scottish Fish Merchants Federation has recognised the importance to the industry of proper hygiene standards and has been pressing for early implementation of these measures, but the Government recognise that some processors have a fair way to go to meet such standards and therefore support the case for an appropriate transitional period.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what records are kept within his Department of business failures in the fish processing sector; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what employment projections have been prepared by his Department of employment in the fish processing sector in Scotland;

(3) if he will make a statement on the current condition of and prospects for the fish processing sector in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 20 May 1991]: Some 9,000 people are employed in the fish processing industry in Scotland. Employment projections specific to fish processing would not be reliable since the numbers employed are sensitive to the business decisions of a relatively small number of companies.

In the past year, there have been some closures in the processing industry, mainly linked to the reduction in the supply of species such as cod and haddock, and also to problems faced in fishmeal production, but there have also been substantial new investments as many processors diversify into other species such as mackerel, herring and farmed salmon, and also into products with greater added value. The market for mackerel and herring products has improved considerably following good publicity as to the health benefits to be had from eating oily fish and the supply outlook for these species is good. The net change in employment in fish processing in Scotland during 1990 is estimated to have been small.

Animal Carcases

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the health problems arising from the dumping of animal carcases; what action he is taking concerning the dumping of sheep in a mass open grave in Morton Wood, near Thornhill; what action he is taking to assist the knackery industry in Ayrshire and Dumfries and Galloway to prevent the growing dumping of animal carcases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 20 May 1991]: My right hon. Friend has received representations about the possibility of health problems arising from the improper disposal of animal carcases from a number of hon. Members, local authorities, farmers, trade and professional interests and members of the public in some areas of Scotland, most notably Dumfries and Galloway Region.

It is an offence under the Dogs Act 1906 to leave cattle, sheep, pigs, goats and equine carcases unburied and thereby exposed to dogs. Where this happens it is a matter for the police and local authorities. The Control of Pollution Act 1974 also contains powers which might be invoked where carcases are left unburied. The Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department has reminded local authorities, chief constables and river purification boards of their powers under the 1974 Act. In addition local branches of the National Farmers Union of Scotland in the areas concerned have been advised that their members should adhere to the law and act responsibly in disposing of carcases.

As with other industries, farmers are responsible for disposing of their waste within the existing framework of environmental and health controls. It would not, therefore, be justifiable to use taxpayers' money to subsidise the knacker industry. The Government have assisted in a number of other ways, but the best solution to both the problem of carcase dumping and the financial difficulties of the knacker trade is for the farmers to use the service and pay the charges required of them.

Discharged Hospital Patients

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give the number of patients resident within the Hamilton/East Kilbride unit area discharged from Monklands/Cumbernauld units in each of the acute, maternity and geriatric sectors in each of the last five years;

(2) if he will give the number of patients resident within the Hamilton/East Kilbride unit area discharged from Motherwell/Clydesdale units in each of the acute, maternity and geriatric sectors in each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The information requested is set out in the table:

	1986	1987	1988	1989	1990
Acute—Monklands/ Cumbernauld	2,005	2,186	2,259	2,357	2,705

Notes:

1. The figures for the acute sector include non-obstetric and non-psychiatric discharges but do not include discharges from special care baby units, young chronic and geriatric specialties.
2. The figures for geriatric specialties include discharges and deaths from geriatric assessment and geriatric long stay units.

Aberdeen Royal Infirmary

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the capital value of all the assets of the Aberdeen royal infirmary.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 20 May 1991]: As at December 1989, the assessed capital value, on the basis of existing national health service use, of Aberdeen royal infirmary was £71·3 million. This excludes furniture and equipment.

A74

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for the A74 (a) the name of each section to be rebuilt as a motorway, (b) the state of preparation of the plans for each section, (c) the order in which each section will be constructed and (d) the estimated starting date for each section.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Millbank to Nether Abington (11·5 km)
Nether Abington to Elvanfoot (7·7 km)
Elvanfoot to Paddy's Rickle Bridge (4·3 km)
Paddy's Rickle Bridge to Harthope (6·6 km)

The Scottish Office Environment department has identified the Nether Abington to Elvanfoot and Muirhouse to Water of Milk, Lockerbie, sections as the next priorities for construction and the first of these has been included among the trunk road schemes scheduled to start in Scotland during the current financial year.

No decision has been made as to the order in which subsequent schemes will be built but, in deciding this, consideration will be given to such matters as minimising disruption to traffic, completing lengths between junctions and use of excess excavated material from some schemes for others with a deficit. Decisions on the schemes to be constructed in any particular financial year are taken annually each spring and will depend on the relative priority attached to the scheme and the resources available.

Scottish Fish Merchants Federation

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has further considered the submission of the Scottish Fish Merchants Federation Ltd. for financial assistance based on return on capital employed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The submission of the Scottish Fish Merchants Federation Ltd. for a revenue subsidy to maintain the profits of fish processors was the subject of discussions between the SFMF and Ministers last year. It was concluded that assistance of this nature would be inappropriate and contrary to EC law. The position has not changed.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent meetings he has had with representatives of the Scottish Fish Merchants Federation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 20 May 1991]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Doran) on 9 May.

HIV

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of reports of HIV antibody positive people for each of the Scottish health boards for the year ended (a) March 1990 and (b) March 1991.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 May 1991]: The table gives the number of positive HIV antibody test results, by health board area, which have been reported to the communicable diseases (Scotland) unit within the periods 1 April 1989 to 31 March 1990 and 1 April 1990 to 31 March 1991. Where the total number of positive test results in a board area is under 10, the figure, in accordance with established practice, is not published so as not to jeopardise medical confidentiality.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 May 1991]: The table gives the cumulative totals of positive HIV antibody test results, by health board area, which had been reported to the communicable diseases (Scotland) unit up to 31 March 1990 and 31 March 1991. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications have been approved under the rents-to-mortgage scheme for (a) Scottish Home tenants, (b) tenants of new town development corporations and (c) local authority tenants in Scotland; and how many have been rejected for each category.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Information on sales and applications in process, based on returns to 30 April 1991, is shown in the table. The eligibility of a tenant to purchase under the rent to mortgage scheme is checked before a formal application to purchase is made. It is therefore not necessary to reject applications.

TRANSPORT

MV Derbyshire

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the full report produced by the marine accident investigation branch entitled, "Derbyshire: Review of New Material."

Mr. McLoughlin: The formal report submitted by the chief inspector of marine accidents and placed in the Library on 25 March set out all the reasons for the recommendation that the formal investigation should not be reopened.

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning activities of private wheel clamping firms in operations directed against vehicles allegedly parked on private land.

Mr. Chope: I have received several letters from hon. Members who have received complaints from constituents.

Nuclear Fuel Transport

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions each year since 1979 nuclear reaction fuel has been transported to Sellafield via Leeds; and what safeguard provisions covered the fuel in transit.

Mr. McLoughlin: The timing and routeing of such consignments are matters for British Rail. However, I am informed that irradiated nuclear fuel would not normally travel through Leeds.

B5356, Stretton

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has agreed to special motorway signs on the M56 in order to direct heavy goods vehicles away from the B5356 in Stretton, near Warrington.

Mr. Chope: Yes. We are now considering approval of the signs which the local councils wish to erect on local roads.

Freight

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what planning his Department is undertaking to achieve the objective of moving freight from roads to railways; whether he envisages any specific targets over the next decade; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: We are reviewing ways in which industry could be further encouraged to make more use of the rail systems, given in particular the advent of the channel tunnel and developments in combined transport. I do not have specific targets.

Bus Lanes, London

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total mileage of bus lanes in the Greater London area.

Mr. Freeman: I understand from London Transport that there are 47 miles of bus lane in the Greater London area.

ENERGY

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the progress of the home energy efficiency scheme.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [pursuant to his reply, 14 May 1991, c. 87-88]: Experience with the first four months operation of the home energy efficiency scheme has confirmed that it meets a real need and is being well received. However, it has also shown that work must be closely monitored and controlled to maintain the high standards for which the scheme aims. I have today announced changes to the scheme designed further to protect those clients who make direct applications under the scheme.

I have placed in the Library copies of a press release which gives details of these changes, which are designed to maintain the principle of customer choice whilst ensuring high standards.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing, for 1990-91 and 1991-92 separately for local authorities in England, Wales and Scotland (i) capital grants from central Government, (ii) other receipts, showing separately items of £0·5 billion or more, (iii) total receipts, (iv) current expenditure on goods and services, showing housing separately, (v) current grants and subsidies, showing housing separately, (vi) interest repayments, (vii) capital expenditure and net lending and (viii) total expenditure showing that on the basis of national accounts and public expenditure measurement.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested on capital grants from central government to local authorities on a public expenditure basis is given in table 5.5 of the "Statistical Supplement to the 1990 Autumn Statement" —Cm 1520. Data on capital grants on a national accounts basis cannot readily be split between terrritories. Data on local authority income from the community charge and non-domestic rates by territory are given in reply to a question from the hon. Member today. Detailed data on other local authority receipts in 1990-91 and 1991-92 are not yet available.

The analysis of local authority expenditure requested is given, for 1990-91, in the table. The data are consistent with the economic category analysis of local authority expenditure given in table 5.7 of Cm 1520. Data on local authority debt interest cannot readily be split between territories. Information on the public expenditure basis for 1991-92 and for both 1990-91 and 1991-92 on a national accounts basis is not yet available.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish tables which reconcile to table 6.7 in the 1991 Financial Statement and Budget Report and which show separately for England, Wales, Scotland, Great Britain and the United Kingdom and for each of the years 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92 the following information on local authority transactions (a) gross income from community charge and domestic rates before deduction of (i) rate rebates, (ii) community charge benefit, (iii) transitional relief, (iv) community charge reduction scheme and (v) community charge grant, showing each item separately, (b) net income from community charge and domestic rates and (c) income from non-domestic rates.

Mr. Mellor: The following tables show the information requested:

VAT

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table, comparable to table 3 of appendix 7 to HC 289 of Session 1990-91 but expressed to the nearest £1 per year, of VAT payments by income decile group, showing separately the results for (a) all households in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom and (b) retired households but continuing to attribute such retired households to income decile groups calculated on the basis of all households.

Mr. Mellor: The figures in the table referred to were derived from Central Statistical Office analysis of the family expenditure survey. Because the statistical adjustments made to the data for this analysis have been designed at the United Kingdom level, separate figures for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are not available. Moreover the sample sizes for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland would be too small to provide reliable results. Figures for the United Kingdom and retired households on the basis requested are set out in the table.

Estimated increase in VAT payments in 1991-92 as a result of the rise in the VAT rate to 17·5 per cent.: average by decile group of households ranked by disposable income: £ per year.

	All United Kingdom households:	Of which retired:
Bottom	40	32
2	52	42
3	78	69
4	114	123
5	140	142
6	164	143
7	200	195
8	232
9	279	253
Top	369
Average	167	79

Notes:
1. Based on the 1987 Family Expenditure Survey uprated to 1991. Figures do not take account of any changes in the pattern of household expenditure which might follow on from a change in the VAT rate.
2. In order to provide an estimate for a reasonably large sample, the figures for the retired households in the top three decile groups have been combined.

Next Steps

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his department under the next steps initiative; and whether he has identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Mr. David Mellor: I refer my hon. Friend to the Minister for the Civil Service's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) on 30 April 1991, at columns 111-13. Within Her Majesty's Treasury the Chessington computer centre, which provides computerised payroll and other services to Government departments and other customers, is due to become an agency on 1 April 1993. Of the other Chancellor's Departments the Central Office of Information, Her Majesty's Stationery Office and the Royal Mint have been established as agencies. The Valuation Offices of the Inland Revenue will be established as a single agency from 30 September 1991. The Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise are implementing announced programmes of action which will enable them to operate fully on next steps lines.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table, consistent with table 2.1 of Cm 1520, showing for the years 1963-64 to 1990-91 and expressed to the nearest £ million, (a) local authority expenditure on a national accounts definition, (b) local authority expenditure on goods and services on a national accounts definition, (c) general Government expenditure excluding privatisation proceeds, (d) general Government expenditure on goods and services and (e) gross domestic product at market prices.

Mr. Mellor: Information up to the fourth quarter of 1990 is included on the CSO database in the following series—identified by their database code—and published in the "Statistical Supplement to Autumn Statement"—Cm 1520.

(a)—ABAD:	Local authority expenditure on a national accounts definition.
(b)—GTEF:	Local authority expenditure on goods and services on a national accounts definition.
(c)—Table 2.1 of Cm 1520:	General government expenditure excluding privatisation proceeds.
(d)—GTEG:	General government expenditure on goods and services.

The CSO database is accessible in the Library of the House.

WALES

Recycling

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations he has had with the local authorities and their associations in Wales regarding the need for supplementary credit approvals specifically earmarked for the encouragement of recycling initiatives in Wales;

(2) what provision he intends to make concerning supplementary credit approvals for local authorities and voluntary bodies in Wales for initiatives to encourage recycling.

Mr. David Hunt: Capital resources in Wales are distributed by means of unhypothecated formulae which have the support of the local authority associations. This method of distribution of resources was introduced so that local authorities can determine individually how the resources made available are spent.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had from local authorities and voluntary bodies in Wales regarding the absence of any funds earmarked for the encouragement of recycling initiatives.

Mr. David Hunt: Two letters have been received as well as a number of telephone inquiries.

South Glamorgan Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent consultations he has had with the chairman of the South Glamorgan training and enterprise council concerning the provision of (a) new offices and (b) training facilities for the TEC, both in the immediate needs and for the medium term.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

First Aid

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will introduce an education support grant specifically for the training of first-aiders in educational establishments;

(2) if any specific financial support is made available by his Department to ensure that the guidance in the Welsh Office circular entitled "Arrangements for First Aid in Schools and Colleges", and advice in other publications is implemented in schools and colleges.

Sir Wyn Roberts: First aid provision in educational establishments forms part of the normal responsibilities of local education authorities. Their expenditure on such provision is supported by revenue support grant and I have no plans for further support by way of education support grant. The 1991-92 local authority revenue support settlement allows for a 7·9 per cent. increase in education spending at an all-Wales level.

Next Steps

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his Department under the next steps initiative; and whether he has identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Mr. David Hunt: There is currently one executive agency within my Department, Cadw Welsh Historic Monuments executive agency. Work is proceeding in concert with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, to establish the agricultural Development Advisory Service as a joint England and Wales Agency in April 1992. I am actively reviewing other functions discharged by my Department with a view to applying next steps principles to them.

Welsh Language Bill

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he received from the Welsh Language Board a copy of its final draft for a new Welsh Language Act; and on how many occasions since then he or an official of his Department, has met representatives of the Welsh Language Board to discuss that draft Bill.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend received a final draft copy of the Welsh Language Board's report on its legislative proposals on 9 January of this year. Welsh Office officials have subsequently been considering the board's proposals. We will be meeting the chairman of the board to discuss this matter on 23 May.

Sheep and Beef Producers

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total payment made last year to sheep and beef producers in Wales under the EC scheme for less-favoured area support; and how much more would have been paid if the United Kingdom Government had allowed such payments to be made to the full EC maximum permitted level last year, and not limited by the United Kingdom restriction level.

Mr. David Hunt: A total of £33·3 million was paid out to 15,103 hill livestock compensatory allowance claimants in 1990. The United Kingdom financial limits led to payments to 529 claimants being reduced by a total of £220,949—0·66 per cent. of the total expenditure. The amount that would have been payable if the United Kingdom had adopted the EC maximum limits could be calculated only at disproportionate cost.

Footpaths and Bridleways

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by year for the last 10 years, and for the current year to date, the number of (a) public footpaths and (b) public bridleways that have been (i) created and (ii) closed to the general public.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is not held centrally.

Correspondence

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state on what date he received a letter posted by Gwynedd county council on 12 March, concerning the community charge transitional relief and alleged inconsistencies in this scheme within the county of Gwynedd; on what date a reply was sent; and if he will make a statement on the issues raised by this letter.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The letter from Gwynedd county council dated 12 March 1991 was not received. A copy of the letter was received from the county council on 14 May 1991. A reply has been sent.

Towyn Floods

Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he intends to make further grant payments under the Bellwin scheme to local authorities in north Wales which were involved in carrying out emergency works following the flood emergency at Towyn.

Mr. David Hunt: As my hon. Friend will know, I have already made payments under the Bellwin scheme, amounting to over £2 million, to local authorities in Wales which were directly affected by the severe weather during the Winter of 1989-90. In the case of the north Wales flooding, one of the ways in which I recognised the exceptional nature of the problems was by extending the deadline for receipt of authorities' final audited claim forms to 30 June 1991.

Parliamentary approval to payment of grant in respect of these claims is being sought in a summer supplementary estimate on the "rate rebates, community charge reduction grants and flood and storm emergency services, Wales" vote—class XVI, vote 11. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure on meeting mature claims will be met by a repayable advance of £500,000 from the Contingencies Fund.

Opencast Mining

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the planning appeals relating to opencast coalmining sites in Wales currently under consideration by his Department.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The information is as follows:

Llanilid West, Mid Glamorgan
Brynhenllys, Powys
Bannel Bridge, Clwyd
Park Slip West, Mid Glamorgan
Graweth Farm, Merthyr Tydfil, Mid Glamorgan

In addition, the planning application for an opencast coal mine at Pwll Du has been called in for determination by the Secretary of State. The cases are at various stages in their determination.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Agency Status

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his Department under the next steps initiative; and whether he has identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Mr. Lilley: The nine excutive agencies within the DTI are Companies House, the Insolvency Service, the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, the National Engineering Laboratory, the National Physical Laboratory, the National Weights and Measures Laboratory, Patent Office, Radiocommunications Agency and Warren Spring Laboratory.

I continue to consider the possibility of establishing further agencies in the DTI but I have not at the moment identified any candidates.

For ECGD, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 19 July 1990, Official Report column 677.

Company Liquidations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he takes where the liquidator of a company fails to file the statutory returns as required by section 595 of the Companies Act 1985.

Mr. Redwood: This is an operational matter for Companies House executive agency. I have asked the chief executive to write direct.

Traders (Monitoring)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will provide a list of the number of traders monitored by each of the authorised bodies under the provisions of the Financial Services Act 1986.

Mr. Redwood: I understand from the Securities and Investments Board that the position on 8 May 1991, including interim authorisations, was as shown in the following table. Some authorised persons are members of more than one self-regulating organisation.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Companies Acts (Investigations)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will list the investigations carried out under various sections of the Companies Acts for the year to 31 March.

Mr. Redwood: During the year to 31 March 1991, a total of 178 such inquiries were commenced; one under section 431 of the Companies Act 1985, four under section 432, two under section 446 and 171 under section 447. The inquiries under sections 431 and 432 have been announced and are as follows:

Date of appointment	Name of company	Type of inquiry
15 June 1990	Atlantic Computer Systems plc	Section 432
15 June 1990	Atlantic Computers plc	Section 432
16 August 1990	Astra Holdings plc	Section 431
31 October 1990	London United Investments plc	Section 432
7 January 1991	Norton Group plc	Section 432

Companies (Suspended Shares)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any company whose shares are suspended has been investigated by his Department.

Mr. Redwood: Investigations under section 432 of the Companies Act 1985 into the affairs of James Ferguson Holdings plc, BOM Holdings plc and Norton Group plc are in progress and have been announced. The stock exchange has advised that the shares of these companies are suspended. Section 447 investigations are kept confidential.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was paid by the Insolvency Service to accountancy firms in each year since 1988.

Mr. Redwood: The Insolvency Service made the following payments in respect of additional work done by insolvency practitioners on disqualification applications made by the Secretary of State. Generally these payments are made to the accountancy firms in which the insolvency practitioners are partners or employees.

1988-89	1989-90	1990-91
£7,814	£25,429	£29,021

A payment of £23,500 was also made during the financial year 1990-91 in respect of consultancy work on computerised estate accounting.

Bryanston

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received seeking the publication of the final report on Bryanston.

Mr. Redwood: The papers are being recovered from store. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Ernst and Young

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any staff or partner from Ernst and Young is currently seconded to his Department.

Mr. Redwood: Two Ernst and Young staff are currently on secondment to the Department.

Fireworks

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his responsibilities under the Fireworks Act 1951 and on his discharging of them.

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

Our responsibilities under this Act relate to sections 4 and 7 which deal with Health and Safety at work considerations under the terms of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974. Additionally, explosives inspectors appointed by the Health and Safety Executive during their visits to factories, magazines or stores have a power under section 1(1) of the Fireworks Act 1951 to take away for testing a sample of fireworks which they consider may present dangers when in the possession of the public. This power is enforced where appropriate and necessary.

The remainder of the provision in the Fireworks Act 1951 are properly the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to require licensing of all fireworks to be used only for properly organised firework displays, put on by trained people, and set up a national training scheme.

Mr. Redwood: The firework industry already has a training scheme for organisers of displays. Like the hon. Member, I want to see fireworks used properly so that there is pleasure rather than tragedy on bonfire night. Requiring licences would cut down the number of good organised displays open to people on bonfire night, but would not of itself guarantee safety.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent incidents have occurred involving category 4 fireworks; and if he will make a statement on his policy towards the control of such fireworks.

Mr. Redwood: I do not have a breakdown of accidents for different categories of fireworks. However, category 4 —large display—fireworks should not be available in the shops. Most are imported and their import licence prohibits suppliers from selling them through the shops, while for their part United Kingdom manufacturers refrain from doing so.

Defence Exports

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make it his policy to place before Parliament annually a list of defence exports including details of equipment supplied, contract values and recipients.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. The hon. Member will be aware that following the Prime Minister's initiative for a United Nations register of arms transfers, urgent consideration is being given to such an international register.

New Cars

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will review the pricing of new cars in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission is currently investigating the United Kingdom car market, including car prices in the United Kingdom. When the commission's report is available, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will need to consider whether there is scope for any action in the light of it.

Accountancy Practice

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his policy towards accountancy practice, standards and forms, in relation to corporate bodies.

Mr. Redwood: The Government's policy on company accounting was debated at length during the passage of the Companies Act 1989, which introduced a number of important changes. As regards accounting standards, the Government welcomed and support the new Financial Reporting Council and its subsidiaries, including the Accounting Standards Board.

Shipbuilding

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current operation and level of usage of the home shipbuilders credit guarantee scheme.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 21 May 1991]: The home shipbuilding credit guarantee scheme has been in operation since 1967. The scheme offer United Kingdom-based shipowners, placing orders with United Kingdom shipyards for the construction, completion or radical alteration of merchant vessels, financing terms comparable with officially supported export credit terms available for orders placed with overseas yards. Vessels which may qualify for support under the scheme conform with the definition in the OECD understanding of export credits for ships. The scheme provides two elements of support:

(i) a Government guarantee of up to 80 per cent. of the loan arranged by the purchaser of the vessel and repayable by equal half yearly instalments over a maximum of eight and a half years;

(ii) a fixed rate of interest for the duration of the loan with the Government paying the difference between the fixed and commercial loan interest rates. The Government support conforms to the OECD Understanding.

In the year to 31 March 1991, payments of interest support grants totalled £52 million. As at 31 March 1991, the amount of loan principal guaranteed under the scheme totalled £924·6 million in respect of 305 vessels. In the year ended 31 March 1991, a total of 40 new guarantees were given.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Ukranian Doctors

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there are any plans to fund training for Ukranian doctors on cancer-related illnesses.

Mrs. Chalker: We have contributed, both bilaterally and multilaterally, to the international efforts to tackle the effects of the Chernobyl disaster, including by promoting specialist contacts with Ukranian doctors and scientists. We shall consider the possibility of further assistance in the light of the International Atomic Energy Agency report, due out on 21 May.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Child Employment Laws

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many prosecutions there were in the last 12-month period for which figures are available for contraventions of the child employment law.

Mr. John Patten: In England and Wales in 1989, there were 35 prosecutions for offences against employment of children Acts. Data for 1990 are not yet available. This information is published annually in volume 1 of the "Criminal statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary tables" copies of which are in the Library.

West Midlands Police

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were committed and detected in the Walsall H division of the West Midlands police authority for each year since 1978.

Mr. John Patten: The information is published in the annual reports of the chief constable of West Midlands police. Copies of these publications from 1980 are available in the Library.

Parole

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of life sentence prisoners who were released each year since 1981; and what was the number in each year whose release was proposed by the Parole Board and turned down by him or his predecessors.

Mrs. Rumbold: The numbers of persons released from prison service establishments on life licence in each of the years 1979-89 were published in table 8.5 of "Prison statistics England and Wales 1989"—Cm. 1221—a copy of which is in the Library. The figures exclude those re-released following a period in prison after recall from a previous licence. In 1990, the latest year for which information is available, 81 people were released on life licence.

Information on the numbers of life sentence prisoners recommended as suitable for release by the Parole Board and the numbers of those recommendations not accepted by Home Secretaries is published in successive annual reports of the Parole Board. For convenience the figures for 1980-90, which include re-releases following a period in prison after recall from a previous licence, are set out in the table. Parole Board recommendations of "suitable for release" have been for dates ranging from the immediate future up to two and a half years ahead.

British National Party

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what request he has received from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to ban the British National party march planned to take place in Thamesmead on Saturday 25 May.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what request he has received from the Metropolitan Police Commissioner to ban the proposed marches by the British National party on the Thamesmead estate.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No request has been made by the Commissioner for the Home Secretary's consent to an order under section 13 of the Public Order Act 1986 prohibiting the march by the British National party in Thamesmead on 25 May. The Commissioner is considering whether to exercise his power under section 12 of the Act to impose conditions on the route of the procession.

Empty Housing

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the number of Home Office domestic properties there are throughout the United Kingdom and (b) the number unoccupied at the present moment, indicating how many have been unoccupied for six months, how many have been unoccupied for one year, how many have been unoccupied for two years and how many have been unoccupied for longer than two years.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The best estimate of the total number of domestic properties owned by the Home Office prison service in England and Wales is at present 2,825, of which 355 are unoccupied for the following reasons:

	Numbers
Vacant for security reasons or redevelopment	94
Vacant for reallocation to designated staff	56
Awaiting demolition	63
On market for sale	112
Awaiting disposal	30
	355

In addition the Home Office directorate of telecommunications has 20 properties, of which nine are vacant and for sale; the Fire Service college at Moreton-in-Marsh has 36 properties, all occupied; and the Emergency Planning college at Easingwold has 11 properties, all occupied.

Information on the length of time properties have been vacant is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prisons

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners there are in Britain and in each prison as of 10 May; and what is the capacity of each prison.

Mrs. Rumbold: On 10 May there were a total of 45,302 prisoners in England and Wales, including 603 in police cells. The table shows the number of prisoners in each prison service establishment and the certified normal accommodation—the uncrowded capacity—of each establishment.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he proposes to change the present ratio of prison officers to inmates in centres for young offenders.

Mrs. Rumbold: Between 1 April 1987 and 1 April this year, the ratio of prison officers to inmates in young offender establishments rose from 0·37 to 0·46 officers per inmate. Depending on changes in the prison population during the year, a further improvement in this ratio is likely to occur by April 1992 as a result of the recruitment of staff for new young offender establishments during 1991-92.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals to improve the ratio of prison officers to inmates in the prison service.

Mrs. Rumbold: Between 1 April 1987 and 1 April this year, the ratio of prison officers to inmates increased from 0·35 to 0·48 officers per inmate. Depending on changes in the prison population during the year, there is likely to be a further small improvement in the ratio of officers to inmates by April 1992 as a result of the recruitment of around 1,500 officers to staff new prisons.

Lorry Drivers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by year for the last 10 years and for the current year to date (a) how many lorry drivers have been convicted of a motoring offence on the evidence alone of a tachograph fitted in the driving cab, (b) what was the offence committed and (c) what penalty was imposed on (i) the driver and (ii) the operator.

Mr. John Patten: The only offence for which the evidence of a tachograph alone is used is "Failing to observe limits on hours of driving and duty, or rest requirements" under sections 96(11) and 96(11A) of the Transport Act 1968. This applies only to drivers or operators of heavy goods vehicles.

The table gives the information available for this offence. The latest statistics are for 1989; the table also includes data for the previous nine years. No breakdown is available centrally between drivers and operators.

Poland (Visas)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to end the requirement of visas for visitors from Poland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave to his recent question on this subject on 8 May at column 477.

Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi or his wife, Kuldip, have been retained as interpreters by (i) the immigration and nationality department or (ii) the Metropolitan police since 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Records of this kind are not held centrally and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, I understand that Mr. Bedi and his wife have worked as casual interpreters on occasions for the immigration service and the police since 1968.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many official invitations have been issued to Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi to attend official functions organised by his Department since 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Records of invitations issued to individuals are not held centrally and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost, if at all.

War Crimes

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when investigations into alleged war crimes will begin.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The War Crimes Act received Royal Assent on 9 May and the war crimes investigation unit established by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis will begin their investigations immediately. Parliamentary approval of this new expenditure is being sought in the supply estimates for the Home Office Vote for "administration, etc." for 1991-92—class IX, vote 3. Pending this approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £300,000 will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

Trespass

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has completed his evaluation of section 39 of the Public Order Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: We have now completed the thorough review of section 39 of the Public Order Act 1986 which was announced by my right hon. Friend the then Home Secretary on 26 October 1989. I am grateful to all those individuals and organisations who contributed their views, including members of this House.

After considering carefully all the representations received, I have concluded that more needs to be done to secure a better understanding by all interested parties of the way in which the law should operate, but that no change to the law is necessary.

I have therefore decided, after consultation with the Association of Chief Police Officers, to issue guidance to the police on the application of section 39. Whilst the decision whether or not to use the powers available under section 39 is an operational matter entirely within the discretion of the senior police officer present at the scene of a trespass, the guidance aims to assist forces in coming to a more consistent application of these powers across the country in dealing with aggravated trespass. A copy of this guidance has been placed in the Library.

I believe that it would be helpful to the interested parties to have available a simple guide to the law in relation to trespass on land. My Department is therefore publishing today, in consultation with the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Department of the Environment, a leaflet setting out the main provisions of the law. It covers, as well as section 39, the civil remedies open to landowners and the requirements in respect of the provision of official sites for travellers under the Caravan Sites Act 1968. A copy of the leaflet has also been placed in the Library.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will continue to encourage local authorities to fulfil their duty under the Caravan Sites Act 1968 to provide adequate numbers of sites for gipsies.

I believe that these measures should do much to reduce uncertainty about the proper application of section 39 and will assist landowners in finding the most suitable remedy for trespass on land in the circumstances of each particular case.

PRIME MINISTER

Iraq (Economic Sanctions)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister how many representations he has received concerning the United Nations Security Council appeal issued on 29 April for assistance to the 21 countries with special economic problems arising from their compliance with sanctions imposed against Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: None. Our policy on assistance for these countries was set out in the answer given to the hon. Member by the Minister for Overseas Development on 14 May at column 99.

Medical and Dental Officers (Pay)

Mr. Conway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement about the pay of medical and dental officers in the armed forces.

The Prime Minister: The Armed Forces Pay Review Body has submitted to me a supplementary report on the pay of medical and dental officers in the armed forces which recommends increases of between 7·5 and 11·4 per cent., with an average increase of 11·2 per cent. The Government have decided to accept the recommendations in full, though, in common with the pay awards announced on 31 January for the national health service doctors and dentists, with whom the pay of service medical and dental officers is closely linked, implementation will be staged, with 7·5 per cent. payable from 1 April 1991 and the balance of the award payable from 1 December 1991.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Social Services Committees

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will announce the composition of the four new social services committees which will replace the district committees disbanded on 1 April.

Mr. Hanley: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Upper Bann (Mr. Trimble) on 20 May, Official Report, column 379.

Prescriptions

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list, over the last five years for which figures are available, the loss to the health service by improper prescription claims; and if he will make a statement in response to the complaints of the Comptroller and Auditor-General for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: It is not possible to state accurately the loss to the health service by improper claims for exemption from prescription charges. Estimates based on sample surveys which began in 1986-87 are:

1986-87	1,345,564
1987-88	2,220,000
1988-89	2,123,446
1989-90	2,323,736

Improper prescription claims have been the subject of consideration by the Department of Health and Social Services and the Central Services Agency in the light of previous Comptroller and Auditor-General Reports. Arising out of this consideration the medical and pharmaceutical professions will shortly be consulted about a range of measures designed to counteract this problem without imposing undue restrictions on patients requiring medication. The specific criticisms made by the Comptroller and Auditor-General about weaknesses within the pharmaceutical branch of the agency are not directly linked with the improper claiming. The Department will consider with the agency the action which should now be taken on this aspect of the Comptroller and Auditor-General's 1988-89 report.

Police Complaints Commission

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will arrange for copies of the 1990 annual report of the independent Commission for Police Complaints for Northern Ireland to be laid in the House; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The report has been laid today. It is the third annual report from the commission which was established in 1988 by the Police (Northern Ireland) Order 1987.

Detailed recommendations about the workings of articles 4 to 16 of the 1987 order, which provide for the handling of complaints from the public about individual police officers, were made by the commission in its comprehensive triennial review which was presented in a report to the House on 27 March 1991. In view of this the annual report is mainly a factual account of the commission's work during the year and an exposition of its role and functions. Nevertheless, it provides a valuable contribution to the important process of increasing public awareness of the police complaints system in Northern Ireland. I commend it to those interested in these matters and I am certain that this account of the commission's work will prove to be another important step in increasing the public's confidence in the police complaints system and in the commission's role.

Goodman Meat

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the gifts given to staff within the Department of Agriculture from interests associated with the Goodman Meat firm; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 21 May 1991]: Under the Northern Ireland civil service pay and conditions of service code only gifts of may be accepted by civil servants. To my knowledge only gifts in this category have been accepted by staff in the Department of Agriculture.

"a trivial or inexpensive seasonal nature"

At Christmas 1989 and 1990 some staff in HQ divisions of the Department of Agriculture received unsolicited gifts of alcohol from the Goodman Group. The group was contacted and told that staff could not accept such gifts but the group refused to accept their return. Accordingly, 10 bottles of spirits—nine in 1989 and one in 1990—were donated to the NSPCC which acknowledged their receipt to the Goodman Group.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legal Aid

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list by year for the last 10 years the number of individuals who have qualified for legal aid; and what percentage of the population this represents.

The Attorney-General: Calculations are not made as a matter of course of the number of individuals falling within the eligibility limits for legal aid. It is estimated that in 1990 approximately 36 million people or 66 per cent. of the population were eligible on income grounds for non-matrimonial civil legal aid. For personal injury claims it is estimated that 38 million people or 69 per cent. of the population were eligible. No estimates are available of the percentage of the population eligible for matrimonial or criminal legal aid. The numbers of individuals obtaining legal aid are detailed in tables published in legal aid annual reports to 1988-89 the Legal Aid Board annual report for 1989-90 and "Judicial Statistics".

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list by year for the last 10 years the number of households eligible for legal aid in court proceedings and the percentage of those entitled who had to make a contribution to the costs.

The Attorney-General: Calculations are not made as a matter of course of the number of households falling within the eligibility limits for legal aid. In 1990 it is estimated that 18·5 million households were eligible on income grounds for civil non-matrimonial legal aid—19·5 million in personal injury cases. About 60 per cent. are estimated to have been eligible with a contribution.

Free Legal Services

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement in respect of access to free legal services.

The Attorney-General: Those legal services, that are paid for under the legal aid schemes are available free of charge to all those who satisfy the relevant merits test and whose means are such that they are not required to make a financial contribution towards their legal costs. Free legal advice and assistance is also available irrespective of means through the duty solicitor schemes at magistrates' courts and police stations.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list by year for the last 10 years the number of people entitled to free legal advice.

The Attorney-General: Calculations are not made as a matter of course of the numbers of individuals falling within the eligibility limits for free legal advice and assistance. In 1989-90, nil contributions were assessed in 917,882 of the 1,029,018 bills paid for legal advice and assistance. Figures for earlier years are contained in the legal aid annual reports.

Mr. Mohinder Singh Bedi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi or his wife, Kuldip, were retained as interpreters by the immigration appellate authorities since 1984; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The immigration appellate authorities—IAA— have no record since 1984 of Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi or his wife Kuldip being included on the panel of casual interpreters used by the IAA.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions since 1984 Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi has appeared as a representative before the immigration appellate authorities to represent (a) appellants and (b) respondents; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The information requested is not readily available because the immigration appellate authorities—IAA—do not record statistics of the number of occasions unqualified representatives are granted leave to appear before them. The granting of leave to appear before them is a matter for the IAA judiciary.

Ashworth Covenant

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Attorney-General what has been the cost to public funds of the relator action on the Ashworth covenant at Birtenshaw Farm, Sylvia Scotland v Barratt Manchester and what further relator actions he anticipates being brought.

The Attorney-General: Any assessment of the cost to public funds occasioned by Attorney-General ex rel. Sylvia Scotland v Barratt Manchester Limited and Bolton Metropolitan Borough Council must await the conclusion of those proceedings. No other applications have been received for consent to commence a relator action in respect of the Ashworth covenant.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Adult Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what financial contribution he has made to (a) the National Institute of Adult and Continuing Education, (b) the unit for the development of adult and continuing education, (c) the national educational guidance initiative and (d) REPLAN since 1979, at 1990-91 prices.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is given in the table.

The figures in the table result from adjusting the cash outturn figures for past years using the deflator for gross domestic product at market prices. The grant to UDACE excludes that to NEGI, which is shown separately.

Higher Education

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of young people over the age of 18 years are in higher education in each of the 12 member states of the European Community.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The figures in the following table represent participation at all ages, generally 18 and over.

New entrants[1] to higher education

Country[2] (main ages on entry)	Latest year	Participation rate[3] Percentage
Belgium (18–19)	1987	49
Denmark (18–20)	1987	43
France (18–20)	1987	34
Germany, West[4] (19–21)	1987	30
Greece[5]	1986	33
Ireland[5,6]	1986	29

Country[2] (main ages on entry)	Latest year	Participation rate[3] Percentage
Italy (19–21)	1987	27
Netherlands (18–20)	1987	39
Portugal[5 7]	1984	14
Spain (18–20)	1987	35
United Kingdom[7] (18–21)	1988	36

[1] Includes full-time and part-time students entering higher education for the first time, i.e. excluding postgraduate students and others already having a qualification in higher education. Not all other countries may adhere to this general definition.
[2] Compatible information is not available for Luxembourg since most higher education is undertaken abroad. Ireland figures partly estimated.
[3] To aid comparison and overcome the problem of the varying lengths of courses in different countries the participation rate is the percentage of all new entrants (defined above) related to a derived relevant single year group. The latter is calculated by taking the total populations for the ages providing at least 70 per cent. of the new entrants and dividing by the number of ages involved. For the United Kingdom this is the population of ages 18 to 21 divided by 4. OECD recommend this procedure.
[4] Partly estimated.
[5] Main ages on entry unavailable.
[6] Full-time only.
[7] Latest data available.
[8] Excludes the private sector and students from abroad. Includes nursing and paramedical students at Health Department establishments.

Standard Assessment Tasks

Mr. Cabom: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total cost of designing, printing and implementing the standard assessment tasks for seven-year-olds, including the cost of the teachers' time involved.

Mr. Eggar: Up to 31 March 1991 the cost to the School Examinations and Assessment Council of securing the design, printing, distribution and evaluation of the standard assessment tasks for seven-year-olds was £5,661,755. The standard assessment tasks have been designed to be delivered by a single teacher using existing resources, and—apart from the individual reading test—to take no more than 30 hours, although the exact time will vary according to the circumstances of each class.

Teacher Vacancies

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list by (a) region and (b) for each local education authority the number of teacher vacancies in January 1988, 1989, 1990 and 1991; and if he will show this figure also as a percentage of the total teaching force in each area.

Mr. Fallon: Provisional vacancy figures for 1991 were published on 17 May and are summarised in the table.

The 1991 figures are provisional and a breakdown by local education authority is not yet available. I am arranging for a copy of the numbers of vacancies by local education authority for 1988 to 1990 to be placed in the Library. Comparable figures for 1991 will be placed in the Library when available.

[2] Figures for 1991 are provisional.

Capital Allocations

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing (a) the capital bid for 1991-92, (b) the capital allocation for 1991-92 and (c) the percentage that (b) represents (a) for each local education authority in England.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Details of local education authority capital expenditure bids and education annual capital guidelines—ACGs—for 1991-92 are set out in the table, together with bids and allocations for work at voluntary aided and special agreement schools. No local education authority has ever expected to receive its ACG bid in full, and authorities bid on the basis that they will receive an ACG or allocation to the extent that the bid matches national priority criteria. There is therefore no direct connection between the size of the bid and the level of the ACG or allocation distributed. The percentage figures in the last column are therefore devoid of any real significance.

Annual capital guidelines are not the only source of capital funding available to local education authorities.

South West London College

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what discussions he has had with the governors of South West London college as to their views on the future of this college; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what discussions he has had with the director of education of the London borough of Wandsworth as to the views of the council on the future of South West London college in Tooting; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will meet the hon. Member for Tooting and representatives of staff and students of South West London college, Tooting, before any decision is taken as to the possible closure of this college.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The governors of South West London college wrote to the Department on 10 May 1991 about the future of the college. The director of education of the London borough of Wandsworth wrote on 15 May about its further education provision. I am meeting the hon. Member. My right hon. and learned Friend will be considering all the views expressed before reaching his decision.

Brighton CTC

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science at what price the site of Brighton city technology college, referred to in the answer to the hon. Member for Blackburn of 3 May 1990, Official Report, column 627, is now being offered for sale; what is the difference between that price and the total cost of purchase including agents' and legal fees; and what will be the total anticipated loss to the public purse, after taking account of interest forgone on the moneys used to make the purchase.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The site that was purchased for use as a city technology college in Brighton is being offered for sale with a guide price of £2 million on the advice of agents. The original cost of purchase was £2·3 milion net, in addition to which £54,000 was spent on legal fees. As no sale has yet been agreed for the site, it is not possible to calculate the loss or gain to the public purse as a result of its purchase and resale.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether Mr. Revere was required to repay any interest earned by him, or forgone by the public purse, in respect of the commission charged by him in respect of the purchase of the site of the then proposed Brighton city technology college, referred to in the answer to the hon. Member for Blackburn of 3 May 1990, Official Report, column 627.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No. The commission was repaid in full upon its discovery.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether his Department has been involved in any discussions with the East Sussex police about the charging by Mr. Ivor Revere of commission on the purchase of the site of the then proposed Brighton city technology college; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State referred the handling of the purchase of the property to the appropriate authorities for investigation. The investigation has been completed and I have been advised that no further action is contemplated by these authorities.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps have been taken to improve the financial control of the city technology college programme following the discovery of financial improprieties in respect of the then proposed Brighton city technology college.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The financial procedures of the CTC programme are subject to continual review and improvement by my Department.

Students (Maintenance)

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what support will be given from public funds towards students' maintenance in the academic year 1991-92.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary regulations, the maximum rates of loan for the academic year 1991-92 in the United Kingdom will be as follows:

	Full year rate £	Final year rate £
Students living away from home:
In London	660	480
Elsewhere	580	425
Students living at home	460	335

As already announced, the main rates of maintenance grant for mandatory award holders from England, Wales and Northern Ireland, and their equivalents in Scotland, will be the same as in the current academic year. The rates for England, Wales and Northern Ireland are shown in the table; Scottish rates are slightly different.

Students living away from home:
In London	2,845
Elsewhere	2,265
Students living at home	1,795

These grant and loan rates will enbable full year student support in the United Kingdom to increase by 6 per cent next year.

Science Budget

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the distribution to the research councils, the Royal Society and the Fellowship of Engineering, of the sums that were left unallocated when the science budget planning figures for 1992-93 and 1993 were indicatively distributed.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I have received further advice on the distribution of these unallocated sums from the Advisory Board for the Research Councils, and have decided to accept the board's recommendation that, subject to approval by Parliament of the estimates in due course, the following additions should be made to the indicative allocations already announced for 1992-93 and 1993-94:

£ million

	1992-93	1993-94
Agricultural and Food Research Council	3·1	3·5
Economic and Social Research Council	2·1	2·7
Medical Research Council	5·6	6·2
Natural Environment Research Council	3·8	4·4
Science and Engineering Research Council	[1]20·8	[1]22·5
Royal Society	0·9	1·1
Fellowship of Engineering	0·2	0·2
Total	36·5	[2]40·6

[1] SERC's figures includes £5 million in each year for enhanced supercomputing facilities for use by research councils and institutions of higher education.

[2] The ABRC has not yet considered the distribution of £17·3 million of the unallocated sum for 1993-94.

EMPLOYMENT

Job Clubs

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) for each region and for Great Britain as a whole, how many people (a) were members of job clubs on 1 April 1990, (b) have joined job clubs, from 1 April 1990 to the latest possible date and (c) have left job clubs, from 1 April 1990 to the latest possible date; and what were the destinations of those job club leavers, showing how many entered jobs;

(2) if he will give the destination, ethnic backgrounds and numbers of people who have left job clubs since 1 April 1990, broken down to show (a) the results for each region and for Great Britain as a whole and (b) the results for people leaving either external or internal job clubs.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred these questions for reply.

Restart

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people have attended a restart interview since 1 April 1990, to the latest available date, for each region and for Great Britain as a whole; and what were the results of those interviews, broken down in the manner of the answer to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Lee) of 18 December 1990, Official Report, column 148.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were refused unemployment benefit in the Blyth Valley area under the actively seeking work rules since 1990.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any proposals to enable or encourage greater co-operation between chambers of commerce and training and enterprise councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: My Department is keen to encourage the greatest possible degree of co-operation between training and enterprise councils (TECs) and all the key players in the local business support network. Working closely together in concert avoids wasteful duplication of effort, and makes the best use of both public and private sector funding. I am pleased to report that many TEC plans make working with their local chamber of commerce a leading priority. In many cases, TEC board members are directors of their local chamber of commerce, and vice versa.

Pneumoconiosis

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will now undertake to review the working of the Pneumoconiosis etc. (Workers' Compensation) Act 1979 with a view to establishing whether certain categories of claimants have failed to secure reasonable compensation under the terms of this Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The Government have no current plans to review the working of the compensation scheme which this Act provides. It considers that the Act has well served, and continues to serve, the original purpose intended by Parliament in providing a measure of compensation to sufferers from certain dust diseases who have little chance of obtaining compensation through the courts because the relevant employer is no longer in business. The Government has fully met its commitment to Parliament to review the compensation paid with the aim of maintaining its value.

Sick Building Syndrome

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what research the Health and Safety Executive has carried out into sick building syndrome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) is to commission a comprehensive and critical review of current published literature on sick building syndrome to enable it to consider the production of a guidance leaflet. The results of this review are expected to be available by the end of the year.

The HSE is also evaluating a proposal from an external research unit concerning possible epidemiological studies on this subject.

Work Accidents

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the total number of injuries as a result of work activities reported to enforcement authorities in the five counties of the east midlands region for each year since 1986-87 in the categories (i) fatal, (ii) non-fatal major, (iii) over three days and (iv) total reported in (a) agriculture, (b) energy, (c) manufacturing, (d) construction and (e) services.

Mr. Forth: The available information for the whole of the east midlands region is provided in table 1. Analysis by individual counties could be provided only at disproportionate cost for all injury severities. However, table 2 provides such analysis for the reported fatalities which have been aggregated for the four years since 1986-87 in view of the small numbers involved.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hong Kong

6. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent progress has been made on the proposed new airport development in Hong Kong.

24. Mr. Haynes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation as regards the proposed airport development plan in Hong Kong.

Mr. Hurd: Talks with the Chinese Government on Hong Kong's airport project resumed on 18 May. We and the Chinese Government agree that Hong Kong needs a new airport and we are making intensive efforts to secure Chinese support for the project.

Antarctica

7. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent meeting of Antarctic treaty parties in Madrid.

32. Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Madrid conference on the future of Antarctica.

Mr. Garel-Jones: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 May to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, South-East (Mr. Paice) in which he stated that the Government warmly welcome the outcome of the Madrid meeting and hope that the draft protocol tabled there will provide the basis for comprehensive protection of the Antarctic environment.

Further, the Prime Minister indicated that of particular importance are the provisions for a ban on mineral activity for 50 years, and mechanisms for review of the ban after 50 years, or before if everyone agrees.

The results of these provisions would be that there can never be mining in Antarctica unless all the present consultative parties agree.

Weapons Control

19. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to control the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

Mr. Hurd: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Gosport (Mr. Viggers) on 24 April at column 1072.

20. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to clarify the Soviet disarmament figures.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We and our NATO partners are continuing to press the Soviet Union to ensure the full and early implementation of the CFE treaty.

30. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in controlling the spread of weapons of mass destruction.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are working to strengthen existing regimes of restriction and control. We have already reinforced and widened the scope of our export controls on chemical weapons precursors. We are considering urgently how to improve the regimes to prevent the export of technology and materials for biological weapons.

We shall also be working:

for further accessions to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty to strengthen the international safeguards administered by the International Atomic Energy Agency to harmonise and improve existing export controls through the Zangger committee, nuclear suppliers group and Australia group to secure a commitment to the early negotiation of a chemical weapons convention and the strengthening of the biological weapons convention at its review conference in September and to strengthen the missile technology control regime.

Albania

21. Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about relations with Albania.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Her Majesty's Government have decided in principle to re-establish diplomatic relations between the United Kingdom and Albania, in response to the offer made when the Albanian Foreign Minister called on me on 13 May. We are in touch with the Albanian authorities about the form and timing of an announcement.

Taiwan

22. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has plans to make an official visit to Taiwan.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to do so.

Bangladesh

23. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom-Bangladesh relations.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have very good relations with the newly elected democratic Government of Bangladesh and are working closely with them in the relief effort following the recent cyclone.

Poland

25. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to visit Poland to discuss its entry into the European Community.

Mr. Garel-Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no present plans to visit Poland. We believe that the option of full membership of the European Community should be available to Poland when she is able to meet the political and economic obligations it entails.

Iraq

26. Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of relief operations in northern Iraq.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The relief operation is going well. Refugees are coming down from the mountains in increasing numbers. With the assistance of allied forces, many are returning to their homes. United Nations staff are now also working in the area.

Israel

27. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last visited Israel and the occupied territories; and if he will make a statement.

28. Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Israel and the occupied territories.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend last visited Israel and the occupied territories in October 1990. Since then we have stayed in regular contact with the Israeli Foreign Minister. I visited Israel and the occupied territories from 6 to 9 May. I had detailed discussions with leading Israelis and Palestinians on the peace process. I urged both sides to show the flexibility necessary for Mr. Baker's initiative to succeed.

33. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in the middle east.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We welcome continuing American efforts to restart the middle east peace process. With our EC partners, we have given them our full support. There has been some progress towards acceptance of the idea of a peace conference. Important differences remain but there is enough encouragement to all of us to wear down those differences in order to get a conference under way.

Cuba

31. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to visit Cuba to discuss restrictions on British trade with Cuba.

Mr. Garel-Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no such plans. We have normal trade relations with Cuba.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We want to have a full and constructive relationship with the People's Republic of China. We are seeking to intensify our co-operation over Hong Kong in order to bring about the full implementation of the joint declaration. Since the October Foreign Affairs Council's decision to relax most of the EC Twelve's measures against China, we have restored a number of areas of contact and cooperation. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs' visit to Peking in April was a further step in this process.

Kuwait

36. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his visit to Kuwait.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stroud (Mr. Knapman) on 8 May at cols 473-75.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs regularly discusses third world matters with other foreign ministers.

President Aylwin

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the visit to the United Kingdom in April of President Aylwin of Chile.

Mr. Garel-Jones: President Aylwin visited the United Kingdom from 10-15 April. Among others, he met Her Majesty the Queen and my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister. His Foreign Minister, Mr. Silva Cimma, signed a memorandum of understanding with me on co-operation against drugs. The visit served to underline Chile's return to democratic government.

Agency Status

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his Department under the next steps initiative; and whether he has identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not so far set up any "next steps" agencies. However, it has been agreed that the Wilton Park conference centre will be established as an agency. Our aim is to launch it on 1 September.

The Overseas Development Administration (ODA) has one agency—the National Resources Institute. The ODA has no further candidates under consideration at present.

Visas (Bombay)

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to ensure that applicants attending for interview for visas do not have to queue for long periods of time in the main road outside the British high commission in Bombay.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The British Deputy High Commission in Bombay is moving to new accommodation on 23 May which will provide better facilities for applicants waiting to apply for visas. An improved lay-out and a larger waiting area inside the building should ensure that applications are processed more quickly.

The new address is:

Maker Chambers IV
222 Jamnalal Bajaj Road
(PO Box) 11714
Nariman Point
Bombay 400 021

Egypt (Christians)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representation has been made to the Egyptian Government regarding the treatment of Moustaffa Mohammed Said al Sharkawi, Mohammed Hussein Sallam and Hassan Muhammed Ismael Muhammed and others who have embraced the Christian religion.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs raised the matter with the then Egyptian Foreign Minister in Cairo on 1 May. He told Dr. Abdel Meguid of the widespread concern in Britain at the detention of the three Christians.

Miss Valerie Howell

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why Mr. H. C. Barnes, a constituent of the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds, has received no replies to his inquiries of 28 February and 7 April concerning the death of Miss Valerie Howell in Zimbabwe; and what disposition has been, or is being, made of the late Miss Howell's effects.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As the inquiries to which my hon. Friend refers were addressed to the authorities of another sovereign state, of which Miss Howell was a citizen, I am not in a position to explain the absence of replies.

I have no information about the disposition of her effects. This could best be pursued through legal channels in Zimbabwe and details of local lawyers have been sent to Mr. Barnes.

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received from the high commission in Zimbabwe about the murder in October 1990 of a British citizen, Valerie Howell, in the area of Northwood, Harare; and if Her Majesty's consul in Harare has been in contact with the Zimbabwean CID in respect of its investigations and undertaking to report via the Zimbabwean high commission in London to the late Miss Howell's relative Mr. H. C. Barnes, a constituent of the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As a Zimbabwe/British dual national who had made a form of renunciation of British nationality to the Zimbabwe authorities, in Zimbabwe law the late Miss Howell was a Zimbabwe citizen only. Under international convention Her Majesty's consul in Harare has no standing to receive or request information about matters relating to her.

The High Commission in Harare ia aware only that Miss Howell died at her home in Zimbabwe on 27 October 1990 and that murder was suspected.

Iraq

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the leaders of the Kurdish people in Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I last met representatives of Iraqi opposition groups on 22 April 1991. These included three representatives from Kurdish organisations. The delegation expressed their gratitude for Britain's support for Iraqi refugees.

European Community

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards increasing the number of countries in membership of the EC.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Community has agreed that there should be no decisions on enlargement until 1993. We support enlargement thereafter to include those countries which are qualified to join and able to take on all the obligations of membership.

Turkey

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Turkey concerning article 39 of the treaty of Lausanne and the Kurdish language.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have not made representations to the Government of Turkey regarding article 39 of the treaty of Lausanne. We have noted the recent decision of the Turkish Cabinet to ease restrictions on the use of the Kurdish language.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Turkey, concerning the theft of emergency supplies from Kurdish refugee camps in Turkey by members of the Turkish army; and to what extent such incidents have occurred.

Mr. Garel-Jones: No representations have been made to the Turkish authorities, who have formally denied press allegations of the theft of emergency supplies by members of the Turkish army. We are not aware of any other reports of any looting of relief aid.

Mr. Mohinder Singh Bedi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many invitations have been issued to Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi since 1979 to attend official functions organised by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have checked records available to us and can find no trace of a recent invitation. However, information as far back as 1979 is not readily available and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the United States of America and the European Community about the creation of comprehensive multilateral arms export control regimes.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are in discussion with them on how to promote a more responsible multilateral approach to arms sales, and we are pursuing with them my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's proposal, launched at the European Council in Luxembourg on 8 April, for a United Nations arms register.

Angola

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the situation in Angola and Her Majesty's Government's policy towards achieving a political settlement there.

Mrs. Chalker: We congratulate the Government of Angola and UNITA on reaching a ceasefire agreement and hope that this will formally enter into force on 31 May. We have strongly supported the peace process and will play our part in helping Angola find her feet again.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing (i) for each of the years 1970-71 to 1991-92 an analysis by class of authority within standard region of non-domestic rateable values, average poundages, actual payments, and uncollected non-domestic rate revenues and (ii) for each of the years 1970-71 to 1989-90 by class of authority within standard region of domestic rateable values, gross rates, rates net of rebates, and uncollected domestic rate revenue.

Mr. Portillo: I have arranged for the available information to be placed in the Library of the House.

Homelessness

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing for each local authority in England the number of persons accepted as homeless in each year since 1979 inclusive.

Sir George Young: I have today placed in the Library a table giving the numbers of households for whom local authorities accepted responsibility for securing accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 and the Housing Act 1985, for each year from 1981 to 1990.

In a majority of cases, the main immediate reasons for acceptance by local authorities were that their relations or friends were no longer willing or able to house them or as a result of the breakdown of a relationship. Those accepted will either have been rehoused directly, found temporary accommodation, or enabled to stay in existing accommodation until suitable permanent housing was found.

Information for the years 1979 and 1980 is available in edition No. 54—table 14—edition No. 61—table 11—and edition No. 62—table 13—of "Local Housing Statistics: England and Wales", copies of which are in the Library.

A new reporting system was introduced for non-metropolitan districts in the fourth quarter of 1980 and for metropolitan districts and the London boroughs in the third quarter of 1982, so that the figures are not directly comparable over the whole period.

Refuse Collection

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to issue new guidelines to local authorities for the collection of refuse from composite premises.

Mr. Baldry: My predecessor and I have both issued clear guidelines on this matter. I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Hazel Grove (Sir T. Arnold) on 15 January this year. We intend to amend the Collection and Disposal of Waste Regulations 1988 to reinforce this guidance as soon as is practicable.

County Hall, London

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what use is currently being made of county hall.

Mr. Key: County hall is currently unoccupied pending its intended disposal by the London residuary body.

Thurrock Borough Council

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make an order declaring Thurrock borough council to be in default of its duties in respect of public health by its decision to end its service of emptying cesspools in part of its area, and ordering it to resume these functions within one month.

Mr. Baldry: No: my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no powers to do so. It is acceptable for local authorities to nominate private contractors, by means of competitive tender, to empty cesspools on their behalf. I understand that Thurrock borough council is merely mainatining a list of contractors willing to provide a service: this would not in my Department's view be sufficient to discharge the council's legal obligations to provide a service on request on payment of a reasonable fee. My officials have drawn these views to the council's attention.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals against the uniform business rate have been lodged in the areas covering the parliamentary constituency of Blyth Valley.

Mr. Key: By 31 March 1991, the valuation office had received 836 proposals to alter the 1990 rating list in respect of the area of the parliamentary constituency of Blyth Valley.

Chromium Compound Emissions

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of industrial sites known to his Department which emit chromium compounds into the atmosphere; and what is the damage to public health from these substances.

Mr. Baldry: The major potential sources of chromium emissions must be registered on behalf of the Secretary of State for the Environment by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution under the Alkali etc. Works Regulation Act 1906.

Certificates of registration have been issued for the following such works.

Name of discharger and Location

Ferro-Alloys and Metals Limited—Glossop, Derbyshire
Murex Limited—Rainham, Essex
Harcros Chemicals UK Limited—Eaglescliffe, Cleveland
London & Scandinavia Metallurgical Co. Limited—Rotherham, South Yorkshire

Additionally a number of industrial processes may emit small quantities of chromium. Such processes will be progressively controlled, under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, during the next five years.

The effect of airborne emissions of chromium compounds on public health is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

Fire Regulations

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration has been given to the concern fire officers, insurers and others expressed for the safety of life and property in response to the original consultation paper of March 1990 in preparing the revised England and Wales Building Regulations (Fire).

Mr. Yeo: Officials will shortly be meeting representatives of the chief fire officers to discuss their concerns about the proposals which have been put forward for the revision of part B—safety in fire—of the Building Regulations 1985. Similar meetings have already been held with other representatives of the fire service, with fire insurers, and with a considerable number of other bodies who have commented on the proposals. Together with the written comments, the views expressed at these meetings will be fully taken into account when final decisions on these proposals come to be taken.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the results of consultation on the England and Wales Building Regulations (Fire) will be announced.

Mr. Yeo: The detailed outcome of the review of part B—safety in fire—of the Building Regulations 1985 is likely to be anounced in the autumn.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he intends to take to ensure that the introduction of any new England and Wales Building Regulations (Fire) does not result in higher costs due to higher insurance premiums.

Mr. Yeo: There have been discussions with fire insurers about the proposals for the revision of part B—safety in fire—of the Building Regulations 1985. Their views will be fully taken into account when final decisions on these proposals come to be taken. However, the primary purpose of the regulations is to protect the health and safety of people, while fire insurers are also concerned with the protection of property. The regulations represent minimum requirements. There is no reason however why buildings should not be constructed to higher standards to meet any insurance requirements related to the protection of property.

Common Land

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Hyndburn (Mr. Hargreaves), Official Report, 26 March, columns 352-53, if he will set out the reservations expressed by each interested party on common land legislation; if he will place copies of written representations from each interested party in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: In the discussions held with all major interests following the Government statement of 26 July 1990, views were sought both on the content of prospective comprehensive common land legislation and on the alternative of a short Bill to prevent deregistration. Apart from the national access bodies, the majority of the interests consulted indicated opposition, in varying degrees, to the latter.

After various amenity bodies wrote to Ministers in October 1990 suggesting that the Government introduce a short Bill, the Countryside Commission, the Government's statutory adviser on this matter, confirmed in writing its continued lack of support for this proposal, and the National Farmers Union wrote confirming their opposition. We have no authority from these bodies to place their representations in the Library.

Society of Fire Protection Engineers

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representation there is on the committee advising him on the England and Wales Building Regulations (Fire) from the Society of Fire Protection Engineers.

Mr. Yeo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Hyndburn (Mr. Hargreaves) on 21 February, Official Report, column 201.

EC Labelling Scheme

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett) of 26 March, Official Report, column 354, whether there has been any progress on development of an eco-labelling scheme for the United Kingdom; whether he has received any notification from the European Commission on the development of a Community-wide labelling scheme; what is his policy on whether such a scheme should be voluntary; and when he considers implementation of such a scheme might commence.

Mr. Baldry: The Government have made it clear they support the introduction of a voluntary eco-labelling scheme, and that they would prefer this to be part of an arrangement covering the whole of the European Community. However, if there is undue delay in agreeing a Community scheme we will go ahead with introducing a national scheme. We want an official eco-labelling scheme to be in place as soon as possible, and expect the first labels to be awarded during 1992.

House Values

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing by fifths, sevenths and tenths the value of dwellings and of households incomes before tax.

Mr. Key: The information requested is not available.

Right to Buy

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local housing authorities in England who have put forward schemes under the Housing Act 1988 to provide council tenants with a cash grant to help them buy a home in the private sector; how many houses have been purchased to date under the provisions in each of those district council areas; what was the minimum and maximum level of grants paid to each area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: Local authority cash incentive schemes can be a valuable means of helping tenants into home ownership while releasing vacancies for reletting to homeless people. Table 1 lists schemes approved to date and gives the maximum grant payable under each scheme. Further schemes for 1991-92 are under consideration.

Authorities report annually on the outturn of their schemes. Table 2 gives the number of properties bought with assistance under 1989-90 schemes and average grants paid: information on maximum and minimum grants paid is not readily available. Reports on 1990-91 schemes are still being received.

East London River Crossing

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he now expects to recieve the report of the second public inquiry on the east London river crossing; and when he will announce his decision.

Mr. Yeo: When the inspector has completed his report and when my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State for Transport have considered it.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress achieved with the European Community programme preventative environmental protection approaches in Europe since 1990.

Mr. Baldry: I will write to the hon. Member.

Global Warming

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will obtain for his departmental library a copy of the research programme of the International Council of Scientific Unions on global warming and climate change.

Mr. Baldry: The scientific staff of the global atmosphere division of the Department of the Environment already have a set of reports from the International Council of Scientific Unions published as "The International Geosphere-Biosphere Programme: a Study of Global Change", and another set is on order for the department's library.

West end Scheme, Bradford

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether any city grant has been approved for 3Ds Ltd., for the west end scheme in Bradford; whether all the published criteria have been met for the application; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether any second application for city grant has been made or is pending from 3Ds Ltd. for any further extension of the west end scheme in Bradford.

Mr. Key: No city grant has yet been approved. The first phase of the development is still under discussion with 3D Ltd., and further details have been requested from it prior to proceeding to full appraisal. No details are available about further applications arising from this current proposal.

UN Environment Conference

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether any British civil servants have been seconded to work at the secretariat of the United Nations conference on environment and development Rio 92 office in Conches, Switzerland.

Mr. Baldry: In January my Department seconded an official to the United Nations conference on environment and development secretariat and he has been appointed senior programme officer. We are also supporting a British United Nations volunteer who will be working for the secretariat later this year.

Ministers' Cars

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether particular cars or cars from a pool are allocated to Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: For security reasons, it would not be appropriate to provide information about the use by Ministers of Government car service vehicles.

Planning Permission

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to amend article 18 of the Town and Country Planning General Development Order 1988 so as to require local planning authorities to consult the National Rivers Authority on the availability of adequate water resources before granting planning permission for any development that is assessed as being likely to lead to a significant increase in water consumption in the area concerned.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to do so, but he keeps the General Development Order under constant review and pays close attention to any comments or proposals which the National Rivers Authority may make to him.

In addition to the existing statutory consultation requirements in article 18 of the General Development Order, the National Rivers Authority is already a consultee under the environmental assessment regulations. Local planning authorities also consult the National Rivers Authority on a non-statutory basis in preparing development plans and about planning applications which have implications for flood defence and land drainage; the Department's circular 17/82, which deals with these matters, is under review.

Local Government (Standing Orders)

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce his conclusions as a result of the consultation exercise on the implementation of sections 8 and 20 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. Portillo: My Department and the Welsh Office have very carefully considered the comments received on the report produced by the joint local/central government working group on the implementation of sections 8 and 20 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, which provides powers for the Secretary of State for the Environment and the Secretary of State for Wales to require local authorities to adopt standing orders regulating the appointment and discipline of staff and various procedural matters. The Government have decided to implement only standing orders which will serve to underpin the independence of local authority chief officers. The consideration of any further action must await the conclusions of the general review of local government.

My Department will, therefore, be consulting the English and Welsh local authority associations on the content of draft regulations and the timing of their implementation, which would provide for compulsory standing orders on the appointment and dismissal of chief officers.

The proposals would require procedural safeguards on appointment, including a certificate from the monitoring officer, appointed under section 5 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, and discipline, including the introduction of an independent person to ensure that unreasonable disciplinary action is not taken. These measures are essential to enable chief officers to continue to serve local authorities with maximum effectiveness.

On the procedural questions which were proposed to be covered by the compulsory standing orders we have also concluded that, in present circumstances, we should not impose new rules. The local authority associations will however also be consulted on a number of minor matters concerning procedural standing orders with a view to addressing certain ambiguities in the existing legislation on council procedures.

Wath Recycling

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information has been reported to him of the results of visits paid to the premises of Wath Recycling by officials of the South Yorkshire hazardous waste unit since June 1989.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 21 May 1991]: I have received regular progress reports about the Department's liaison with the South Yorkshire hazardous waste unit over that unit's monitoring of the site and about various options for dealing with the waste. But this has not required detailed reports on specific visits by the unit which has the regulatory responsibility.

Drinking Water (Lead Levels)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the lead levels in drinking water supplied by each undertaking in the Northumbrian Water Authority area; what action is being taken to reduce lead levels in drinking water in the Northumbrian Water Authority area; and how many tests on lead levels in drinking water of the Northumbrian Water Authority area have been made and how many are proposed to be made in 1991-92.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 21 May 1991]: The public registers kept by all water companies contain details of lead levels in drinking water and the number of samples taken. The number of samples to be taken is set by the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 and depends on the results of previous analysis of samples, and either the volume of water distributed for domestic purposes in a water supply zone or the population supplied in the zone. All water companies in England and Wales are carrying out surveys to establish whether there is a risk that lead levels in drinking water will exceed the standard set in the regulations of 50 micrograms per litre after it has left the company's pipes. The surveys should be completed in June and companies will then decide what measures, if any, they need to take.

Unleaded Petrol

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the report on his Department's survey into motorists' attitudes to the use of unleaded petrol will become available.

Mr. Baldry: The report, entitled "Survey of barriers against further uptake of unleaded petrol", was published today and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House. The findings of the report are being considered by my Department.

SCOTLAND

AIDS

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the Government's financial assistance to voluntary bodies dealing with AIDS in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In respect of 1991-92 The Scottish Office has so far offered financial assistance to AIDS voluntary bodies in Scotland totalling approximately £108,000. Health boards may also provide assistance to such bodies in respect of services provided in their areas from their AIDS allocations, which total over £17 million in 1991-92.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the AIDS unit allocations made to each of the three host health boards in (a) cash and (b) constant prices for 1990-91 and 1991-92, respectively.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 May 1991]: The following table shows, at cash prices, the allocations made in 1990-91 to Lothian, Greater Glasgow and Tayside health boards in respect of their AIDS units. It also shows these amounts adjusted to 1991-92 prices using the GDP deflator.

Allocations made in 1991-92 in respect of the revenue costs of the units have been subsumed in the general AIDS allocations made to the boards concerned. A capital allocation of £542,000 has been made to Lothian health board in 1991-92 in respect of its unit.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the allocations for HIV-AIDS treatment care and prevention to each of the Scottish health boards in (a) cash and (b) constant prices for 1990-91 and 1991-92 respectively.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 May 1991]: The table shows AIDS allocations made to health boards in respect of 1990-91 and 1991-92 at cash prices and adjusted to 1991-92 prices using the GDP deflator.

A revised method has been applied for the allocation of AIDS resources in 1991-92. It is based mainly on the estimated care and treatment costs of people with HIV and AIDS in each health board area; but it also makes provision for expenditure on non-care and non-treatment activities (eg local HIV prevention initiatives); and it provides that the estimated revenue and, where appropriate, capital costs of the AIDS special units operated by Greater Glasgow, Lothian and Tayside health boards are met in full. It has the effect of directing the bulk of available resources to those health boards which are carrying the heaviest burdens arising from HIV and AIDS.

Legionnaire's Disease

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when his Department first learnt of the outbreak of Legionella resulting from contaminated water supplies in Greater Glasgow health board premises.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Legionellosis became a notifiable disease in Scotland on 1 October 1988. Since that date Greater Glasgow health board have informed the Scottish Office Home and Health Department on the occasion of any outbreak.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which hospitals have been affected by the Legionella outbreak in the Greater Glasgow area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: During 1990 the Glasgow Royal Infirmary and the Glasgow Western Infirmary both recorded cases of Legionnaire's disease. There are currently no outbreaks in the Greater Glasgow health board area.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps have been taken to avoid further outbreaks of Legionella in Glasgow health board premises.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There is an ongoing programme of water systems disinfection, maintenance and upgrading throughout Greater Glasgow health board's premises along with a programme of reserch into the proliferation of the legionellae becterium. Over the past two years £0·25 million has been spent on these measures and an allocation of £0·5 million has been made for 1991-92 to continue the programme.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many isolates of Legionella species have been found in the water supplies of Greater Glasgow health board premises.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Since 1 October 1988 Legionella pneumophila serogroups 1 and 6 have been isolated from the water systems in Greater Glasgow health board's premises.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when was the last case of water contaminated by Legionella species detected in the greater Glasgow area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Legionellaceae, the family of Legionella bacteria survive and multiply in water. It is widespread in natural fresh water including rivers and ponds, and may also be found in wet soil. There is a strong likelihood of very low concentrations of the bacterium existing in all open water systems, including hospital water systems, at almost any time.

In the main, through the control of water temperature, appropriate disinfection and avoidance of water stagnation, the proliferation of the bacterium can be satisfactorily contained.

Currently, there is no outbreak of legionnaire's disease in health board premises in the Greater Glasgow area.

Scottish Institute of Adult and Continuing Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial contribution he has made to the Scottish Institute of Adult and Continuing Education in each year since 1979, at 1990-91 prices.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

Year	Grant (at 1990-91 prices) £
1979-80	18,075
1980-81	17,796
1981-82	25,494

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Forestry Commission will adopt a policy of offering sites of special scientific interest in its ownership which are considered for privatisation on a first refusal basis to nature conservation or heritage organisations.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Forestry Commission has had such a policy since its programme of land sales began in 1981. Details of the arrangements followed are set out in appendix IX, paragraphs 15-17, of the Commission's 1989-90 annual report.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the Forestry Commission's policy towards land which is designated as a site of special scientific interest.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: It has long been the Forestry Commission's policy to agree plans with the Nature Conservancy Council and its successor bodies for the management of sites of special scientific interest (SSSIs) on commission land and to consult with them over all grant-aid and felling applications affecting SSSIs on privately-owned land.

Nurses (Appeals)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many nurses in (a) the Argyll and Clyde health board, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole had regrading appeals outstanding at 31 March.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 21 May 1991]: Information on the number of nurse clinical grading appeals outstanding at 31 March at health board level is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The information at Scottish appeals committee level and at negotiating council level is given in the following table.

	Scottish appeals committee	Negotiating council
Argyll and Clyde health board	148	17

Audiology

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what training programmes exist for physical measurement technicians in audiology; how many places are annually available; what budget is provided for the training currently and for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [Holding answer 21 May 1991]: The training of physiological measurement technicians in audiology involves mainly in-service training, with further education colleges providing the necessary external input. The trainees are salaried. Information on individual health boards' training programmes, and their current and previous budgets since 1979 is not held centrally.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the average waiting list for (a) children under 16 years, (b) adults and (c) pensioners to obtain hearing assessments; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the average waiting time for the supply of hearing aids to (a) children under 16 years, (b) adults and (c) pensioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [Holding answer 21 May 1991]: The information requested is not held centrally.

DEFENCE

Polaris

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will obtain a copy of the report published by Greenpeace entitled "Bring Polaris Home" for his Department's library;

(2) if he will make a statement on his response to the report by Greenpeace entitled "Bring Polaris Home", a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence has received a number of copies of the report by Greenpeace entitled "Bring Polaris Home", one of which has been passed to the Department's library. Our resolution class Polaris submarines, like all our other nuclear-powered submarines, have been subject to a programme of inspections, set in hand as a prudent precautionary measure following the discovery of a technical defect in one of the Royal Navy's hunter-killer submarines. As I have indicated to the House before—Official Report, 8 February 1991, columns 264-65, our nuclear submarines operate, and are maintained, in accordance with rigorous safety standards and with the endorsement of the nuclear-powered warships safety committee. The Ministry of Defence attaches the greatest importance to nuclear safety and we would not allow any submarine to go to sea if we considered it unsafe to do so. Our intention remains to keep resolution class submarines in operation until they are replaced by the Vanguard class Trident force.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the repair and maintenance programme for Polaris nuclear submarines; and whether work is proceeding on developing remedial work on the nuclear reactors which will avoid radiation dosages to workers.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Details of the repair and maintenance programme for Polaris nuclear submarines are classified. Radiation exposures are authorised only to the extent that they are justified, that they are within departmental and statutory limits, and that they are as low as reasonably practicable. They are kept under continuous review.

Radiation Exposure

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are being taken to ensure that radiation exposure of personnel undertaking nuclear safety inspections and repairs to operational Resolution class submarines at the Clyde submarine base have been as low as is reasonably possible.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: All practicable measures are being taken to ensure that occupational exposure to ionising radiation throughout the Ministry of Defence, including Clyde submarine base, is as low as reasonably practicable. In the case of those so exposed as a result of tasks being carried out on nuclear submarines, such measures may include decontamination, shielding, work sharing and modification to procedures, as appropriate and depending upon the particular tasks involved.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many additional personnel have been employed to carry out nuclear safety inspections and repairs to operational Resolution class submarines over the last 18 months;

(2) what has been the cost of repairs to operational Resolution class submarines over the last 18 months;

(3) what has been the cost of nuclear safety inspections to operational Resolution class submarines over the last 18 months.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to comment on details of submarine refit, repair or maintenance programmes.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 1 May, Official Report, column 256, if he will make a statement on the factors underlying the higher figures for the Clyde submarine base, as set out in his letter to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The increase in radiation dose figures for the Clyde submarine base for 1990 over those for previous years is due to a fluctuation in the workload. Although levels of individual dose are higher, all doses are within the statutory limits.

Air Crash, Cardigan Bay

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish details of the incident involving a pilotless aircraft which crashed on land near his Department's range on Cardigan bay at about 1800 hours on 14 May; whether his Department has launched an inquiry into the cause of the incident; and if he will publish its results.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: A Jindivik unmanned aircraft crashed on its approach to the Defence Research Agency's Llanbedr airfield following a routine operational sortie. Debris resulting from the crash hit a car occupied by two people, one of whom sustained superficial injuries. A local board of inquiry has been set up by the aerospace division of the Defence Research Agency, the results of which will be published in the form of a military aircraft accident summary in due course.

RAF Training

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what differences exist between the first stage of training for a Royal Air Force fast jet pilot and the first stage of training for a civil pilot.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no single, standard route for training for either civil or RAF fast jet pilots. However, a typical civil trainee may expect to be awarded his commercial pilot's licence after approximately 170 to 200 hours of flying training, normally on a light piston engined aircraft. An RAF fast jet trainee will carry out around 147 hours of basic flying training on the Tucano before going on to the Hawk. During this training, both will have carried out general flying, including circuit work, stalling, instrument flying and navigation. However, the civil training will have concentrated on instrument flying and navigation in airways, whereas the RAF pilot, although carrying out some airways training, will have concentrated on low-level navigation. It would also be very rare for a civil trainee to do aerobatics or formation flying, whereas these disciplines form very major elements of RAF training.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will provide a declassified summary of the programme of training for (a) fast jet pilots, (b) helicopter pilots and (c) transport aircraft pilots.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Due to the different flying backgrounds of personnel entering the RAF for training, it is not possible to give a single definitive programme. Some pilot recruits will have no previous flying experience whereas some may have received flying training at one of the university air squadrons, or may have considerable previous civilian experience, including commercial licences. Their training pattern will depend to some extent on this previous experience. For an entrant holding a private pilot's licence, his training up to the award of wings, and following completion of initial officer training, for the three specialisations mentioned would typically be:

a. Fast jet
147 hours on the Tucano, taking 46 weeks.
75 hours on the Hawk, taking 22 weeks.

b. Helicopter
64 hours on the Tucano, taking 26 weeks.
80 hours on the Gazelle, taking 18 weeks.
63 hours on the Wessex, taking 14 weeks.

c. Multi-engine
140 hours on the Tucano, taking 40 weeks.
50 hours on the Jetstream, taking 20 weeks.

After award of wings, pilots will go on to complete specialised training for the specific type of aircraft they will fly operationally, which in the longest case will be a further 40 weeks. During the whole of this period, their flying training will be integrated with ground instruction in specialist and general service training.

Type 23 Frigates

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to place orders for Type 23 frigates.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I have nothing to add to my answer of 20 February, Official Report, column 192.

Missiles

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards Dutch participation in the local area missile system study.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No aproach has been received from the Netherlands about joining the local area missile system study. Any approach would require discussion among the collaborative partners in the family of anti-air missile systems programme, the United Kingdom, France, Spain and Italy.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the successful bidder in the advanced short-range air-to-air missile contract.

Mr. Alan Clark: I hope to be in a position to make an announcement next year.

Over-the-Horizon Radar

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the considerations which influenced the cancellation of the plans to base relocatable over-the-horizon radar transmitters at St. David's airfield and at Blakehill.

Mr. Alan Clark: The decision was taken in the light of competing calls on the defence budget and various representations made to me over the last 12 months.

Airborne Stand-off Radar

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to receive the results of the airborne stand-off radar demonstration programme; and what factors he will take into account in deciding whether the programme will be further developed.

Mr. Alan Clark: The results of the technology demonstrator programme will be considered towards the end of this year. Decisions on the future of the programme will take account of all relevant factors including the results of the demonstrator programme, operational requirements and affordability.

Hunt Class Minehunters

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the updating of Hunt class minehunters will commence; what improvements will be made; when the updating is expected to be concluded; and what effect there will be on the capability of the vessels.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Hunt class minehunters are modern and capable ships. The most recent of the class, HMS Quorn, entered service in 1989. We are considering whether, as with other ships, they should eventually be updated as technology develops. No decisions are required for some time.

The Gulf

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will commission a study into the contribution made to successful United Kingdom operations in the Gulf war by logistical support.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All aspects of the Gulf conflict are currently being considered.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards Anglo-French co-operation in the development of a new generation SSN.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No decisions have yet been made concerning a new generation SSN for the Royal Navy. The scope for Anglo-French co-operation will continue to be kept under review.

Search and Rescue Services

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the terms of the unsolicited offer received by his Department for the contractorisation of part of the search and rescue services presently provided by the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. This information is commercially confidential.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to have completed consideration of the unsolicited offer received by his Department for the contractorisation of parts of the search and rescue operations presently provided by the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The provision of military search and rescue cover around the United Kingdom is being reviewed as part of the MOD's work on the "Options for Change" proposals. It will not be possible to consider the potential for contractorisation until the outcome of this work is clearer.

Coastal Patrol Boats

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many fast coastal patrol boats are in service with the Royal Navy; and when he expects to place orders for additional vessels.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Royal Navy does not operate a type of craft known as a "fast coastal patrol boat". It does, however, have a number of patrol craft, among them the Peacock class Hong Kong patrol craft, Bird class large patrol craft, the Attacker and Archer class training craft. There are no current plans to place orders for patrol craft.

British Marines, Turkey

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has made to the Government of Turkey concerning members of the British Marines, following a dispute with a Turkish provincial governor at a refugee camp in Yesilova, Turkey.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is regular contact with the Government of Turkey on all aspects of the coalition humanitarian operation. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence visited Turkey last week and met President Ozal for discussions on mutual co-operation.

Occasional misunderstandings between the different forces and authorities involved in the operation, such as the minor incident at Yelisova, are almost inevitable in the difficult circumstances of the refugee camps, but relations between British and Turkish forces and officials on the ground have been and remain good.

HEALTH

NHS Low Income Scheme

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the responsibility for the NHS low income scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Since 10 April 1991, responsibility for the national health service low income scheme has been consolidated within the Department of Health. Claims for charge remission will continue to be dealt with by the health benefits unit—previously the agency benefits unit—at Newcastle but with the unit working directly to the Department of Health on the basis of a service agreement.

During 1991, the Department of Health will undertake a review of the administration of the low income scheme. The review will aim to produce proposals by the end of 1991 for simplifying the claim form AG1 and other administrative procedures.

Thalidomide

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the pharmaceutical drug Thalidomide still has a product licence; for what purposes its use is recommended; and what safeguards there are to ensure that it is not taken by pregnant women;

(2) if any drug trials are currently taking place involving the pharmaceutical drug Thalidomide.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Thre are no current product licences for Thalidomide in the United Kingdom.

The medicines control agency of the Department of Health has been notified under the doctors and dentists exemption scheme of one clinical trial involving the use of the drug Thalidomide in the United Kingdom.

Clinical trials with Thalidomide may be approved which do not involve women of child-bearing potential. There is interest in testing it for use in severe orogenital ulceration—Behcet's syndrome—and serious skin conditions—actinic prurigo and skin disease of leprosy.

General Practitioners

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the projects in Yorkshire and Trent regions studying the extension of general practitioner fundholding to the community care services; when he expects the project to be complete; and what other extensions of the general practitioner fundholding concept are under consideration.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Yorkshire project is exploring the benefits to patients of co-locating health and social care services in a fundholding practice. The Trent project will consider the options for including within the general practice funding scheme community health services, some aspects of social care and other hospital services. The second year of this project will pilot some of the options developed in the first year.

Both projects are expected to be complete in spring 1993. We are also piloting the extension of the fundholding scheme to practices with a list size of less than 9,000 patients.

Health Spending

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the level of expenditure on (a) the national health service and (b) the hospital and community health services current budget, for each year since 1973-74, expressed in 1990-91 prices, adjusted by (a) the gross domestic product deflator and (b) changes in input unit costs;

(2) what was the level of net hospital and community health services current and net NHS expenditure adjusted by changes in input unit costs in each year since 1973-74.

Figures in column B do not reflect these transfers and are therefore not comparable with those for later years.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Payment Delays

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the delay in the processing of claims relating to disability benefit payments and backdated reduced earnings allowance, made by citizens resident in the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow; and what are the reasons for the differences in the levels of payments that have been made to such people in different areas.

Miss Widdecombe: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Low Incomes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 24 April, Official Report, columns 467-68, if he will now provide similar information regarding those living on incomes less than 50 per cent. of the national average in each of the same years.

Mr. Jack: Information in precisely the form requested is available only for the years for which "Households Below Average Income"—HBAI—has been published. Other information is available for earlier years, but the methodologies and definitions used differ substantially and it is therefore not appropriate to make direct comparisons throughout the whole period.

It is also important to remember that real personal disposable income per head in the United Kingdom has risen substantially during this period. Consequently, the percentage of the population who were living on incomes below any constant threshold will show a very different picture. Thus, for example, the numbers of people living below 50 per cent. of the 1979 national average equivalised income—before housing costs—fell from 3·8 million in 1979 to 2·5 million in 1987 and remained at 2·5 million in 1988.

Sources are the Central Statistical Office's annual redistribution of income articles and the published family expenditure survey reports; the estimates listed in the table are made from the most appropriate published source for each year. All the pre-HBAI analyses are in terms of numbers of households rather than population, and none of them used equivalisation to adjust for differing household sizes and compositions. This makes a considerable difference to the percentage shown as having below half average income. The pre-HBAI household income distributions show many households with relatively low incomes merely because there are few people —perhaps only one person—living in these households. The HBAI figures in the first column use equivalisation to adjust for this, and thus give a meaningful indication of the income distribution and of relative living standards.

Various different definitions of income have been used, and the one from the FES reports in 1960-61 and 1965-66 is a pre-tax gross income measure.

All the figures are derived from the family expenditure survey and thus cover only the household population.

Means-tested Benefits

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, for each means-tested benefit, each of those other benefits which are taken into account in assessing its value.

Mr. Jack: There are four income-related benefits. These are income support, family credit, housing benefit and community charge benefit. The treatment of these benefits in assessing entitlement to each of the others is set out in the table.

Benefit being assessed	Benefits to be taken into account
	Income support	Family credit	Housing benefit	Community Charge benefit
Income support	—	Yes	No	No
Family credit	No	—	No	No
Housing benefit	No	Yes	—	No
Community charge benefit	No	Yes	No	—

Generally attendance allowance—other than for those in residential care or nursing homes—and mobility allowance are fully disregarded in all the income related benefits, as is the first £10 of war widows pension, war disablement pension and other analogous payments. Child benefit, including one-parent benefit, is disregarded in the assessment of family credit. Most other social security benefits are taken fully into account in calculating entitlement to the income-related benefits.

Full lists of items which are disregarded in whole or in part are contained in regulation 40(2) of, and schedule 9 to, the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987; regulation 24(2) of, and schedule 2 to the Family Credit (General) Regulations 1987; 29(2), 31(2), 33(2), 36(3) and 38(2) of, and schedules 3, 4 and 5 to, the Housing Benefit (General) Regulations 1987 and regulations 23(2) of, and schedule 3 to, the Community Charge Benefits (General) Regulations 1989.

Family credit is paid at the same rate for a fixed period of 26 weeks. If a claim for income support is made within this period, family credit is taken into account in the calculation of the income support for the remainder of the 26-week period.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total expenditure by his Department on press and public relations in 1979-80 and in each following year; and what is his estimate for 1990-91 and budget for 1991-92.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 30 April 1991]: The Department has no separate public relations section. Functions commonly associated with public relations are carried out by information officers as part of their duties in the Department's information division.

I refer the hon. Member to the replies, given to him on 19 November 1986 at column 794, on 4 November 1987 at columns 785-87, on 14 January 1988 at column 402, on 13 March 1989 at columns 30-31, for information for 1979-80 to 1989-90.

Estimated total expenditure by the information division in 1990-91 is as follows:

	£ million
Publicity	12·843
Staff	1·354
Running costs	0·603

The 1991-92 budgets for the information division in the Department of Social Security headquarters and the Benefits Agency are as follows.

Care Homes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the maximum rates of benefit for each category of residential care and nursing home in April 1987 and 1991, both in cash and real terms.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 8 May 1991]: The table shows the national limits for April 1987 and 1991 in cash and real terms, using April 1991 as the base and applying movements in the retail prices index to convert the April 1987 limit into 1991 terms. The comparison should be treated with caution because the RPI is only a measure of price movements generally.

Claimants, Blyth Valley

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many tenants in Blyth Valley are in receipt of rent rebates and poll tax rebates.

Mr. Scott: At February 1991, the latest date for which information is available, the housing benefit caseload in the Blyth Valley borough council area was 6,994. Of this total, 5,358 households were in receipt of a rent rebate and 1,636 households were in receipt of a rent allowance. At the same date, approximately 18,000 individuals, including tenants, were in receipt of community charge benefit.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will outline the duties and responsibilities of the Under-Secretaries of State in his Department following the creation of the Benefits Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The duties and responsibilities of Under-Secretaries of State are contained in the list of ministerial responsibilities, a copy of which is available in the Library. Ministers remain fully accountable to Parliament for the work of the Department, including its executive agencies.

Family Support

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes are intended in support for less well-off families in 1991-92.

Mr. Scott: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced last October, child benefit rose by £1 a week for the eldest eligible child in each family this April. In addition, as my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer anounced in his Budget statement, child benefit will rise by a further £1 a week for the eldest eligible child in each family in October, with an extra 25p a week for other children. The Government are taking all steps necessary to make sure that families at all income levels will gain from the October increase.

The income support personal allowances for single people under 25 who claim independently will also be increased in line with the children's rates.

These October increases will be in addition to the April uprating of all the income-related benefits.

As my right hon. Friend said in his Budget statement, the Government are committed to increasing the new rates of child benefit in line with the movement in the retail price index each year, starting in April 1992. We will announce in the uprating statement the allocation of the individual amounts between the eldest eligible child and other children.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Howbury Grange School

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the future of Howbury Grange school.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. and learned Friend has received two letters, both objecting to the proposed closure of Howbury Grange school.

School Premises Regulations

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made in the review of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981; and when he expects to publish the results of the review.

Mr. Fallon: Work is currently in progress on a range of topics as part of the review, the results of which are likely to be available towards the end of next year.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what upper limit he will place on the proportion of schools eligible to achieve grant-maintained status, provided each school complies with his current criteria.

Mr. Eggar: None. All maintained primary and secondary schools are eligible to apply for grant-maintained status. We will judge each application which comes before us on its individual merits.

Edinburgh University

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a direct grant to the university of Edinburgh on condition that the Audobon bird manuscripts and editions are retained in perpetuity.

Mr. Alan Howarth: No. Universities are responsible for managing their own financial affairs, including the acquisition and disposal of assets.

Sport

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to publish the results of his review of Government policy on sport.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to him on 30 November 1990 at columns 501-2, when I said that we aim to publish a statement of the Government's policies and priorities for sport in the summer.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Aid Budget

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a table showing for each of the past 25 years, the proportion of gross national product which the United Kingdom has given by way of overseas aid.

Mrs. Chalker: Net official development assistance as a percentage of gross national product was as follows:

The figure for 1990 will be available in June.

Kurds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state what is the total value of the aid given by Her Majesty's Government to help the Kurds since the ending of the Gulf war; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Since 4 April, British humanitarian assistance for Iraqi refugees, including our share of the EC emergency programme, totals £61·5 million.

Forests

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent the principles governing the management of Britain's own forests are applied to the management of forests overseas as criteria for determining eligibility of aid for specific projects.

Mrs. Chalker: The technical, environmental, social and economic issues involved in the management of tropical forests often differ from those involved in the management of British forests. In financing projects and programmes in developing countries in the forest sector, the ODA uses appraisal, design and management principles which it considers appropriate to issues involved. In doing so, the ODA draws on the expertise of its forestry advisers and, as appropriate, other expertise both in the United Kingdom and overseas.

ENVIRONMENT

London Docklands

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the residential units completed in the London Docklands UDA since 1981 have been (a) built for sale, (b) built for rent by local authorities, (c) built for rent by housing associations and (d) built for other types of tenure; if he will specify them; and if he will provide similar figures for those residential units that have been built on London Docklands development corporation-owned land since 1981.

Mr. Key: Nearly a fifth of all new housing in the UDA is social housing of one sort or another, as shown in the table below.

	Total in UDA	On LDDC land
(a) For sale	12,247	6,498
(b) Local authority rented	804	209

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide for each year since 1981, the total expenditure by the London Docklands development corporation on (a) the provision of the new units of social housing and (b) housing improvements or refurbishment.

Mr. Key [pursuant to his answer, 8 May 1991, Official Report, c. 519]: The information is provided in the tables:

Housing (Government Subsidies)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for Great Grimsby, Barrow in Furness, Wandsworth, Westminster and Elmbridge his estimate of (i) the average Government subsidy per council dwelling and (ii) the average amount of mortgage interest tax relief for other dwellings.

Mr. Yeo: The information is as follows:

Average amount of housing revenue account subsidy claimed per dwelling for 1991-92

Great Grimsby	897
Barrow in Furness	870
Wandsworth	1,518
Westminster	2,124
Elmbridge	769

The estimated average cost of mortgage interest tax relief in 1990-91 for each owner occupier claiming mortgage tax relief in the United Kingdom was £830, equivalent to £531 for all owner occupiers. Information on the average amount mortgage tax relief claimed broken down by local authority area is not available.

The capital cost of constructing council dwellings in 1990-91 was approximately £44,000 per dwelling in the north and £55,000 in the south-east and eastern regions, excluding the land cost element.

Council Tax

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the value of the housing stock in England; and what effect a reduction in that figure to £1,200 billion would have on the council tax revenue yield overall and from households in each band.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 10 May at column 622.

The illustrative council tax bills published on 23 April were based on a yield of £6·8 billion. This would not have been different if the assumed value of the housing stock had been lower.

Population Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the population, total number of households, the total number of pensioners and children.

Mr. Key: Estimates of the population by broad age ranges for each local authority district are given in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys publication, "Key population and vital statistics, local and health authority areas". A copy of the latest edition giving 1989 estimates can be found in the House of Commons Library and further assistance may be obtained from the Library's statistical staff.

Regarding information on households I refer the hon. Member to the answers that I gave him on 21 May 1991 at column 402, and on 20 May at columns 327-28.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the number of two-adult households with three or more children.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 21 May 1991 at column 402.

Air Pollution Monitoring

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the air pollution monitoring sites based in south Yorkshire for (a) ozone, (b) carbon monoxide, (c) nitrogen oxides, (d) acid deposition, (e) atmospheric chemistry, (f) atmospheric hydrocarbon, (g) trace germs, (h) smoke and sulphur dioxide directive, (i) other sulphur dioxide sites, (j) lead sites and (k) multi-element sites including lead.

Mr. Baldry: My Department is currently operating the following air pollution monitoring sites in south Yorkshire:

(a) ozone, none
(b) carbon monoxide, none
(c) nitrogen oxides, none
(d) acid deposition, none
(e) atmospheric chemistry, none
(f) atmospheric hydrocarbons, none

Local Government Review

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what use he plans to make of the university of Aston business school's report on the national survey of parish and town councils in his current review of local government.

Mr. Key: We shall take into account the results of the national survey of parish and town councils by the university of Aston business school in our local government review.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is yet able to give a definite date for when he expects to receive the university of Aston business school's report on the national survey of parish and town councils; what monetary assistance was given to the clerks to the councils for compiling this information; and what action he will be carrying out after studying the report.

Mr. Key: We expect to receive the first results of this survey shortly. The clerks to the councils completed the survey without financial assistance from the Department, in accordance with the usual research practice. The results will be taken into account in our local government review and will inform the Department's work in relation to parishes.

Thamesmead

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the Boundary Commission to report to him on Thamesmead; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The Local Government Boundary Commission's programme of work is for the commission to determine with the resources at its disposal. I understand that the commission is currently considering the responses it has received to its draft proposals for the boundary between the London boroughs of Bexley and Greenwich, affecting Thamesmead, and it is likely to be some time before this review is completed. I regret that I cannot give a firmer forecast.

Yorkshire Water

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what target has been set for Yorkshire Water plc to achieve in terms of reducing water loss between reservoir and consumer as part of the efficiency component in price setting.

Mr. Baldry: The K factors set for Yorkshire Water Services Ltd. to run for 10 years from 1990 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State assumed that there would be continuing efficiency gains across the full operations of the company. No specific target was set within price setting for reducing water loss. Questions on the continuing performance of Yorkshire Water should be addressed to the Director General of Water Services.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reports have been made by Yorkshire Water plc on progress made in reducing the proportion of water lost between reservoir and consumer since privatisation.

Mr. Baldry: I am informed that Yorkshire Water plc has not published any reports on this topic. However, Yorkshire Water Services Ltd. (YWS) has a continuing programme to reduce leakage, which is monitored by the Director General of Water Services. YWS outlined its programme to the Yorkshire Customer Service Committee in July 1990.

Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the first meeting of the Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment will take place; and what will be on the agenda.

Mr. Baldry: The Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment held its first meeting on 21 May. The committee discussed a wide range of current and longer-term environmental issues.

Benzene

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the levels of airborne benzene in south Yorkshire.

Mr. Baldry: My Department has no information on the levels of airborne benzene specifically in south Yorkshire.

Chelmsford Borough Council

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement listing the amount of public money his Department has passed to Chelmsford borough council for all services since April 1979; and what are his forward plans for the next three years.

Mr. Key: The amounts paid in support of Chelmsford borough council's general services for these years—excluding figures for main housing subsidy for 1979-80 and 1980-81 which could be provided only at disproportionate cost—were:

	Rate support grant (£000)	Main housing subsidy (£000)
1979-80	6,147	—
1980-81	7,034	—
1981-82	3,044	590
1982-83	4,302	0
1983-84	4,367	0
1984-85	4,207	0
1985-86	3,771	0
1986-87	6,005	0
1987-88	4,064	0
1988-89	3,310	0
1989-90	3,219	0

The amounts paid to Chelmsford borough council in respect of 1990-91 were:

	1990-91 (£ thousands)
Revenue support grant	11,894
Non-domestic rates	23,966
Housing revenue account subsidy	3,934

The amounts which the Government propose to pay to the borough council in respect of 1991-92 are:

	£ thousands
Community charge grant	[1]15,925
Revenue support grant	16,629
National non-domestic rates	39,795
Housing revenue account subsidy	2,930

[1] Estimated.

These figures exclude information on minor specific grants paid in respect of particular functions or services.

It is not possible to give details of the amounts of external finance to be paid to the district council in 1992-93 and 1993-94 since this will depend on decisions which have yet to be taken on the amount and distribution of public expenditure in those years.

Waste Storage

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now issue new guidance to county councils in relation to the tipping and storage of waste into exhausted gravel pits and quarries.

Mr. Trippier: There is already extensive guidance. Guidance on using controlled wastes as landfill materials in the reclamation of surface mineral workings in general is contained in Minerals Planning Guidance Note 7, "The Reclamation of Mineral Workings" published in September 1989. Detailed advice on aspects of waste disposal is also given in my Department's series of waste management papers. No. 26 in this series, "Landfilling Wastes—a Technical Memorandum" was published in 1986; No. 4, "The Licensing of Waste Disposal Sites", which offers advice to local authorities responsible for waste disposal licensing, was revised in 1988.

My Department will continue to update guidance to take account of technical developments, the results of research and legislative changes. Work has begun on the revision of waste management paper No. 4 to reflect the changes to be introduced under part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Under the Act, authorities will be obliged to have regard to guidance from the Secretary of State in exercising their licensing functions.

Aggregates

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now issue new guidance to county councils governing gravel extraction.

Sir George Young: The Government have recently announced their intention to prepare new guidance on the provision for aggregates in England and Wales to replace the current advice in MPG6. The publication of the new long-term forecasts of demand for aggregates on 7 May was the first step in this exercise. The Government will be considering any views which may be expressed about these forecasts, and have also asked the regional aggregates working parties for their views on how medium and long-term demand might be met. Draft guidance will be prepared in the light of these views and will be issued for public consultation in the usual way. It would be premature to issue any revised guidance until there has been a full and open debate about the guidance.

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the Government's current initiatives and projects in response to the concern about the environmental consequences of meeting the national demand for aggregates.

Sir George Young: My Department has a comprehensive programme of research which is examining a variety of matters associated with the environmental consequences of the national demand for aggregates. The main initiatives and projects are as follows:

A. Current Studies

(i) study into the use of secondary and waste materials—including recycling—report due July 1991;

(ii) study into potential supplies of aggregates from coastal superquarries to supply the South-East—final report due August 1992;

(iii) study into potential supplies from marine sand and gravel off the Humber coast—interim report due September 1991;

(iv) study into the specifications of aggregates used in the construction industry—final report due July 1991;

(v) study into the overall environmental effects of surface mineral workings—report due July 1991;

(vi) study into the effectiveness of restoration conditions for minerals workings and the need for bonds—final report due;

(vii) study into amenity reclamation of mineral workings—final report due July 1991;

(viii) study into agricultural reclamation of mineral workings—report due July 1991;
(ix) study into limestone landform replication—final report due March 1993.

B. Work about to begin includes:
(i) a pilot study to begin in July to put into effect the recommendations made in the Groundwork report published in April on the environmental performance of the minerals industry;
(ii) a study on the environmental effects and control of dust from surface mineral workings;
(iii) a study on the environmental effects of traffic associated with surface mineral workings;
(iv) a study to identify the extent and quality of sand and gravel resources in England and Wales.

In addition to this, my Department will shortly be issuing draft guidance for public consultation on the control of noise at minerals sites which follows on from research completed in 1990.

Dog Registration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received in support of the establishment of a national dog registration scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Out of 462 local authorities and those organisations known to represent them, 238 responded to our consultation paper, "Action on Dogs", which was issued in 1989. Two hundred and seven of those who responded supported a dog registration scheme. By last June, when the "Control of Dogs" consultation document was issued, of the 244 local authorities and their representative organisations who responded to part II of the paper for which we are responsible, only 135 supported registration.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward proposals to amend the Local Government Act 1988 to introduce a national dog registration scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: No. The Government intend to implement, from April 1992, the package of dog control measures contained in the Environmental Protection Act 1990. They include a duty on local authorities to enforce the requirement that dogs wear a collar and identification tag when in a public place and to ensure that stray dogs are collected up. We remain of the view that the package provides a practical and effective solution to the problems caused by irresponsible owners and that registration would be bureaucratic, expensive to operate and difficult to enforce. With regard to dogs which are bred especially for fighting, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has announced his intention to bring before the House as soon as possible this Session, legislation which will ban the breeding and ownership of such dogs.

Barratt Houses, Illingworth

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Halifax concerning the sale of Barratt houses at Abbey Park, Illingworth.

Mr. Key: I have written today to the hon. Lady about this matter.

Landfills

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to require compulsory insurance against pollution leaks and contamination from landfills.

Mr. Baldry: Part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, when it comes into force, will include a number of measures to ensure that pollution from landfills is prevented, or, if it occurs, that remedial action is taken. Under the Act, local authorities will impose pollution control conditions on licensees, who will be obliged to remedy any pollution from the site at their own expense. These conditions will remain binding even after closure for as long as the authority is not satisfied that the site is safe, and the licensee will not be permitted to surrender or transfer the licence without the consent of the authority.

As part of their vetting of licence applicants, authorities will be able to refuse an applicant who has not made or is in no position to make adequate financial provision to discharge the provisions of the licence. The form this financial provision should take will be the subject of guidance from the Secretary of State. A working group including representatives of industry and local authorities is examining the subject of long-term financial provision, including insurance, for waste sites and is expected to report this summer.

Integrated Pollution Control

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on companies' responses to the requirements of integrated pollution control under the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Baldry: Integrated pollution control, introduced by part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, requires operators of prescribed processes to obtain an authorisation from Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution. To date, 125 applications for authorisations have been received and are being considered.

Environment Shows

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department will be making any contribution towards or have any presence at (a) the environmental business show at Alexandra Palace, London on 4 to 6 June or (b) the green show, at the national exhibition centre, Birmingham on 21 to 27 May.

Mr. Trippier: I have accepted an invitation to visit the green show on 23 May. The Department does not plan to participate in the show at Alexandra Palace.

Ministerial Cars

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether any ministerial car on official duty since 1979 has (a) been stopped by the police for breaking the speed limit and (b) been parked illegally resulting in the driver being issued with a parking ticket.

Mr. Yeo: Yes, to both parts of the question.

Sewerage

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to introduce legislation to require the water and sewerage companies of England and Wales to adopt sewerage systems irrespective of their condition.

Mr. Trippier: No.

Community Charge

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the arrangements for reimbursing local authorities for costs incurred in connection with the community charge reduction scheme.

Mr. Key [pursuant to his answer, 18 March 1991, Official Report, c. 37]: The improvements to the community charge reduction scheme which we were able to make following the Budget will clearly impact on local authorities' preparation and administration costs. We are therefore proposing to make more grant available to ensure that authorities are reimbursed in full for all reasonable costs associated with operating the scheme. We also propose to simplify the arrangements for distributing the grant in order to ensure that local authorities receive payment as quickly as possible.

Local authorities will no longer be required to submit initial claims in respect of preparation costs or administration costs. Instead authorities will receive an initial payment of their preparation costs based on last year's claims. Any adjustments necessary at the end of the financial year will be made on receipt of audited claims. In addition, general administration costs for the life of the scheme will be wrapped up in a one-off payment of a flat rate per charge-payer. The amounts which previously had to be claimed for applications for extra relief or revised bills will be reflected in a higher rate.

On the basis of these proposals the cost of the community charge reduction scheme preparation and administration costs grant is expected to rise from £10 million to about £15 million.

Urban Programme

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources will be available for local authorities under the urban programme in 1991-92 and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine [pursuant to his answer, 29 January 1991, Official Report c. 474]: The urban programme is one of many Government programmes which encourage local initiative in urban regeneration. Others include estate action and city grant in my Department, Task Forces in the Department of Trade and Industry and employment and training services supported by the Employment Department.

We now intend to enhance the effectiveness of our expenditure in urban areas in England. We will be bringing together programmes in selected neighbourhoods so as to tackle problems comprehensively and on a significant scale. A new initiative, "city challenge", will achieve this and improve the quality of our cities. Local authorities will be invited to enter into partnerships with their local businesses and their community to draw together imaginative programmes for the regeneration of their areas. I will support those authorities that create the most effective partnerships and prepare the best plans for the neighbourhoods that are critical to the health of their cities.

Under city challenge, I will invite authorities to draw up programmes of action to tackle their key neighbourhoods. I will expect the authorities, in the preparation of these programmes, to draw upon the wealth of talent and expertise which exists in their cities; local people and the voluntary sector, the business and academic communities, the training and enterprise councils, and Government and other statutory agencies. I will expect them to attract private finance and involve the private sector thoroughly in managing the programme. The programmes should each be for a fixed period, normally not more than five years, and must include key targets and deadlines.

I will be making available, from within my existing resources, £75 million in 1992-93 in order to pilot the approach in selected pacemaker authorities. The pacemakers will be chosen through competition. I am writing to the leaders of 15 authorities, listed below, asking them to come forward by 5 July with a bid to become a pacemaker. These authorities have been selected to include a variety of urban problems and opportunities. I then intend, in July, to make a selection of the 10 best proposals to be worked up into detailed action plans for final approval by the end of the year. I have asked the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key), to oversee the bidding stage. He, the Minister of State for Local Government and Inner Cities or I will be meeting the authorities to discuss their proposals over the next six weeks.

Once the 10 authorities are chosen, the city action team Ministers will oversee the development of each action plan on behalf of the Government. Day-to-day liaison with the authorities will be the responsibility of the city action teams (CATs); they will provide the point of contact for Government and draw in and co-ordinate the programmes of other Departments. Where there is no CAT, I will ask a Minister to oversee the scheme and will consider whether new interdepartmental machinery is needed.

Initial work on pacemakers will be monitored closely and provided the initiative shows signs of success, I intend the first full competition to take place in 1992, for spending to start in 1993-94.

My objective is to see existing programmes pulled together in the most effective way in areas critical to the health of the city. I want to encourage those authorities which have the qualities of leadership and imagination necessary to rejuvenate their priority areas.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether Ordnance Survey is being examined as a candidate for privatisation.

Mr. Baldry [pursuant to his answer, Tuesday 14 May 1991, Official Report, c. 65]: The feasibility of immediate privatisation for Ordnance Survey was considered and rejected immediately prior to the department becoming an executive agency on 1 May 1990. It cannot be ruled out, however, that after a period of years agencies, like other Government activities, may be suitable for privatisation. I shall continue to keep the status of Ordnance Survey under review.

London Population

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (a) what is the current level of population density per acre in London boroughs for planning purposes and (b) when it was last reviewed.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 2 May 1991, c. 269]: The most recent estimates of population for each London borough are those prepared by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) for mid-1989. The population densities for each borough on that basis are given in column (A) of the table. The mid-year population estimates are revised annually by OPCS.

The calculation of population densities for the urban areas of each London borough, excluding the main areas of open land and green belt, are available from the 1981 census. Figures on that basis are given in column (B).

Cleaner Production Information Clearing house

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what involvement Her Majesty's Government have with the international cleaner production information clearing house based at the industry and environment office of the United Nations Environment Programme in Paris.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1991]: Her Majesty's Government are closely involved with the development of the international cleaner production information clearing house. The ICPIC system has been available to users since 1990 and provides a wide range of information services promoting cleaner production. My Department provided substantial support towards the UNEP cleaner production seminar in Canterbury in September 1990 when the ICPIC system was demonstrated to a wide audience of seminar delegates. The Government are wholly supportive of the UNEP cleaner production programme, and will continue to contribute towards the development of the ICPIC database through the clean technology coordinator at Warren Spring laboratory.

Assured Tenancies

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) from where tenants can obtain the correct form required to contest rises in the rent of assured tenancies, and at what cost; how many such outlets there are in the country; if he plans to make the form more freely available; and if he will make a statement;

(2) from where tenants can obtain the explanatory booklet to assist in contesting a rise in the rent of their assured tenancy; how many such outlets there are; if he plans to increase them; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what requirements govern the practice of landlords in informing people in assured tenancies of the four weeks' grace they have between the announcement of a new rent and the date it becomes operative in which to challenge the rise; what requirement there is on landlords to inform such tenants of where to obtain the correct form and the explanatory booklet to facilitate contesting the change; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 22 May 1991]: Copies of the prescribed form which tenants may use in certain circumstances to refer a proposed new rent to a rent assessment committee are available free of charge from local rent assessment panel offices. There are 13 such offices in England and their addresses are listed in local telephone directories. Firms of legal stationers also produce their own versions of the prescribed forms which are widely available for sale.

Explanatory booklet No. 19, "Assured Tenancies", is available through many outlets including local authorities, housing advice centres and citizens advice bureaux.

The duties on landlords in respect of increasing rent in assured tenancies are set out in section 13 of the Housing Act 1988. Landlord and tenant have the right to agree a new rent between themselves without reference to a third party.

If the contract does not contain a provision for rent changes, and the landlord wishes to increase the rent, he must serve a notice in the prescribed form on the tenant proposing a new rent. The notice must specifiy the minimum period after the date of service of the notice before the new rent can take effect. In no circumstances can this be less than one month. Rent cannot be increased by this means more frequently than once a year. The prescribed form, "Landlord's Notice proposing a new rent under an assured periodic tenancy or agricultural occupancy" states that the tenant may refer the notice to a rent assessment committee before the beginning of the new period of the tenancy. It also advises tenants to seek advice from a citizens advice bureau, housing aid centre, law centre or a solicitor.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Simazine

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the use of the herbicide Simazine.

Mr. Maclean: Simazine is a pre-emergence triazine herbicide with selective and non-selective uses. It is the active ingredient of some 111 formulated products approved under the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 for professional or amateur use on crops such as beans, apples, pears, currants, sweetcorn and maize, gooseberries, cane fruit, strawberries, hops, asparagus and grapevines. Some products are also approved for use in forestry and non-crop situations.

Organic Farms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many organic farms are registered in the United Kingdom currently and in each of the last five years; and if any farms have surrendered their organic status.

Mr. Maclean: There is currently no statutory requirement for organic farms to be registered in the United Kingdom. However, under a voluntary scheme administered by the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards 135 farms are registered and 554 are in the process of registering.

Further information on the structure of organic farming may be found on pages 73 to 76 of the 1991 edition of "Farm Incomes in the UK"—available in the Library.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many organic farms are currently registered in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) each of the other European Community nations.

Mr. Maclean: There is currently no statutory requirement for organic farms to be registered in the United Kingdom. However under a voluntary scheme administered by the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards 135 farms are registered and 554 are in the process of registering.

Further information on the structure of organic farming in Great Britain may be found on pages 73 to 76 of the 1991 edition of "Farm Incomes in the UK"—available in the Library.

The information requested for other European Community nations is not available.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage organic farming.

Mr. Maclean: The organic sector is eligible for the support given to all farmers under a number of general schemes. These include the farm and conservation grant scheme, the nitrate sensitive areas scheme, the set-aside scheme and the pilot extensification schemes for beef and sheep. Advice from the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service is also available. The processing and marketing of organic produce is being given priority for discretionary European Community grants under our national plans for implementing Community regulation 866/90. We are in addition making a very significant commitment to organic farming research and development. In 1991-92 we are spending over £500,000 on specific organic farming projects and over the next three years this is set to rise to £1 million. We have also commissioned an economic study of organic farming in Great Britain and the full report will be published later this year. We also provide grant aid to the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards that is responsible for establishing standards and for their enforcement. Further support in the form of a specific organic conversion scheme is under consideration.

Potato Crisps

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a list of additives presently used in the flavouring of British manufactured potato crisps which his Department considers a possible threat to the health of consumers.

Mr. Maclean: I have no reason to believe any other flavours used in potato crisps pose any hazard to health. If they did, we would ban them.

Sheep (Radiation Checks)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sheep there are in the United Kingdom at the latest date that have to have a radiation check before they can be moved; and how many farms this covers.

Mr. Maclean: The estimated number of animals—immediately post-lambing—is 583,000 on 738 holdings.

EC Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list (a) overall European Commission expenditure as a percentage of overall European Community gross domestic product, (b) net European Commission expenditure on agriculture as a percentage of overall European Community gross domestic product and (c) the net United Kingdom expenditure on agriculture, including net receipts from the European Commission, as a proportion of United Kingdom gross domestic product, for each year since 1973.

Agencies

Mr. Cash: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his Department under the next steps initiative; and whether he had identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Mr. Maclean: There are currently two executive agencies within the department, the Central Veterinary Laboratory and the Veterinary Medicines Directorate. Two further candidates have been announced to be launched in April 1992, namely the Central Science Laboratory and the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service, which will be a joint MAFF and Welsh Office agency. Active consideration is being given to other departmental functions as potential agency candidates.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what EC grants the owners of fishing vessels would be eligible to receive to build new fishing vessels, if the United Kingdom fully implemented a fishing vessel decommissioning scheme in line with EC proposals.

Mr. Maclean: The availability of EC grants for the construction and modernisation of fishing vessels under EC regulation 4028/86 is not dependent on the introduction of a decommissioning scheme. When the latest tranche of EC grant aid was decided last month, no applications for EC grant aid for new construction were successful in any member state.

Beef and Sheep Farmers

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the maximum support for beef and sheep farmers in less-favoured areas, for severely disadvantaged areas and for disadvantaged areas—marginal land—respectively, allowable under EC regulations in terms of pounds per hectare; and what is the United Kingdom limit, in similar terms, for these categories.

Mr. Maclean: European Community Council regulation 797/85, as amended, sets a maximum compensatory allowance for cattle and ewes of 102 ecu per hectare of total forage area of the holding in the less-favoured areas. At current green rates, this is equivalent to £77·33.

Under United Kingdom regulations, payments are limited to £62·48 per hectare in the severely disadvantaged areas and £46·86 per hectare in the disadvantaged areas.

Total expenditure under the 1991 scheme is expected to be around £142 million, reflecting a 14 per cent. increase over the previous year.

Beef Premium

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much of the beef premium payments were made (a) to primary producers in upland areas and (b) to those fattening steers on lowland farms, in the last financial year.

Mr. Maclean: The beef special premium scheme is operated in Great Britain at the point of slaughter and at live auction markets on sale with a view to slaughter. The premium would therefore be payable to any eligible primary producer finishing male cattle. In registering for the scheme, producers are not required to state whether their farms are in upland or in lowland areas. The statistics requested are therefore not available.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many slaughterhouses there are in England currently up to the EC standard as defined (a) in regulation 355/77 and (b) in regulation 860/90.

Mr. Maclean: At present there are 53 red meat and 97 poultry meat slaughterhouses in England which are approved as complying with EC standards. The standards in question are defined in EC directives 64/433 and 71/118 respectively. Regulation 355/77 and its successor, regulation 866/90, relate to financing of investment aimed at improving the processing and marketing of agricultural products. It is a condition of grant aid under these regulations that the project complies with the relevant EC standard.

Beef (Intervention Stores)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the tonnage of beef being held in intervention stores in the EC in each of the past 18 quarters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Tables showing EC and United Kingdom intervention stock levels have been deposited in the Library of the House at monthly intervals throughout the period in question.

Fish Quotas

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has received for the Government to amend their present fish quota restrictions from a species base to an area base; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: None. Monthly quota restrictions relate to individual fish stocks, which are defined by species and area.

Mink Farms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the size and location of the two mink farms on Humberside listed in his answer of 22 February, Official Report, column 317.

Mr. Maclean: We do not publish this information.

Agricultural and Horticultural Workers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has about the average wage levels and hours worked for each category of agricultural and horticultural workers in Northumberland; and by how much they exceed the levels determined by the wages board.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available for Northumberland, however, the latest information for a sample of farms in the northern region is provided in the table.

Agricultural Land (Ownership)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 9 May, Official Report, column 590, if he will make it his policy to collect information centrally in respect of agricultural land in England and Wales in overseas ownership.

Mr. Maclean: No. The costs and practical difficulties of adopting such a policy are excessive and outweigh the potential benefits.

River Pollution

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those polluted stretches of rivers and estuaries from which the public should not eat fish.

Mr. Gummer: My Department has recently issued advice to anglers that it is inadvisable to eat fish caught in polluted waters. If anglers are in doubt about whether a particular stretch of water is polluted, they should seek advice locally from the National Rivers Authority which will be able to advise if the water is of poor quality on the basis of its rivers classification scheme.

The Government's advice does not apply to commercial fisheries which take place in or near estuaries. My Department monitors commercial fisheries both in estuaries and at sea to protect public health and the results show the quality of the water in the areas of these fisheries causes no problems for the species sold.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many calves born since July 1988 have been found to have BSE.

Mr. Gummer: BSE has been confirmed in one calf born since July 1988. Inquiries as to the source of the disease are still continuing.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields of 20 May, Official Report, column 398, why he is unable to give the number of confirmed cases of BSE in the United Kingdom for each month from January to April.

Mr. Gummer: The scientific calculation of the number of cases of BSE is based on the date of onset of clinical disease and there is a prolonged period of time between this and eventual confirmation of disease by post-mortem examination. This means that recent figures are necessarily incomplete and would therefore be misleading.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of cases of BSE in 1991 have been found in farms for the first time.

Mr. Gummer: Twenty-seven per cent. of the cases of BSE confirmed in Great Britain between January and April 1991 were on farms on which no previous case had been confirmed.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the total number of confirmed cases for BSE by county at the latest available date in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: The information up to 17 May 1991 is as follows:

Bovine Somatotropin

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Veterinary Products Committee discussed bovine somatotropin in 1991; what were the outcomes of these discussions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Committee has discussed BST twice in 1991.

In April it advised that it remained unsatisfied on the animal safety and welfare aspects of certain BST products, and that this should be reflected in the line taken in discussions in the EC Committee for Veterinary Medicinal Products. This advice was accepted.

In May the committee considered an article published in the British Medical Journal on 2 March and reviewed relevant data. It considered it likely that it would be able to confirm its earlier advice that the products could be used without hazard to human health, but wished first to seek the opinions of independent advisors with special expertise in certain of the matters raised.

The committee has also been informed of, but has not discussed, the extension of the Community moratorium on BST use, developments in the CVMP, and the hon. Member's parliamentary questions on the subject.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to review his decision to refuse a product licence for bovine somatotropin; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall review the decisions in the light of advice from the Medicines Commission following its consideration of companies' appeals. I have no other plans to review them.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether there are any proposals from member states of the Commission for the EC to end its moratorium on the case of bovine somatotropin; what discussions he has had within the EC on this subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Commission has made no such proposals and I am aware of none from any member state.

Sheep Dipping

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many forms, and what proportion, were returned from sheep farmers about sheep dipping last year; what measures he intends to take to ensure that all forms are received; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Local authority estimates suggest that approximately 70 per cent. of form R owner declarations of dipping were returned to local authorities. It is for local authorities to take action in those cases where forms are not returned but I have made it clear that I am looking for a much better response from farmers during this year's national dip.

Ear Punching

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what comments he has received from the Farm Animal Welfare Council concerning the ear punching of cattle; and if he has any plans to discontinue the practice;

(2) what comments he has received from the Farm Animal Welfarm Council concerning the ear punching of sheep; and if he will take steps to halt this practice when the variable premium scheme ceases.

Mr. Maclean: In its report on the welfare of livestock at markets in 1986, the Farm Animal Welfare Council recommended that on welfare grounds methods should be found for certifying livestock under the premium schemes which did not involve ear punching.

In their response, the Government noted that provided punches were kept sharp and used by properly trained staff, stress to the animals was kept to a minimum. The Government also stated their willingness to consider other methods which would meet the requirements of the Community schemes, but to date no satisfactory alternatives have been found. There are therefore no plans at present to discontinue this control mechanism in relation to cattle. For sheep, however, the need for ear punching under the variable premium scheme will no longer exist when the scheme ends in January 1992.

Land Contamination

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice his Department has given to farmers whose land is contaminated by spills of inflammable liquids; and what such contaminations he is aware of having taken place since 1987.

Mr. Maclean: The Department investigates incidents involving the spillage of inflammable liquid on agricultural land in view of the possible food safety implications. In the light of the results of such investigations, advice would be provided to the farmer or other measures taken as appropriate. The only recent incident involving such a spillage of which the Department is aware concerned the derailment and fire on a train at Bradford-on-Tone, Taunton on 16 May this year.

PRIME MINISTER

United Nations Register

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government will set up a register of arms, in line with his request for a United Nations register; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: We believe that, in order to be effective, the register should be set up under United Nations auspices on a universal and non-discriminatory basis. That is the approach which we are pursuing.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the timetable for consultation on, and implementation of, proposals for a channel tunnel rail link;

(2) if he will make a statement on the consultation process which he will undertake on the options for the channel tunnel rail link route.

Mr. Freeman: We are considering British Rail's report on the rail link options. To publish details of all the routes under consideration could cause needless worry and blight. Once the Government have announced a decision on the way forward it will be for British Rail to undertake wide consultation on the preferred route before embarking on the formal approval process.

Vehicle Smoke

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department will take in response to complaints from the public about smoke from cars, vans and other vehicles not subject to operator licensing.

Mr. Chope: Excessive smoke is usually emitted by diesel rather than petrol engines. As heavy goods vehicles and buses are likely to be the main offenders, and are also the ones against which sanctions are available under operator licensing, the Department has given priority to those larger vehicles. Instrumented checks of emissions from cars and light goods vehicles will, however, be part of MOT tests from 1 November.

Motorways

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy towards the surfacing of future motorways in concrete rather than tarmac.

Mr. Chope: Current policy is to permit contractors as wide a choice of materials for road pavements as possible. This encourages competition between different suppliers and ensures the best value for money.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much traffic on the M1 had been reduced since the reopening of the M40 to Birmingham.

Mr. Chope: Traffic flows on the M1 south of M6 have been reduced by between 4,000 and 19,000 vehicles per weekday since the opening of M40 to Birmingham.

Rail Tracks

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will direct British Rail to cease immediately the practice of installing DC single-rail track circuits on non-electrified lines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail has already decided to cease the practice of installing DC single-rail track circuits on non-electrified lines. BR is also planning a programme of modifications to existing DC single-rail track circuits on non-electrified lines.

Birmingham Western Orbital Route

Mr. Andrew Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the outcome of his consultation exercise on his proposals for a privately funded Birmingham western orbital route.

Mr. Rifkind: Private sector firms have responded positively to my suggestion of a private finance competition for the western orbital route. I now propose to go ahead with a competition for the road on this basis. I look forward to seeing their proposals for designing, financing, constructing and operating this road.

I share the concern of local interests about the need to protect the environment and avoid delay. I can give the assurance that proposals for privately financed schemes will be subject to the same rigorous environmental appraisal as conventional roads. I will also keep the target for completion of this important facility as the late 1990s, as it had been for the public scheme.

It is important to move quickly in setting up a competition. I will shortly be inviting prequalifying bids from the private sector, so that a full competition can be held as soon as possible.

Taxi Fares (London)

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about London taxi fares.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Secretary of State has made an order increasing London taxi fares by about 8·9 per cent. on average with effect from Saturday 8 June 1991. The new tariff will incorporate a minimum fare of £1·00—including an unchanged hire charge of 40p—for the first 940·5 yd or 3 minutes 13·5 seconds. The rate will then be 20p for every 313·5 yd or 1 minute 4·5 seconds up to 6 miles and 20p for each 209 yd or 43 seconds thereafter.

Correspondence

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he received the letter dated 6 February from Nithsdale Road Link-up Group; and what reply he has sent.

Mr. Chope: The letter was received in my Department on 14 February. It made a number of helpful suggestions for raising public awareness about the law on rear seat belt wearing by children which came into force on 1 September 1989 and described what the group itself is doing locally to achieve this. The reply explained the publicity which the Department, and some commercial organisations, gave to introduction of the law and the arrangements for providing information about it subsequently. It also offered comments on the text of a publicity leaflet produced by the group.

I have sent a copy of the reply to the hon. Member.

Speed Limiters

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to ensure that speed limiter systems fitted to heavy goods vehicles are fitted only by authorised organisations trained in installation, calibration and sealing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Government have tabled an amendment to the Road Traffic Bill to enable the Secretary of State to make regulations about speed limiter installation. The Department is considering with vehicle operators' associations and speed limiter manufacturers what, if any, regulations might be needed if this provision is enacted.

Chelmsford

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement listing the money his Department has contributed to road schemes in the Chelmsford local authority area in each of the financial years since 1979-80; and what are his forward plans for the next three years.

Mr. Chope: My Department pays 50 per cent. transport supplementary grant towards accepted expenditure on local authority road schemes.

Before 1985-86 TSG was a general grant and not linked to individual projects. Under the present system, expenditure on specified major road schemes may be accepted for grant. Since 1985-86, accepted expenditure for such schemes in the Chelmsford borough council area has been as follows:

	£ million
1985-86	5·279
1986-87	7·167
1987-88	6·335
1988-89	5·846
1989-90	5·835
1990-91	2·189

A further £0·506 million expenditure on major schemes in the Chelmsford area has been accepted for TSG in 1991-92. This is less than in previous years because a number of schemes have been completed. Allocations for future years will be decided in the light of information in the county's annual transport policies and programme submissions and other competing bids.

Block TSG allocations have also been given for expenditure on minor works in the county as a whole, but it is for the county council to decide how much to spend in each district council's area.

In addition, the Department has spent over £36 million since 1979 on improving its own A12 trunk road through the district, including the following amounts on the Chelmsford bypass:

	£ million
1984-85	5·978
1985-86	15·457
1986-87	11·111
1987-88	1·804
1988-89	1·218
1989-90	0·489

The next major trunk road schemes in the area will be the construction of part of the new M12 from the M25 and the widening of the Chelmsford bypass, but only relatively minor sums will be spent on the design and preparation of these proposals over the next two or three years.

Vehicle Tax Discs

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many motor vehicle tax discs have been issued as replacements for stolen discs in each of the last three years for which such information is available.

Mr. Chope: The total number of duplicate licences issued for all reasons in each of the last three financial years was:

	Number
1990-91	146,720
1989-90	132,075
1988-89	135,649

Separate records are not kept of the number of duplicate motor vehicle tax discs issued because the original has been stolen. Duplicate tax discs are also issued if the original has been lost, destroyed or mutilated so that it can no longer be used.

Channel Tunnel

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the approximate cost of the works that have been carried out and are due to be carried out on the designated existing channel tunnel rail routes to enable continental through freight and passenger services to be run after opening; and what is the approximate breakdown between (a) the terminal at Waterloo, (b) the Redhill to Tonbridge electrification, (c) the installation of continuous welded rail and other improvements to existing track, (d) improved signalling, (e) bridge reconstruction, (f) construction of new passing loops and (g) other main heads of cost.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail currently expects to spend approximately £700 million, at 1990-91 prices, on infrastructure works to enable European passenger and freight services to operate when the channel tunnel opens. £142 million will be spent on building the international terminal at Waterloo, £21 million on electrifying the line between Tonbridge and Redhill, £9 million on bridge reconstruction and £250 million on new track, upgrading existing track and improving signalling. The remaining £278 million covers other projects, including the North Pole maintenance depot, freight inspection facilities and freight terminals in London and elsewhere.

British Rail

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has approved the plan for re-organisation of British Rail entitled "Organisation for Quality"; and if he will place copies of relevant documents in the Library.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail has kept the Department in close touch with its planned reorganisation, which should improve management accountability and its focus on the customer. I shall place a summary of the proposals in the Library shortly.

Motorway Speed Limits

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has commissioned any recent study to evaluate the effects of (a) traffic flow, (b) accident risk and (c) pollution of the environment arising from an increased speed limit on motorways of 90 mph.

Mr. Chope: No.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to increase the speed limit on motorways.

Mr. Chope: I have no such plans, but a review of speed limits is currently being undertaken.

Road Accidents

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of road accidents causing one or more fatalities in which vehicles carrying inflammable liquids were involved for each year since 1985, giving the total number of dead and injured for each year.

Mr. Chope: I regret that I am unable to do this.

The Department collects information only on road accidents involving personal injury. The standard report form, STATS19, completed by the police for these accidents does not include information on cargoes carried by the vehicles involved.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the accident rates for equivalent lengths of contraflow for each of the past three years.

Mr. Chope: The information is not available in the form requested. Detailed studies into the safety of major motorway roadworks were carried out by the Transport and Road Research Laboratory on schemes carried out in 1982 and 1987. The studies concluded that rates were about 0·18 personal injury accidents per million vehicle kilometres or nearly 1·6 times the rate on motorways without roadworks, but even so only about a sixth of the rate on built-up A-class roads. Rates were found to be higher than the average in the contraflow section itself, slightly higher at the approach and lower beyond. A new study of safety at contraflows on all-purpose dual carriageways has begun and will report in December 1992. The TRRL will also be updating its earlier motorway studies.

Driving Instructors

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with the Driving Standards Agency regarding the qualifications required for the disabled becoming driving instructors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Driving Standards Agency has circulated a discussion paper on this subject to officials within the Department and at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency at Swansea. A meeting to discuss the paper will be held shortly.

Shale Fire, Midlothian

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the safety implications for rail travellers, of the underground shale fire at Newbridge, Midlothian.

Mr. Freeman: The fire on the embankment at Newbridge is being closely monitored by British Rail, which is taking remedial action and has meanwhile imposed a 5 mph speed limit on the affected line. I am assured that there is no risk to passengers.

Syston Bypass

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to announce his decision on the inspector's report on the inquiry regarding the A607 Syston northern bypass; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Early next month.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Dangerous Dogs

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will introduce legislation requiring those persons owning certain breeds of dogs to obtain third-party insurance; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will introduce legislation enabling American pit bull terriers to be humanely destroyed; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will bring forward proposals to add American pit bull terriers and Japanese tosas to the list of dangerous animals specified under the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will bring forward proposals to amend the Dangerous Dogs Act 1989 to make owners liable to prosecution even if a dog is put down after an attack; and if he will make a statement;

(5) if he will introduce legislation requiring owners of certain breeds of dogs to have their dogs on a short chain lead and muzzled whenever in a public place; and if he will make a statement;

(6) if he will introduce legislation banning the breeding within the United Kingdom of fighting dogs, including American pit bull terriers; and if he will make a statement;

(7) what legislation he proposes to introduce concerning dangerous dogs; and if he will make a statement;

(8) if he will introduce a ban into the United Kingdom on the import and export of fighting dogs, including American pit bull terriers; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ban with immediate effect the import of pit bull terrier and tosa dogs.

Ms. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the statement that my right hon. Friend made in the House on Wednesday 22 May at columns 945-46.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the arrangements for those attacked and injured by dogs to apply to the criminal injuries compensation scheme for compensation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The board can entertain applications from victims of attacks by dogs or other animals where a crime of violence has been committed, for example, where a dog has been deliberately set on the victim.

Automatic Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has that fully automatic weapons, including the Uzi submachine gun, are illegally on sale in south Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I am aware of the allegations made in "The Cook Report" television programme broadcast on 20 May. The investigation of such matters is for local chief officers of police, to whom any relevant information should be passed.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will obtain for his departmental library a video recording of the Central Television programme "The Cook Report", broadcast on 20 May.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Department has a recording of this programme.

Mr. Liwa Uddin

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he arranged for the British high commission in Islamabad to issue a visa to Mr. Liwa Uddin following the dismissal by the immigration appeals tribunal of the Home Office appeal on 7 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The tribunal's written determination of 7 May was sent by facsimile to the entry clearance officer in Islamabad on 22 May. It is for him to pursue the case, taking account of the adjudicator's findings.

Radio Authority

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will dismiss Lord Chalfont as head of the Radio Authority.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Courts

74. Sir John Farr: To ask the Attorney-General if he has any proposals to increase the staff numbers in Crown courts.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor presently intends to increase staff numbers in the Crown Court during 1991-92 by approximately 62 above those in post as at 1 April 1991. Staffing levels in the courts are fixed in relation to current and anticipated workload.

General Pinochet

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General if the Director of Public Prosecutions will consider whether any charges may be brought in the United Kingdom against General Pinochet in relation to offences of murder and torture in that country which may constitute crimes capable of proscecution in the United Kingdom.

The Attorney-General: The United Kingdom has no jurisdiction concerning any offence of murder committed by a foreign national in Chile. Since 29 September 1988 the offence of torture has been justiciable in this country wherever it might have taken place, by virtue of section 34 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988. The Act has no retrospective effect.

Court Procedures

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General (1) what training is given to court staff to assist them in advising plaintiffs intending to make small claims for personal injury;

(2) what training is given to court staff to help them advise plaintiffs in small claims procedures.

The Attorney-General: A range of training courses, covering the various steps of civil business procedures, are available to staff in the county courts. This enables staff to assist litigants with court procedure.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General what advice is given to court staff about referral of personal injury case plaintiffs to specialist legal assistance.

The Attorney-General: Very few personal injury cases are presently commenced without professional help. Training given enables staff to assist litigants with procedural advice.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General if he will bring forward proposals to extend to England and Wales the provision applicable in Northern Ireland for courts to obtain and pay for expert medical and other reports in small claims personal injury cases.

The Attorney-General: There is presently nothing which compels personal injury claimants to use the small claims procedure and therefore no need for such a provision. Should the policy change, this possibility would be considered.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General how many court staff received training in (a) small claims procedures and (b) personal injury cases in each of the last five years.

The Attorney-General: This information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. As a matter of principle, all county court staff receive training which enables them to assist litigants with procedures in civil litigation.

Ativan

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received from those engaged in legal action against Wyeth on account of the harmful effects of the drug Ativan about the availability of legal aid; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Neither I nor my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor have received any representations about the availability of legal aid to pursue legal actions against Wyeth concerning the drug Ativan. The Legal Aid Board is responsible for the administration of legal aid in such cases and it is not aware of any difficulties over the legal aid arrangements.

Repossessions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General how many court actions relating to mortgage repossessions there were in Doncaster county court in each year since 1979 to 1990 and for 1991 to date.

The Attorney-General: The number of mortgage actions for possession entered and orders made for possession in Doncaster county court in each year since 1986, the first year for which figures are available, and for the first four months of 1991 are shown in the table.

	Number of mortgage possession actions entered	Number of mortgage possession orders made
1986	546	159
1987	559	242
1988	564	313
1989	478	335
1990	594	415
[1]1991	252	169

[1] January to April.

WALES

Housing Consultancy Costs

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the value of housing consultancy work given by him to Aldbourne Associates in (a) 1989, (b) 1990 and (c) the current year.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The value of the work done lies in the support given to improvements in housing management on PEP estates and elsewhere, for which expenditure totalled £228,514 in the financial year 1989-90, £249,161 in 1990-91, and £16,038 so far in 1991-92, the final year of the main contract. Work has been done on a cost-reimbursable basis.

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Cardiff Bay development corporation concerning the continuation of groundwater studies beyond 31 July related to the proposed barrage and the impact of the raised water table on properties in central Cardiff.

Mr. David Hunt: I have had no such consultations with the chairman of the development corporation. My officials are in touch with officers of the corporation about the progress of the groundwater studies as part of their routine liaison.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide comparable but extended figures for Wales to those put in the Library by the Secretary of State for the Environment on 4 April 1990, deposit 5906, showing, for each local authority area and giving the assumptions made about equalisation, what level of (i) capital value rates, (ii) council tax and (iii) local income tax would be required in order to raise the same amount of revenue as with (a) the 1991-92 community charge, both before and after community charge reduction grant, and (b) the 1991-92 community charge, both before and after community charge reduction grant, but on the basis that the community charge was fully operational without any transitional or related elements.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my statement to the House of Commons on 23 April, and to the material which was placed in the Library of the House on that day. This gives full information on the illustrative effect on household bills had the council tax been in place in Wales in 1991-92.

Grey Seals

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the last survey of the population of grey seals along the Welsh coastline was undertaken; and if he has any plans to fund another survey.

Mr. David Hunt: I understand that the last comprehensive survey of the population of grey seals along the Welsh coastline was undertaken in 1974.

The Countryside Council for Wales is currently considering an application for grant aid from a consortium of agencies, led by the Dyfed Wildlife Trust, to undertake a census of seals in Cardigan bay. They are very interested and sympathetic but await further details of research methodology and technical details before decisions can be made.

Tobacco

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans his Department has to mark World No Tobacco Day, on 31 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: While recognising the importance of World No Tobacco Day, particularly in those countries with no national event, my Department concentrates its efforts on the United Kingdom's long-established and successful National No Smoking Day which was held this year on Wednesday 13 March.

Mink Farms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the size and location of each mink farm currently operating in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: I am not aware of any mink farms currently operating in Wales.

Right to Buy

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many local authorities in Wales have put forward schemes for Welsh Office approval under the provisions of the Housing Act 1988, whereby local authorities can provide council tenants with a cash grant to help them buy a home in the private sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: One authority undertook a scheme during 1990-91 and is currently evaluating the results. A second authority has recently indicated an interest in operating a similar scheme.

University College, Swansea

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will outline the basis for his decision to subtract any European Community funding towards the innovation centre at University college, Swansea.

Mr. David Hunt: No application has yet been received for European regional development fund assistance for phase II of the innovation centre at University college Swansea.

Manufacturing Output

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of figures showing the value of manufacturing output levels in Wales in each year since 1975 at constant 1975 prices.

Mr. David Hunt: Changes in the level of manufacturing output at constant prices are best measured by the index of industrial production and construction for Wales (1985 = 100). Annual averages from 1978 are given in the following table. Welsh figures for years prior to 1978 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Index of manufacturing output Wales

	1985 = 100
1978	101·0
1979	103·7
1980	91·4
1981	92·9
1982	91·7
1983	95·1
1984	100·0
1985	100·0
1986	104·7
1987	116·7
1988	128·1
1989	131·6
1990	133·8

Information Division

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish details for the last three years showing (a) the overall budget of the Welsh Office information division, (b) the amount of money dispersed by the information division to outside advertising agencies and (c) the percentage of moneys dispersed to advertising agencies which has been accounted for by advertising companies based in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: For information on the Department's total publicity budget, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 25 April 1991.

The overall budget of the Welsh Office information division for the past three years is: for 1988-89 £1,239,003; for 1989-90 £1,375,806; and for 1990-91 £729,647.

The amount of money dispersed by the information division to outside advertising agencies for 1988-89 is available only at disproportionate costs; for 1989-90 £266,670; and for 1990-91 £265,956·18.

The percentage of moneys dispersed to advertising agencies which has been accounted for by advertising agencies in Wales for 1988-89 is only available at disproportionate costs: for 1989-90 it is 58·14 per cent. and for 1990-91 it is 71·07 per cent.

Newtown Bypass

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to be able to announce the starting date for the construction of the proposed Newtown bypass; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I shall be appointing consultants shortly to develop a scheme to bypass Newtown which we have recently added to the Department's long-term trunk road programme. It is too soon to indicate when construction might commence.

Craft Initiative

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many craft business advisers are employed in Wales under the craft initiative; what is their job description; how many were so employed on 1 May 1988, 1989 and 1990, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: During the period of the craft initiative, which came to an end in March this year, three craft business advisers were employed and were in post on the dates in question. Two were employed by the Welsh Development Agency and one by the Development Board for Rural Wales. Their job description was to provide a first point of contact for access to the full range of services offered by Government agencies in Wales, the Wales Craft Council, local authorities and enterprise agencies. As experienced craft producers, they were also to offer advice on craft businesses.

The WDA currently employs three craft advisers. I understand that the role of the DBRW's adviser will also be retained, as part of an expanded marketing department.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how Government money devoted to the craft initiative is spent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The craft initiative came to an end on 31 March this year. An evaluation of the initiative has been placed in the Library of the House. New arrangements for support of the craft industry in Wales have been put in place.

General Practitioners

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what cash increase had been allowed to general practioners in Wales in their indicative dry budget in 1991 and 1992 as compared with their dry expenditure in 1990; and on what basis it is computed.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The indicative amounts which, in accordance with section 18 of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990, family health services authorities specify for GP practices' prescribing are not cash budgets.

In setting the indicative amounts for 1991-92, FHSAs have used as the starting point the basic price of drugs prescribed by and dispensed for each practice in 1989-90. This figure has been adjusted by a national—England and Wales—uplift factor to take account of changes such as those in the price of drugs. Each FHSA's medical adviser will then have considered whether the resultant figure for each practice appeared to be justifiable on clinical grounds and will have taken into account any new factors which might bear upon the prescribing of that practice. All GP practices will have been offered the opportunity to discuss their indicative amounts with the responsible FHSA's medical adviser.

The assignment of an indicative amount will not prevent any GP from prescribing the drugs which their patients need.

Training

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of trainees in Wales who will take advantage of the new training voucher scheme in each of the last three years of its availability.

Mr. David Hunt: In 1991-92 the North-East Wales training and enterprise council estimates that between 1,200 and 1,500 young people will take advantage of its training credit in its pilot scheme. Credits will be extended progressively throughout Great Britain year by year. Initially TECs and local enterprise companies will be invited to submit proposals for local schemes offering training credits in their localities to come into operation in April 1993. Schemes will be selected to cover another 10 per cent. of the national total of 16 to 17-year-olds leaving full-time education. We intend that within five years, every 16 to 17-year-old leaving full-time education will have the offer of a training credit.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much additional finance will be available for the new training voucher scheme in Wales in 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95 respectively; and if he will also publish for each year the total finance available for these credit vouchers, taking into account all existing and new schemes.

Mr. David Hunt: The level of additional resources to be made available to the north-east Wales training credit pilot in 1992-93 has not yet been finalised. For subsequent years the total resources available for training credits in Wales will depend on the speed with which coverage is extended in the Principality.

University Hospital of Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had concerning the future of the epilepsy unit at the University Hospital of Wales, Cardiff.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: My right hon. Friend has received representations from hon. Members and from members of the public, including a petition.

Health Authority Referrals

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairmen or women of the nine health authorities in Wales regarding the amounts to be set aside for extra-contractual referrals and the circumstances for its use.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This is a matter for individual health authorities to determine within the record resources made available to them for 1991-92.

SOCIAL SECURITY

National Insurance

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out in tabular form for 1991-92 (a) the projected income from employees' national insurance contributions, (b) the estimated current expenditure (i) of the national health service, (ii) on state retirement pension, (iii) on unemployment benefit and (iv) on all other social security payments and (c) the percentage (a) represents of (b).

Mr. Jack: The information requested on estimated income and expenditure in 1991-92 is in the table.

	£ billion
(a) Employees national insurance contributions[1]	13·7
(b) Expenditure of the NHS	31·8
Expenditure on retirement pension[2]	25·5
Expenditure on unemployment benefit	1·0
Expenditure on all other social security payments[3]	36·4
(c) Percentage (a) represents of (b)	14·5 per cent.

[1] Includes £1·9 billion contribution to the NHS.
[2] Excluding non-contributory retirement pension.
[3] All other social security benefit spending including all local authority spending on housing benefit and community charge benefit.

War Widow's Pensions

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has on the level of war widow's pension or equivalent benefit in all EC countries which sustained casualties in the second world war.

Mr. Jack: Currently war widow's pensions administered by the Department range from a standard £67·60 a week to a possible £103·42 including age and rank additions. These pensions are payable to all widows whose husbands' death is attributable to service at any time. In addition second world war widows and all other pre-1973 war widows receive special payments of £44·36 a week from the Ministry of Defence. These sums are in addition to anything which may be payable under Ministry of Defence occupational schemes.

The European Commission does not collect information on war widows' pensions payable in the member states. The table gives such information as we have been able to obtain on other countries' schemes. I am advised that rates vary widely depending on such factors as military rank or previous civilian occupation.

	Weekly rate
Denmark	Between £89·69 and £129·15.
France	Between £39·51 and £107·11.
Italy	£30·34 plus supplement of £5·96 if annual income less than £3,543. If husband died after the war, £14·21—£14·69.
Belgium	£97·94, if husband killed in service.
Germany	£38·10 (basic rate) plus supplements according to factors such as extent of injuries—up to a total weekly maximum pension of about £167·71.

Notes:
1. The rates have been changed into sterling using purchasing power parities.
2. In France an additional allowance may be payable if the widow has no other pension.

Payment Delays

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidance manual, "Departmental Compensation Scheme for Delay in Payment of Benefit and Refund of Contributions".

Miss Widdecombe: I described the basic principles underlying the payment of compensation for delay in my reply of 13 May at column 30. It would not be appropriate to make public internal guidance notes.

Motability

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) whether there is any financial disadvantage for a company selling a vehicle purchased through the motability scheme;

(2) if there is any evidence of companies operating a differential charge for those purchasing vehicles with and without assistance from the motability scheme.

Mr. Scott: Motability is an independent charity. The terms and conditions under which companies provide vehicles under the scheme are a matter for Motability.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many, and what percentage, of people on mobility allowance have purchased a vehicle through the motability scheme.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the motability scheme is a matter for Motability itself. However, as at 9 May 1991, mobility allowance was being paid direct to Motability Finance Ltd. on behalf of 79,997 people who have lease agreements with Motability and 17,042 with hire purchase agreements. The combined total represents 14·9 per cent. of all mobility allowance beneficiaries.

Mr. Neil Farmer

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the compensation recovery unit to resolve its position in respect of Mr. Neil Farmer of 7 Welton gardens, Bulwell, Nottingham, and to write to him.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the compensation recovery scheme is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Farmer's Lung

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will now take steps to provide a scheme of no-fault compensation for those who have suffered farmer's lung after working in agriculture.

Mr. Scott: Employed workers in agriculture who suffer disablement as a result of farmer's lung are eligible for benefits under the industrial injuries scheme.

Pensioner Couples

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those benefits and their average value which are available to pensioner couples on basic pensions who are in receipt of income support.

Miss Widdecombe [pursuant to her reply, 22 April 1991, c. 327]: I regret that some of the information given was incorrect. In the list of benefits, the entry "Industrial injury benefit" should read "Industrial injuries benefits". Also, the third foot-note should explain that invalidity benefit and sickness benefit can continue for up to five years after pensionable age in place of retirement pension. For invalidity benefit this will be paid at an equivalent rate, for sickness benefit there is a 5 per cent. abatement. One partner may elect to retain their invalidity or sickness benefit while the other may choose to receive retirement pension. However, a married woman, relying solely on her husband's contributions, cannot take her retirement pension until he has claimed his.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hong Kong

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Hong Kong on the recent recommendations of the Electoral Reform Society on electoral reform in Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: This report deals with matters which are the responsibility of the Hong Kong Government. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not discussed it with them.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 599, regarding his proposed non-involvement relating to the new airport for Hong Kong, if he will give details of any action taken during and subsequent to his visit to the far east.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As I said in my answer of 31 January at column 599, the provision of a rail link to Hong Kong's new airport is a matter for the Hong Kong Government.

Antarctica

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to repeal the Antarctic Minerals Act 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Not at present. We shall await the outcome of the next meeting of Antarctic treaty parties in Madrid next month before a decision is taken on what action is required.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to sign the draft protocol of the Antarctic treaty parties agreed at the Madrid summit.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The final text of the protocol has not yet been agreed by the Antarctic treaty parties. It would, therefore, be premature to speculate on a date for its signature.

Arms Control

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the achievements and failures in international arms control involving his Department in the past year.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In the course of the last 12 months, the CFE treaty has been signed, although problems remain over Soviet implementation of certain of its provisions. The treaty eliminating United States and Soviet intermediate nuclear forces has been implemented successfully. There is also the prospect of a START treaty reducing United States and Soviet strategic arsenals, and of reductions in short-range nuclear forces in Europe. We are working to strengthen the nuclear non-proliferation regime; for the continued expansion of the missile technology control regime; and to make a success of United Nations Security Council resolution No. 687's requirements in relation to Iraq's nuclear, biological chemical and missile capabilities. We have welcomed President Bush's recent proposal for completion of a chemical weapons convention within 12 months, and are preparing for the third review conference of the biological weapons convention which will offer an opportunity to strengthen that regime.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what investigative groups have been established, pursuant to United Nations Security Council resolution 687 on verification and destruction of Iraqi weapons of mass destruction; what involvement there is of United Kingdom experts in these groups; what offers of personnel and resource assistance were made by Her Majesty's Government to the United Nations in support of resolution 687; and what estimation of cost to the Exchequer has been made of United Kingdom participation in furtherance of resolution 687.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Pursuant to section C of Security Council resolution 687, the Secretary-General of the United Nations has established a special commission, and the Director-General of the International Atomic Energy Agency with the assistance and co-operation of the special commission, has established an action team. They are making arrangements for inspections required by the resolution. The United Kingdom has given technical help and equipment to the International Atomic Energy Agency for its initial inspection in Iraq, which is already in progress. A senior United Kingdom expert in chemical and biological defence matters is the British member of the special commission and is playing a prominent part in its work. The United Kingdom has offered to make available other experts and analytical services. We are now considering what further assistance we can provide. The cost to the United Kingdom of these aspects of Security Council resolution 687 cannot yet be estimated because the scale of the required activities is still being assessed and no decision has yet been made on how they will be funded.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to extend to two hours the time the Minister of State with responsibility for arms control spends with non-governmental organisations at the next collective meeting held to discuss Government policy on arms control and disarmament matters.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I attend the meeting for as long as my other commitments permit, and allow ample time for discussion of the major issues. Additional questions are thereafter fielded by a team of officials.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting with non-governmental organisations with the Minister of State with responsibility for arms control on 14 May.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: At my meeting with non-Governmental organisations on 14 May a wide range of arms control and disarmament topics were discussed. The proceedings were held under Chatham house rules and were thus off the record.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will raise the issues of nuclear non-proliferation controls and a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty at the forthcoming North Atlantic Treaty Organisation summit meeting.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Preparations for the NATO summit are at an early stage; but we regularly discuss these matters with our allies and partners.

EFTA

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will endeavour to ensure that in the negotiations between European Free Trade Association countries and the EC, any reduction in tariff rates is matched by the restoration of access for EC fishermen to EFTA country waters.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The EC/EFTA negotiations on a European economic area are aimed at extending the Community single market to the EFTA countries. On fisheries, the Community is pressing for greater access to EFTA fishing grounds in exchange for some liberalisation of trade between the two sides. We are working to ensure that the final outcome satisfies the interests of the United Kingdom fisheries industry.

South Atlantic Fisheries

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response he has given to the Uruguay proposals for south Atlantic fisheries.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The proposed Uruguayan scientific conference in Montevideo in June to discuss South Atlantic fisheries has now been cancelled. As the Falklands fishery is one of the main fisheries in the region, we had arranged United Kingdom representation at the conference, and will always give due attention to any Uruguayan proposals on South Atlantic fisheries.

UNESCO

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on what progress has been made in UNESCO towards reforms and as to what issues remain unresolved in the way of the return of the United Kingdom to UNESCO.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We recognise that progress towards reform has been made in UNESCO since we left in 1985. But before we are able to consider re-joining, we need to see real improvements to achieve programme concentration; progress towards greater decentralisation; implementation of management and administration reforms; and improvements in setting UNESCO's budget.

Kuwait

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will direct Her Majesty's ambassador to Kuwait to lodge a formal protest with the Kuwaiti Government about the conduct of trials of alleged Iraqi collaborators.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Kuwait about the quality of justice dispensed to those charged with collaboration with the Iraqis.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have stressed to the Kuwaiti authorities on a number of occasions in the last few months our hope that trials of detainees for war crimes or collaboration would follow due processes of law and respect human rights. Her Majesty's ambassador has recently re-emphasised the Government's concern that proper arrangements for the presentation of evidence and the defence of those accused at such trials should be carefully observed. We understand that the courts in Kuwait have adjourned a number of cases to enable defence lawyers to study prosecution evidence and prepare their cases more thoroughly. We welcome this.

President Mubarak

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he had with President Mubarak prior to the announcement on 8 May of the withdrawal of Egyptian troops from Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs' discussions with President Mubarak in Cairo on 2 May covered bilateral and regional issues, including regional security.

We have consistently made clear that it is for the states of the region to take the lead in devising arrangements for their security.

Arab Security Force

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards the establishment of an Arab security force in the Gulf.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Gulf Co-operation Council, Egypt and Syria are developing regional security proposals based on the Damascus declaration. GCC countries have agreed in principle to establish a common deterrent force. We have said that we will help to underpin regionally agreed arrangements, if asked, but do not envisage troops in the region permanently.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy towards challenge inspections to support a chemical weapons control regime.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We consider that a system of intrusive challenge inspection will be necessary to provide an effective verification regime for a future chemical weapons convention.

Gas Fires

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the inside ambient temperature at his Department below which the gas fires are permitted to be used; and what steps have been taken at his Department to improve energy efficiency.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office aims to provide an inside ambient temperature of 16C (61F) in accordance with the Office, Shops and Railways Premises Act of 1963. With the objective of reducing energy consumption by 15 per cent. over a five-year period, heating management systems and energy efficient lighting are being installed in a rolling programme and as part of the refurbishment of the main building. A staff awareness campaign has been launched and is to be intensified.

Chile

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he made to the Government of Chile concerning the visit on 18 May of General Pinochet; what information he has about the nature and purpose of the visit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We made known to the Chilean Government our reservations about this visit which, they told us, would be a private one. On 18 May, at the invitation of Royal Ordnance, General Pinochet visited their premises at Hatfield and Aylesbury. Neither Ministers nor officials had contact with General Pinochet.

Security Council Resolution 687

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the information gathered by the United Nations investigation commission in Iraq, established in pursuance of United Nations Security Council resolution 687, will be published by either the United Nations or member Governments involved in the operations to liberate Kuwait.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are not yet aware of any arrangements to publish information arising from inspections by the special commission or the International Atomic Energy Agency.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the GDP per head in (a) Scotland and (b) Yorkshire and Humberside.

Mr. John Maples: GDP per head in Scotland and in Yorkshire and Humberside in 1989 is provisionally estimated at £7,021 and £6,649 respectively.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish an analysis, comparable with table 5.7 of Cm 1520, showing (a) that local authority expenditure in Wales which falls outside expenditure within the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Wales and (b) that local authority expenditure in Northern Ireland which falls outside expenditure within the responsibilty of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested for local authority expenditure in Wales, consistent with that given in the statistical supplement to the 1990 autumn statement (Cm 1520), is given in the table below. All local authority expenditure in Northern Ireland falls within the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested for local authority current expenditure in Scotland and Wales, consistent with that given in the statistical supplement to the 1990 autumn statement (Cm 1520), is given in the tables. Incomes

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average income in (a) Scotland and (b) Yorkshire and Humberside.

Mr. Maples: Household income per head in Scotland and Yorkshire and Humberside in 1989 is provisionally estimated at £6,890 and £6,583 respectively. Region and county income statistics are published today 23 May in the April issue of Economic Trends.

Government Expenditure

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish tables showing, for the years since 1961, identifiable general Government expenditure by function in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom, expressed (a) in cash terms, (b) as a percentage of United Kingdom total identifiable general Government expenditure, (c) as an amount per capita and (d) as an amount per capita expressed as an index, United Kingdom identifiable general Government expenditure = G100.

Mr. Mellor: Data on identifiable general Government expenditure by function and territory in the years 1985-86 to 1989-90 are given in appendix E of the statistical supplement to the 1990 autumn statement (Cm. 1520). Corresponding data for earlier years are not readily available on a directly comparable basis with these figures.

Manufacturing Output

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures showing the value of total manufacturing output in the United Kingdom in each year since 1975 at constant 1975 prices.

Mr. Maples: Changes in the level of output of manufacturing industry at constant prices are best measured by the index of manufacturing production based on 1985 prices. Annual figures from 1975 are given in the following table.

Index of Manufacturing production (1985 = 100)

Year	Index
1975	101·6
1976	103·5

Inflation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a list showing the latest available figures for the rate of inflation in each OECD member country.

Mr. Maples: The following table gives the information:

Fishing Boats

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the net effect on taxation revenue by way of (a) corporation tax and (b) capital gains tax of the Government's proposed decommissioning scheme for fishing trawlers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply. There are no plans to introduce a Government-funded decommissioning scheme, but I have said that, if industry representatives could produce an industry funded scheme which offered long-term conservation benefits, the Government would consider it.

Northern Ireland

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish a table summarising the results for 1989-90 of the annual exercise conducted according to the Northern Ireland (Share of United Kingdom Taxes) Regulations 1975, as amended, using, where relevant, the categories of tables 3.14 and 3.15 of Financial Statistics, identifying for each which of methods 3(1) and 3(2) have been used and separately identifying gross revenues and revenues net of collection costs;

(2) if he will place in the Library (a) a technical explanation of the methodology adopted and of the difficulties encountered in its application, (b) a note indicating the number of years for which the exercise required by the Northern Ireland Constitution Act 1973 and its predecessors has been undertaken in broadly comparable form and (c) a reconciliation, if necessary, between the figures provided above Northern Ireland's attributed share of United Kingdom taxes as published in Cm 1123.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 22 May 1991]: Payments into the Northern Ireland Consolidated Fund in 1989-90 in respect of Northern Ireland's attributed share of United Kingdom taxes comprised £2,578 million for taxes collected in 1989-90 and £105 million for adjustments to payments in previous years—as published in Cm 1123. Adjustments to the 1989-90 payment are not yet available. I have placed details of the breakdown and other information requested in the Library.

HEALTH

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the sums which his Department will transmit to regional health authorities in the current financial year, if he will publish a table showing the increases and decreases in real terms in the allocation of such hospital and health service funding in each of the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The total amount available for net revenue spending on hospital, community health, family health and related services in 1991-92 is £17·96 billion. Of this, the main population based allocation for the 14 regional health authorities (RHAs) is £14·85 billion. RHAs will also receive special allocations such as the service increment for teaching, and increased support for centrally financed initiatives such as the AIDS programe, project 2000 and 100 consultants.

The table shows the main population based allocations for the 14 RHAs over the past 10 years. These are given at current cash levels and at 1991-92 cash levels using the GDP deflator, and demonstrate a real term increase over the period of 23 per cent.

Year	Allocation cash	Allocation 1990-91 cash levels
1982-83	7,281,698	12,113,906
1983-84	8,166,250	12,985,562
1984-85	8,454,184	12,793,463

1991-92	14,853,676	14,853,676

Note: To allow for consistency of comparison the allocations shown above exclude additional allocations made in-year such as the cost of review body pay awards.

Cottage Hospitals

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cottage hospitals have been closed in England in the last five years; and what provisions are made for the closure of these units and the disposal of hospital buildings and property.

Mr. Dorrell: Information is not held centrally in the form requested. The available information on acute, mainly acute and partly acute hospitals with fewer than 50 beds is given in the table.

National Health Service acute, mainly acute and partly acute hospitals with less than 50 beds, England

Year	Number
1985	255
1986	246
1987-88	[1]n/a
1988-89	232
1989-90	221

[1] In 1987-88 the method of collecting statistics changed. The detailed analysis to provide these figures was not possible because of problems with data quality of some site-level returns.

Cottage hospitals are subject to the same rules for consultation on closure as other hospitals. A copy of a guidance booklet, "Consultation and Involving the Consumer", giving advice on this was issued last year, and a copy has been placed in the Library.

The disposal of hospital buildings and property is a matter for health authorities.

Ativan

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of his Department in checking the drug Ativan for harmful side effects and addictiveness.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: When the licensing of medicinal products was introduced in the United Kingdom the drug Ativan was already on the market and was therefore given a licence of right. The quality, safety and efficacy was subsequently examined in order that a reviewed product licence might be granted.

The Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) carefully monitors reports of adverse reactions to all licensed medicinal products and advises the Licensing Authority when action is required in relation to specific safety issues. The problem of addiction with benzodiazepines, the group of drugs with similar properties to Ativan, has been recognised for a number of years. This problem has been drawn to the attention of the medical profession on a number of occasions and the CSM has recommended restrictions in the use of these substances. The CSM continues to monitor this situation.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department first received evidence of the harmful side effects, including addictiveness, from the drug Ativan; and what action was taken to end its availability on prescription.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) operates a yellow card scheme for physicians to report suspected adverse reactions to drugs. Under the scheme, the CSM received the first report of a suspected reaction to Ativan in November 1973. The first report for drug dependence was received in May 1977. It is important to recognise that the report of a suspected adverse reaction does not necessarily imply a causal relationship. Ativan remains available on prescription in the NHS under its non-proprietary name.

HIV (Irish Republic)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many citizens of the Irish Republic are receiving treatment in respect of HIV or AIDS within the national health service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his statement of 14 May, Official Report, column 174, if he will arrange to place in the Library full information gathered as a result of the monitoring exercise of health trusts to which he referred.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. As I made clear at the time, this preliminary information gathered as part of the routine monitoring of NHS trusts by the NHS management executive may well change from week to week. It is possible that the information about job prospects at Guy's and Lewisham NHS trust given to the Select Committee by its chief executive on 22 May means that it has already been overtaken, and it is more likely that there will be about as many jobs created as lost in the 57 first wave trusts.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department and the NHS management executive have to provide managerial and management development assistance to the Guy's and North Lewisham hospital trust.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Guy's and Lewisham hospitals national health service trust will continue to be eligible to apply for funding from central initiatives such as resource management. We have no plans to provide any other managerial or management development assistance to the NHS trust. Each NHS trust is responsible for its own management development.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the annual salary for 1990-91 for the district general manager of each of the predecessor district health authorities of NHS trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Details of payments awarded to individual national health service employees are a confidential matter between employer and employee. District general managers are paid on performance-linked contracts. The rates payable from 1 September 1990 were within the ranges of:

DGM 1 £43,940 to £63,470
DGM 2 £41,500 to £59,950
DGM 3 £37,980 to £55,060

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what upper limit he will place on the proportion of hospitals eligible to achieve trust status, provided each hospital complies with his current criteria for it.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There is no compulsion to apply for trust status: it is a decision to be taken by each unit independently. We have no intention of limiting the numbers of units which can become trusts other than by rejecting applications where the selection criteria are not fulfilled.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the guidance which has been given to the chairmen and chief executives of NHS trusts with regard to their making political statements or comments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: No such guidance has been issued.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will seek powers to prevent health service trusts from entering commercial activity other than those related to matters of direct relevance to health; and if any trusts have commenced engagement in such activity.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Powers, which are already available to health authorities, were extended to trusts to enable them to enter into commercial activities, for the purpose of generating additional income, provided that these activities do not adversely affect or reduce services to national health service patients; that profits are reinvested back into the health service and that the scheme does not conflict with national policy or cause ethical or legal problems.

It is for the trusts themselves to determine how to use these powers to the benefit of patients.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what salaries or other emoluments are paid to the doctors of those NHS trusts which have been established within south Yorkshire.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally. The salaries of doctors of national health ervice trusts and those of other staff are a matter for the trust board. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairman of the NHS trusts concerned for details.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish details of the originating debt, including its division between public dividend capital and interest bearing debt, of each of the national health service trusts.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The originating capital debt for national health service trusts will be equal to the value of the net assets transferred to the trusts on 1 April 1991, which will be determined when the accounts of the relevant health authorities have been prepared and audited. At that stage an order will be made by statutory instrument under section 9 of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 setting out the composition and terms of the originating capital debt.

Census

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what instructions were given to census enumerators in Wales with regard to making freely available to each household a set of census forms in the Welsh language; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Census enumerators were instructed to offer all households in Wales the choice of a Welsh or English form as part of the form delivery procedure. Regrettably, reports were received that some enumerators had not done so. Special instructions were therefore issued to ensure that when the enumerator called back to collect completed forms, anyone who had not been offered a Welsh form could obtain one from the enumerator who would call back later to collect it when completed. All English language household forms used in Wales contained a prominent note enabling people who wanted a Welsh language form to get one by telephoning the census inquiry number.

I hope that these measures have ensured that everyone in Wales who wanted to use a Welsh form was able to do so.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the forms used at the recent census were printed in the Welsh language.

Mr. Dorrell: All public census forms for issue in Wales were available in both Welsh and English; 200,000 household forms, 90,000 individual forms, and 10,000 listing forms for use in communal establishments were printed in Welsh. Figures are not yet available on how many were used.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints he has received arising from the administration of the recent census, arising from (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland, respectively; and if he will list the main grounds of complaint in each country.

Mr. Dorrell: We received 73 letters between 1 April and 21 May from right hon. and hon. Members in England and Wales conveying comments from constituents on aspects of the census. The Registrar General is replying to 69 other letters from right hon. and hon. Members who have written to him or whose letters have been forwarded to him from Ministers in other Departments. No analysis of the different aspects of the census mentioned in the correspondence is available yet.

Information relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland, is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Resource Management Initiative

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the total level of expenditure on the resource management initiative.

Mr. Waldegrave: At 31 March 1991, the Department had made available £97·6 million of central funds to support the resource management initiative and the subsequent resource management programme. Regional and district health authorities and individual hospitals have provided some additional funding for individual projects.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in the joint evaluation of the resource management initiative by the NHS management executive and the joint consultants committee.

Mr. Waldegrave: Discussions between the NHS management executive and the joint consultants committee in 1989 and 1990 concluded that a formal full-scale joint evaluation of the resource management initiative was impracticable. The NHS management executive has taken account of evidence from the evaluation of resource management commissioned from Brunel university and other sources in reaching decisions to extend the resource management programme. The joint consultants committee issued its own guidance on hospital management arrangements in June 1990.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what work has been undertaken by his Department and by consultants retained by his Department on the effectiveness of the resource management initiative; and what have been the conclusions of this work.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Department commissioned Brunel university to undertake an evaluation of resource management as demonstrated at the six acute pilot sites included in the initial resource management initiative. The evaluation began in 1988 and was completed at the end of 1990. The final report, "The Brunel University evaluation of Resource Management", a copy of which will be placed in the Library, concluded that progress in implementing resource management at the pilot sites has been slower than originally anticipated, but that substantial progress has been made and continues to be made at each of the sites. The report also suggested that the pilot sites have provided valuable lessons for the future development of resource management. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library.

Hospital and Community Health Services

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total level of HCHS net capital expenditure in (a) cash, (b) constant prices adjusted by the gross domestic product deflator and (c) constant prices adjusted by the changes in input unit costs in the years (1) 1974-75 to 1978-79 and (2) 1979-80 to 1990-91.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information requested is given in the table. In order to give a complete picture of capital investment in the national health service, spending financed through proceeds of land and property is also shown.

Because of transfers between programmes it is not possible to produce a consistent run of figures over the whole period. Figures in Presentation A have been adjusted to reflect the transfer to HCHS of FHS Administration, Disablement Services Authority and FHS cash limited spending. The figures in Presentation B do not reflect these transfers and are therefore not comparable with those for later years.

NHS (Waiting Times)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is kept by the NHS on the length of time NHS staff at (a) doctor level and (b) other levels wait for various types of operation.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not collected on waiting time by occupational group.

Sign Language Interpreters

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 7 May, Official Report, column 423, to the hon. Member for Don Valley, if he will make it his policy to collect information centrally in respect of health authorities that provide British sign language interpreters for deaf and hard of hearing patients.

Mr. Dorrell: It is up to providers of health services to make arrangements locally to assist communication with patients with hearing impairment. We see no useful purpose in collecting information centrally on these arrangements.

Dentists (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists to date in the Doncaster area have withdrawn from the national health service since the introduction of the new dental contracts.

Mr. Dorrell: Between 1 October 1990, the date the new dental contract was introduced, and 30 April 1991, the latest date for which figures are available, four dentists withdrew from Doncaster family health services authority's dental list, out of a total of 85. Two have joined dental lists in other areas. During the same period the names of 11 dentists have been added to Doncaster's dental list.

Intestinal Cancer

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will fund the introduction of a national screening system for the early detection of intestinal cancer via occult foetal blood tests.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It would be premature to consider this before we know the outcome of a study, which the Department and the Medical Research Council are currently funding, to evaluate screening for colorectal cancer.

Discharged Patients

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for the last 12 months for each (a) regional health authority and (b) district health authority in England and Wales, the number of national health service patients who have been discharged from national health service hospitals, and who within three months required subsequent hospitalisation for (i) the same complaint or (ii) a different but related complaint.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally.

World No Tobacco Day

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to mark World No Tobacco Day on 31 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The main United Kingdom event in this field, on which efforts are concentrated, is our own long established and successful No Smoking Day. We recognise, however, the importance of World No Tobacco Day, particularly in those countries which do not organise their own national event and we try to give it suitable recognition.

This year the Health Education Authority (HEA) will be supplying each health education unit and environmental health unit in England with question and answer booklets on passive smoking together with posters, stickers and ideas for action.

The HEA is also co-operating with Taxi magazine in a promotion designed to encourage smoke-free cabs.

Dental Technicians

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prosecutions were taken by the General Dental Council against dental technicians during the year 1990 for illegal practice of dentistry in the provision of dentures; and what was their outcome.

Mr. Dorrell: I understand from the General Dental Council that one dental technician was prosecuted during 1990 for practising dentistry illegally. The defendant pleaded guilty to three separate charges and was fined £750 on each count and ordered to pay costs of £200.

Conisbrough Hospital, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has made to the notification by the chairman of Doncaster health authority of the intended closure of Conisbrough hospital.

Mr. Dorrell: I understand that Doncaster health authority is due to consult locally on the proposed closure of Conisbrough hospital at the end of May. If after full and public consultation the community health council contests the proposed closure, it will be put to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for a decision.

Budgeting and Charging (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he has made with the chairman of Doncaster health authority concerning a smoothing mechanism operating after 1 April in respect of the new budgeting system and the new charging system for cross-border flows of patients to hospitals and clinics.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: District health authorities as commissioners of health services consulted general practitioners in their areas before making contracts with hospital and other providers to reflect their views and existing referral patterns. They are also holding cash reserves for patients referred by general practitioners outside the contractual framework.

Junior Hospital Doctors

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on what progress has been achieved in reducing the hours worked by junior hospital doctors.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The ministerial group on junior doctors' hours, which I chair, is making good progress in implementing the heads of agreement on junior doctors' hours signed in December last year, a copy of which is available in the Library. Task forces have been set up in every region and have already received guidance on the role they are to play in reducing the hours and improving the working conditions of doctors in training. Funding for an additional 200 consultant and 50 staff grade posts has been allocated to the regions, along with notice of 100 additional senior house officer posts to assist in the initiative. In conjunction with the profession, we hope to launch the full package of guidance outlined in the heads of agreement in the near future.

Nurses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for the latest date he has available, for each health authority in England and Wales (a) the number of nurses employed as (i) nursing assistants, (ii) enrolled nurses, (iii) staff nurses and (iv) charge nurses and (b) the numbers in absolute and percentage terms at which nurses are employed in each category; and what were the comparable figures five and 10 years ago.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Buerger's Disease

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of Buerger's disease have been recorded in each of the last five years for which data are available; and in how many cases this has been given as the cause of death.

Mr. Dorrell: The only information held centrally which can be provided without incurring disproportionate cost is given in the table. This relates to the number of patients treated in NHS hospitals in England where Thromboangiitis obliterans (Buerger's disease) has been recorded as the primary diagnosis.

Estimated numbers of discharges and deaths (1984-85) and ordinary and day case admissions (1987-88/1989-90) where main diagnosis was ICD 443.1: thromboangiitis obliterans (Buerger's disease) 443.1 Buerger's disease

Year	Number of in-patients

1985	103
1987-88	143
1988-89	123
1989-90	114

Source: HIPE 1984-85 and HES 1987-88/1989-90. Data compiled by SM12A.

These numbers are provisional estimates based on incomplete data and may be subject to revision.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been carried out into the link between smoking and Buerger's disease; and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the publicity given to the dangers of Buerger's disease from smoking.

Mr. Dorrell: We are not aware of any current research in this area. Buerger's disease is a rare form of peripheral vascular disease, the cause of which remains unknown, although a close association with the habitual use of tobacco, particularly cigarette smoking, is indisputable. The Health Education Authority is aware of the association between smoking and Buerger's disease and seeks to publicise this as part of its anti-smoking programmes, although other smoking-related diseases result in far higher levels of mortality and morbidity.

St. Charles Youth Treatment Centre

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish his Department's report on the St. Charles youth treatment centre in Brentwood, Essex; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Earlier this year, a young person made a number of serious complaints about aspects of treatment while at St. Charles youth treatment centre. These have been investigated on behalf of the Department by a team of independent experts. They have submitted their report. This contains confidential personal and medical information and cannot be made public. The Department is urgently considering the team's findings, and will make its conclusions public after the young person involved has been informed of the outcome. Any action required in the light of the team's findings will be taken with the utmost vigour.

Diabetics

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether cassette needles used by diabetics will be made available free of charge on the same basis as existing needles and syringes supplied for their needs; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: National health service supply arrangements for insulin pens and needles need to be considered together. Subject to our normal evaluation of individual brands, we would consider making pens and needles prescribable, as an alternative to syringes, provided that this can be done without additional cost. Discussions with suppliers are currently in progress.

Incontinence Aids

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) which regional health authorities have a policy of providing incontinence aids free to residents of private residential or nursing homes who have been referred by doctors or nurses and (b) which district health authorities do not provide incontinence aids free in the same circumstances.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not held centrally.

Leeds General Infirmary

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will review the proposals made by the Leeds general infirmary hospital trust to increase the number of private beds at the Leeds general infirmary; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The provision of private beds at the Leeds general infirmary and associated hospitals national health service trust is a matter for the management board. I understand from the management of the trust that there are no plans to increase the number of private beds.

Sudden Infant Death Syndrome

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date he received the report of the independent experts examining the possibility of a link between the release of toxic gases from certain cot mattresses and sudden infant death syndrome; if he will give a date for its publication; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The report was given to the chief medical officer on 5 February, publication is imminent and the Department will then respond to the recommendations of the expert group.

General Practitioners

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he intends to take to ensure that non-fund-holding general practices in the city of Sheffield are able to place patients in hospitals outside the authority area, where required for the most appropriate patient care and speediest treatment; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: General practitioners remain free to refer patients to hospitals outside their district boundaries. Indeed, the reforms offer improved arrangements to giving practical effect to this freedom.

Guidance, "Contracts for Health Services: Operational Principles", issued to the national health service on 29 September 1989, a copy of which is available in the Library, made it clear that district health authorities' objective should be to secure contracts which reflect the referral patterns local general practitioners prefer. There has been an unprecedented level of consultation between district health authorities and local general practitioners to achieve this. District health authorities are also holding reserves of funds for referrals where no contract has been secured in advance.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish general practitioner fund-holding contracts.

Mr. Dorrell: Guidance to the National Health Service (EL(90)MB24, a copy of which is available in the Library) has made it clear that contracts for health services with both public and private providers should be made publicly available once they are signed.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has given on the relationship between general practitioner fund-holding practices and community health councils regarding their health purchasing policies of such general practitioners.

Mr. Dorrell: None. The community health council has a statutory relationship with the district health authority which retains overall planning responsibility for the provision of health services to all residents, including those on the lists of fund-holding general practitioners.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the Far Lane general practitioner fund-holding practice in Sheffield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: I have received one such representation from the Sheffield local medical committee, whom I met on Wednesday 22 May.

The Far Lane fund-holding practice in Sheffield has legitimately set up a company which is employing consultants to provide a range of services for patients. Regional health authorities are required to agree to such arrangements only where they constitute good value for money by comparison with the alternatives and meet the requisite quality standards for the provision of care. The Trent regional health authority has confirmed that it is content with the arrangements at this practice.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines he has issued concerning the use of general practitioner fund holders' premises for private practice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: No guidance has been issued specifically to fund holders. GPs, as independent contractors, are free to use as they like the premises which they own. The conditions for payments to GPs in respect of their surgery premises, are set out in the statement of fees and allowances.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the incidence for Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease over the last 10 years in each standard cohort age range of onset of clinical symptoms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is not available centrally. Accurate information on current and previous cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease should be forthcoming from the study being conducted by Dr. R. G. Will supported by the Department of Health. In the 1970s, the last time this analysis was undertaken, the peak age-specific incidence was for the 65 to 69 year age group and was 1·7 cases per million per year. Copies of Dr. Will's publication on this analysis will be placed in the Library.

Steroid Drugs

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health further to the written answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 87, to the hon. Member for Stalybridge and Hyde, what progress has been made on deciding the timetable, agency and funding of the Government's proposed survey into the prevalence of the misuse of steroid drugs.

Mr. Dorrell: We have identified a research facility with the relevant expertise to carry out this survey and, subject to final contract negotiations, plan to conduct the survey in the autumn. We estimate that the survey will take approximately one year to complete.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Millisle Tourist Project

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any information about foul sewage discharge from Ballycopeland outlet going into the lagoon at the new Millisle tourist development project when there is a north wind and an incoming tide; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: Sewage effluent is discharged from the Ballycopeland outlet only on the outgoing tide as soon after high tide as possible and is thus carried away from the lagoon.

The Millisle tourist development project is the responsibility of Ards borough council and there have been no complaints from it or others about sewage entering the lagoon.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he is satisfied with the condition of the beach near Drumfads road, Carrowdore, County Down; whether untreated raw sewage is being pumped out to the Irish sea near this location; whether an overspill flows down to Millisle; and if he will make a statement about foul sewage disposal at this location.

Mr. Needham: The bathing waters at Millisle are routinely monitored under, and comply with, the mandatory standards of the EC bathing water directive. Sewage is held in a retention tank on the shore at Ballywhiskin where it is screened before discharge to the sea on the ebb tide. There is no overspill flowing to Millisle. Sewage discharges to the sea are being examined in the context of the recent EC directive on municipal waste water treatment.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for a new sewage treatment plant for Millisle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: Existing sewage treatment facilities at Millisle are being examined in the context of the recent EC directive on municipal waste water treatment.

Lands Tribunals

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by how much the salaries of (a) the president and (b) the members of lands tribunals increased in the 10 years from 1 April 1982 to 1 April 1992 in cash and percentage terms; and what has been the percentage increase in the average industrial wage and in inflation during the same period.

[2] The post was filled in 1986-87 on a part-time basis (hence the reduced salary) but the postholder worked exclusively on Lands Tribunal work.

Local Government Staff Commission

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date the Secretary of the Local Government Staff Commission for Northern Ireland is leaving his post; and on what date his successor will take up the post.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Local Government Staff Commission for Northern Ireland. I am advised by its chairman that the secretary will be leaving his post on 11 June 1991, but no decisions have yet been taken regarding the appointment of his successor.

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date a chief executive will be appointed to the Local Government Staff Commission for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Local Government Staff Commission for Northern Ireland. I am advised by its chairman that interviews for the appointment of a chief executive will take place on 28 May 1991. At this stage, therefore, it is not possible to say on what date a new chief executive will take up appointment.

Ultach Trust

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the objectives that were laid down by the Northern Ireland Office as conditions for funding the Ultach trust; and whether these objectives define the relationship between the Ultach trust and Glor na nGael's.

Dr. Mawhinney: The objectives of Government funding for the Ultach trust are to widen the appreciation of the contribution that the Irish language has made to the cultural heritage of Northern Ireland, to increase knowledge of the language throughout the community and to assist in the provision of written and oral material to promote the wider use of the language.

All agreements between the Department of Finance and Personnel and the Ultach trust are subject to conditions designed to ensure that the funding provided is used in a manner and for the purposes agreed by the parties. This includes a standard provision which gives effect to the policy reflected in the parliamentary reply of 27 June 1985 by the then Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, Official Report, Vol. 81, column 451.

Glor na nGael

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what consideration he has given to the independent audit of Belfast Glor na nGael's accounts; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what are the procedures by which charitable street collections are authorised in Northern Ireland; and whether these procedures were fully complied with for the first Irish language collection undertaken by Glor na nGael in Belfast on 10 October 1990;

(3) when the decision was made to withdraw funds from Glor na nGael.

Dr. Mawhinney: These matters are within the purview of current proceedings before the High Court in Northern Ireland and further comment by me at this stage would not be appropriate.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to ensure that the development of Irish language resources in the community will not suffer as a result of the withdrawal of funds from Glor Na nGael.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Government recognise the interest and importance which many people attach to the Irish language and culture, and have a policy of active support for Irish language projects through their cultural traditions programme and other programmes, such as the action for community employment scheme and the Belfast action teams initiative. Overall Government spending on the Irish language has increased from approximately £88,000 in 1985-86 to an expected level considerably in excess of £700,000 in 1991-92. This does not take into account the very substantial annual amount spent in schools and colleges of further education. The Government will continue to support efforts to increase awareness and appreciation of the language as part of the cultural heritage of Northern Ireland.

Grants (Vetting)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details as to which section of the Northern Ireland civil service is responsible for implementing the vetting policy for grants, announced on 27 June 1985.

Dr. Mawhinney: Decisions under the policy announced on 27 June 1985 are taken by my right hon. Friend and are given effect through all Departments under his control.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the content and purpose of the instructions issued to Departments and public bodies with regard to organisations from whom funds have been withdrawn as a result of the vetting policy on grants announced on 27 June 1985.

Dr. Mawhinney: Instructions on this matter are internal to Government, but the purpose is to ensure that decisions taken under the policy announced on 27 June 1985 are given effect.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of all instances where public funds have been withdrawn from Northern Ireland organisations under the vetting policy for grants announced on 27 June 1985; how many of the decisions were appealed; and what was the result of each appeal.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to his earlier question on 19 December 1990, Official Report, Vol. 183, c. 160.

Western Health and Social Services Board

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in the new management structure of the Western health and social services board, how many who are deemed to be Protestants have been appointed.

Mr. Hanley: Under the Fair Employment (N.I.) Acts 1976 and 1989, the Western health and social services board, as a specified public authority, carries direct responsibility for providing equality of opportunity for all job applicants and for its employees. The board has an equal opportunity policy and submits monitoring returns to the Fair Employment Commission as required by the legislation.

In view of the board's statutory responsibilities, I do not consider it appropriate to provide the information requested. However, the board is prepared to meet with the hon. Member on this matter.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action the Western health and social services board is taking under its fair employment policy to ensure a fair representation between Roman Catholics and Protestants on its psychiatric unit of management.

Mr. Hanley: The Western health and social services board has an equal opportunity policy and has developed procedures for the implementation and monitoring of equality of opportunity which are in line with the recommendations in the code of practice on fair employment. The board seeks to ensure that vacancies are advertised in newspapers accessible by both communities, that shortlisting criteria are not unlawfully discriminatory and that appointments are made in accordance with the health and personal social services selection and appointment procedures which are the responsibility of the Department of Health and Social Services. It is the board's policy that all appointments should be made on the basis of merit and this policy is applied consistently in all areas including the board's area mental health unit.

Social Fund

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total monthly budget allocated under the social fund to each district office of the Department of Health and Social Services in each month since April 1988.

Mr. Hanley: Social fund budgets are allocated to offices for a full year and not on a monthly basis. Information on the annual amounts allocated to each district office from 1 April 1991 and individual offices in previous years is available in the Library.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total expenditure from the social fund by each district office of the Department of Health and Social Services in each month since April 1988.

Mr. Hanley: Details of each month's expenditure for the district offices from 1 April 1991 and individual social security offices for previous years is available in the Library.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions the monthly social fund budgets of each district office of the Department of Health and Social Services were underspent at the end of each month since April 1988.

Mr. Hanley: Social fund budgets are allocated for a full year, April to March, therefore the question of an underspend does not arise until the end of the financial year. Details of amounts remaining in each office's budget at the year end are available in the Library.

Community Care Grant

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many community care grant applications were processed by each district office of the Department of Health and Social Services in each month since April 1988; and how many applications were (a) successful, (b) successful on appeal and (c) rejected.

Mr. Hanley: Information about the number of community care grants processed each month by each of the district offices from 1 April 1991 and the individual social security offices is available in the Library. The number of applications refused can be obtained from those figures.

Community care grants are discretionary awards and there is no right of appeal against these. Dissatisfied applicants can, however, apply for a review to the social fund officer who made the original decision and if they are dissatisfied with the outcome of this review they can request a review by the social fund inspector. The SFI acts independently of the Department. Details of the number of decisions revised on review by each social security office for 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91 is shown in the table. Information about the number of cases substituted on review by the SFI is compiled each month by the Social Fund Commissioner's Office for Northern Ireland as a whole, and is available in the Library. It should be recognised that not all cases revised by the SSO or substituted by the SFI on review will be to the applicant's benefit.

Rural Development

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the progress that has been made since the establishment of the inter-departmental committee on rural development.

Mr. Hanley: Since taking on ministerial responsibility for rural development in Northern Ireland, I have set up within the Department of Agriculture a new rural development division to take forward the work of establishing the new structures announced at the time.

I was pleased to be able to announce recently the appointment of Mr. Jimmy Armstrong as the executive chairman-designate for the proposed formation of the Rural Development Council and have asked him to prepare a draft constitution. I have also decided that a council of about 15 members could represent a wide range of rural and other relevant interests. I shall shortly be seeking the assistance of appropriate organisations to help to identify potential members who might be able to make a personal contribution to the work of the council.

Arrangements are also under way to select from the wider public service a small team of area co-ordinators who will establish local networks of statutory agencies to co-ordinate and integrate responses to locally developed community regeneration plans.

I am aiming to have the next structures fully operational by the autumn.

LEADER Programme

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the progress that has been made to date in the attraction of funds from the European Community's LEADER programme, and details of any future developments planned for LEADER-funded projects in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: Northern Ireland, as the United Kingdom's only objective 1 region, has been accorded an indicative LEADER allocation of 2·8 million ecu. This is disappointingly low, given that the closest contact has been maintained with the Commission throughout the developmental stages of this initiative to ensure the greatest possible compatibility between LEADER and the new rural development structures being established in Northern Ireland.

However, the Commission has confirmed that the indicative allocations may be revised to take account of the quality of the programmes presented. Accordingly I am considering with officials how best to maximise the Northern Ireland allocation under the initiative. I will be making a statement shortly about the arrangements for implementing the LEADER programme in Northern Ireland.

Northern Ireland Electricity

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the chairman of the Northern Ireland electricity service concerning the salary increase proposed by the chief executive of the service.

Mr. Needham: None. This is a matter in the first instance for the chairman of NIE who is then required to seek the approval of the Department of Economic Development.

Nationalists

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many nationalist people in the Six Counties have been arrested under the emergency powers Act and prevention of terrorism Act since 1973; how many were charged and how many of those charged were convicted.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 20 May 1991]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Republic of Ireland (Government Talks)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what allowances and expenses will be paid to the representatives of the political parties participating in talks with the Government of the Republic of Ireland; and where these talks will be held.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 14 May 1991]: On the days when meetings of the political parties participating in talks with the Government of the Republic of Ireland take place in the United Kingdom, allowances will continue to be payable on the basis detailed in the reply which I gave to the right hon. Gentleman's question on 14 May 1991, Official Report, Vol. 191, column 126. Other arrangements may be needed for the days on which the talks take place outside the United Kingdom.

I expect that the opening meeting of this strand of talks will be held in London, that the bulk of substantive exchanges will take place in Northern Ireland with plenary meetings being held in Parliament buildings, and that there will be a meeting in Dublin towards the end of June.

DEFENCE

Missiles and Nuclear Shells

Mr. Richmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will withdraw (a) SCRAM-A air-launched missiles and (b) W79 nuclear artillery shells from bases in the United Kingdom and British bases in Europe.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to comment on the deployment of nuclear weapons.

The Gulf

Mr. Richmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when his Department received the United States military's final draft report of its inquiry into the friendly fire incident on 26 February in the Gulf; if a copy will be placed in the Library; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he expects to publish the report into the friendly fire incident of 26 February; and if a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Clackmannan (Mr. O'Neill) on 16 May at columns 272-74.

Smoking

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the percentage of service personnel who smoke.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No service-wide assessment has been made, although a sample survey in 1989 among 4,000 adult male personnel found that 35 per cent. were cigarette smokers and a further 3·6 per cent. were cigar or pipe smokers.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to discourage smoking in the services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence gives wide publicity to the harmful effects of smoking, by way of publishing and displaying anti-smoking literature and posters in defence establishments. Furthermore, it is official policy to discourage smoking on Ministry of Defence premises. In addition, as my hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman) announced in the House on 5 December 1988, the price of "Blue Liners", the specially produced low-priced cigarettes and tobacco available to Royal Navy personnel serving in United Kingdom shore establishments, has been increased progressively and the concession will cease altogether in December 1991.

Defence Expenditure

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's forecast of United Kingdom defence expenditure for the next three years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Defence expenditure in 1991-92 is expected to be around £24·4 billion. This exceeds the supply estimates by some £1·5 billion. Supplementary estimates to provide for this additional Gulf-related expenditure will be presented in due course. Cash plans thereafter are for £23·35 billion in 1992-93 and £23·39 billion in 1993-94, as set out in Cm. 1501.

Military Expenditure

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the impact of reduced military expenditure on the economy of south-west England.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is too early to say what effect the revised defence programme emerging from "Options for Change" will have on military expenditure in particular regions.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will obtain a copy of the conclusions of the Bristol polytechnic study on the impact of reduced military expenditure on the economy of south-west England for his departmental library.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Tornado Exercises, Alaska

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements have been made or are under discussion with the United States of America to enable Tornado aircraft to exercise in Alaska.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Tornado GR1 aircraft deployed to Alaska for a training exercise in June 1990, and the possibility of a further such exercise, is under discussion with the United States authorities.

RAF Honington

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many married quarters and single men's quarters at present are occupied at RAF Honington; and how many airmen stationed there have their own houses in the community.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: At RAF Honington and its associated sites, 595 married quarters are occupied and 780 single personnel are living on base. In addition, 393 married personnel own houses in the local area and some 113 single personnel live in private housing either as tenants or owner-occupiers.

Agency Status

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those bodies currently with agency status within his Department under the "next steps" initiative; and whether he has identified any further candidates for agency status under the initiative within his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Defence organisations currently operating as "next steps" agencies are as follows:

	When launched
Executive agencies
Meteorological Office	April 1990
Defence Research Agency	April 1991
Defence support agencies
Hydrographic Office	April 1990
Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment	April 1991
Directorate General Defence Accounts	April 1991
Military Survey	April 1991
RAF Maintenance Group	April 1991
Service Children's Schools (North West Europe)	April 1991

We plan to move ahead as quickly as possible with the identification and establishment of further agencies in the defence support area. This work will take into account developments in the structure and organisation of the services and the Ministry of Defence as a result of the continuing work on the broad proposals on "Options for Change" which were announced last July.

Submarines, Irish Channel

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the Royal Navy searched and investigated the reported siting of a Soviet Victor III class submarine off the east Antrim coast on 14 May;

(2) if he will make a statement regarding the presence of a foreign submarine approximately two miles off the east Antrim coast on Tuesday 14 May at approximately 1.20 pm.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There were no submarines, United Kingdom or foreign, on the surface off the east Antrim coast at the time in question.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action has been taken to protect shipping and fishermen from risk of activity of foreign submarines between Northern Ireland and Scotland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Royal Navy is investigating whether the successful firth of Clyde dived submarine movement notification scheme can be extended to other United Kingdom territorial waters. Additionally, work continues to assist with the development of net pinger devices to make fishing nets more easily detectable to dived submarines.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any British submarine surfaced off the east Antrim coast on 14 May.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

RAF Training

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to awarding contracts to private firms for the provision of Royal Air Force maintenance training.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Some 300 Royal Air Force maintenance training courses have been put out to contract. We will continue to seek opportunities to extend this practice where it is cost-effective to do so.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to awarding contracts to private firms for the provision of basic Royal Air Force flying training.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The RAF has already embarked on major contractorisation at its flying training stations, at this stage concentrating on engineering, supply and domestic tasks which directly support flying training. A similar approach has been adopted with university air squadrons and air experience flights which provide a major source of trainee pilots for the RAF. We are currently examining the potential for contracting out the elementary flying task.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to awarding contracts to private firms for the provision of Royal Air Force apprentice training.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Following a fundamental review of training in 1989, it has been decided to discontinue Royal Air Force apprentice training and the last tranche of service apprentices will graduate in July 1993. This will not affect the training of civilian apprentices by the Royal Air Force civilian technical training schools (CTTS). Some 50 per cent. of their training will, as at present, continue to be provided through local technical colleges and colleges of further education.

MOD Properties

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the number of defence domestic properties there are throughout the United Kingdom and (b) the number unoccupied at the present time; indicating how many have been unoccupied for six months, one year, two years and for longer than two years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Records are not maintained in the precise form requested. As at 31 March 1991, the latest date for which figures are available, the total stock of service married quarters in the United Kingdom was 73,462 of which 10,111 were vacant; 7,707 had been vacant for less than one year, 1,104 for one to two years and 1,300 for over two years. In addition, the Ministry of Defence owned 1,573 civilian houses, of which 170 were vacant; 57 had been vacant for under six months and 113 for six months or more.

Many of these vacant properties were either undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work or modernisation, some were already attached to service families who were due to move in shortly and others were being considered for disposal. In addition 1,864 dwellings were in the process of being sold.

Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the cost of repairing welding defects in the A91 building at the atomic weapons establishment at Aldermaston; and what effect this has had on training programmes.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The problem discovered during the early stages of commissioning in the A91 building is one of corrosion on pipework and vessels. A detailed technical investigation into the cause and extent of the problem has not yet been completed so we are not in a position to make decisions about what work is needed to rectify the problem. We do not expect this problem to have any adverse effect on the Trident warhead programme. The training schedules of a small number of the future A91 operators have been revised while the problem is being investigated.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to rectify the defect in the installation of supports to the Phoenix system for ductwork on systems other than zone 1 and in the roof spaces above the first floor laboratories in the A90 building at Aldermaston; what system was charged for by the contractors; what steps he is taking to recover moneys from the contractor; and whether he is instigating any criminal or civil proceedings for overcharging, for product substitution or for fraud.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The use of Phoenix supports in A90, in areas beyond zone 1, was approved by the design authority for the building wherever they were fit for the purpose specified. Subsequently none has been found to be defective or inappropriate and none has had to be removed. The supplier charged and was paid for the materials used in the construction. The question of recovery of moneys or the instigation of any criminal or civil proceedings for overcharging has not arisen.

Royal Air Force Finningley

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the future of Royal Air Force Finningley.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Royal Air Force Finningley is principally a flying training station. No decisions have been taken to change that role.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by year for the past 10 years, the amount of night flying that has taken place at Royal Air Force Finningley for (a) training purposes and (b) other reasons; and how much has taken place to date for 1991.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The numbers of hours of night flying by aircraft normally based at RAF Finningley for the years in question were as follows:

	Hours
1981	1,189
1982	1,112
1983	847
1984	706
1985	480
1986	716
1987	850
1988	626
1989	870
1990	1,281

Note: The figure for 1991, to date, is 461 hours.

Most of this flying took place away from RAF Finningley. Nearly all was for training purposes.

VIPER Microprocessor

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make it his policy to accept full responsibility for any damage, injury or death attributable to errors in the design of the VIPER—verifiable integrated processor for enhanced reliability—microprocessor where it is used in safety-critical computer systems controlled by his Department;

(2) what steps his Department has taken with regard to the use of the VIPER microprocessor in safety-critical computer systems controlled by his Department in response to questions as to its design and safety of operation raised in reports published by researchers employed by his Department at the university of Cambridge;

(3) what assessment he has made of the consequences of his Department's premature announcements as to the reliability of the VIPER microprocessor and its premature market launch through commercial licensees appointed by his Department;

(4) what steps his Department is taking to discourage the use of the VIPER microprocessor in civil safety-critical computer systems.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The VIPER microchip was designed to a formal mathematical specification. There is debate among theoreticians about the extent to which VIPER can be said to be "proved" in a formal mathematical sense, but this should not be allowed to undermine the importance of the VIPER achievement: it was the first microchip to be designed to a formal mathematical specification; it was verified by the best methods available; and its design has been more rigorously documented and tested than that of any other microprocessor currently available commercially.

The comments made by the department of mathematics, university of Cambridge, were in the context of the continuing research programme being carried out by the electronics division, DRA, RSRE Malvern and related to the rigour of the mathematical proof process. To date, no errors have been found in the VIPER design.

My Department remains convinced that VIPER represents the best currently available microprocessor design for use in both civil and defence safety critical applications. If, however, any question about responsibility for damage, injury or death were to arise, it would be dealt with in the light of the relevant legal considerations.

VIPER is not currently used in any safety-critical computer systems controlled by MOD. Further comment at this stage would be inappropriate in view of current legal proceedings.

The Gulf (Equipment and Units)

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report the complete list of equipment and units deployed to the Gulf after 2 August 1990, including territorial and reserve forces.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Details of the units and major equipments deployed to the Gulf are being collated and will be published in the statement on the defence estimates and the United Kingdom joint commander's despatch.

Chieftain Tank

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he now expects to make a decision about the Chieftain replacement programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Batiste) on 19 March at column 90.

Civil Service Appeal Board

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 272, what was the date on which representatives of his Department were in private communication with the Civil Service Appeal Board; and whether this communication was written or oral.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to my letter of 13 September 1990 to my hon. Friend the Member for Arundel (Sir M. Marshall), a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Dockyards (Refitting)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 271, if he will make a statement on the nature of the information about his Department's expected refitting programme that has been provided to the management companies of Rosyth and Devonport dockyards.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The nature of the information provided by the Ministry of Defence to the management companies at Devonport and Rosyth in respect of their core programmes is a commercially confidential matter.

Type 23 Frigates

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many type 23 frigates have been ordered from (a) Yarrow Shipbuilders and (b) Swan Hunter Shipbuilders.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Six type 23 frigates have been ordered from Yarrow Shipbuilders and four from Swan Hunter Shipbuilders.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he envisages placing any more orders for type 23 frigates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I have nothing to add to my answer to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell) on 20 February at column 192.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the approximate dates on which he envisages accepting the nine type 23 frigates currently on order into service.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Following the acceptance of HMS Marlborough on 7 March and HMS Argyll on 17 April 1991, there are now seven type 23 frigates on order. We expect all the remaining ships to enter service by the end of 1994.

Equipment Programmes

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will provide details of the effect that the temporary bar on new commitments that he described in the debate of 18 June 1990, Official Report, column 688, has had on the equipment programmes listed on pages 37, 39, 40 and 41 of volume 1 of the "Statement of Defence Estimates 1990".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The temporary bar on new commitments was carefully managed to ensure that major equipment projects suffered no significant adverse effect.

Defence Contractors

47. Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with which of the defence contractors listed on page 15 of volume 2 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1990" he has discussed the "Options for Change" study.

Mr. Carlisle: Discussions between Ministers and defence contractors are conducted on a confidential basis.

Calcutt Inquiry

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 272, what was the amount of fees payable in connection with the Calcutt inquiry; and whether these fees are in addition to the compensation payment of £30,000 to Mr. Colin Wallace.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The sum of £30,000 paid in compensation to Mr. Wallace did not include legal costs. The sum paid to Mr. Wallace's solicitors is commercially confidential, as are the costs of Mr. Calcutt's work on behalf of the Department.

"Options for Change"

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his assessment of the impact of the "Options for Change" study on service morale.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The need for the "Options for Change" study is well understood within the services.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what studies have taken place into the possible amalgamation of regiments as part of the "Options for Change" process;

(2) what consideration has been given to (a) disbanding regiments and (b) converting regiments from Regular to Territorial status as part of the "Options for Change" study;

(3) whether he is making an assessment of permanently stationing regiments at particular locations as part of the "Options for Change" study;

(4) whether any consideration of posting individual service personnel from regiment to regiment is taking place as part of the "Options for Change" study;

(5) whether he is reassessing the system of moving complete regiments to different locations as part of the "Options for Change" study.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We continue to study these and other matters as part of our work on "Options for Change"; but, as we have made clear on previous occasions, it is our intention to retain the regimental system.

Dockyard Employees (Pensions)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many employees at Rosyth and Devonport are currently contributing to Government-established pension schemes.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: In common with all other civil servants other than those who choose to make private arrangements, MOD employees at Rosyth and Devonport are covered by the principal civil service pension scheme. This is non-contributory except for a deduction of 1½ per cent. of pay in respect of the spouses'/dependants' benefits element of the scheme.

Auxiliary Oiler Replenishment Vessels

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which shipyards have won orders for auxiliary oiler replenishment vessels; whether he has plans to order more auxiliary oiler replenishment vessels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Harland and Wolff, and Swan Hunter Shipbuilders each have an order for one auxiliary oiler replenishment vessel. We expect to order further vessels, but no decisions have yet been made on the size and timing of such orders.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will list the current number of BAOR infantry battalions and armoured regiments that constitute a BAOR division.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In peacetime, BAOR has three armoured divisions, the composition of each of which is as follows:

1 Armoured Division—5 armoured regiments and 5 infantry battalions
3 Armoured Division—4 armoured regiments and 5 infantry battalions
4 Armoured Divisions—4 armoured regiments and 6 infantry battalions

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has made any detailed decisions about the future of individual BAOR units or their locations as part of the "Options for Change" study.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, North (Mr. Thompson) on 24 January 1991 at column 319-20. No other decisions have been taken.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications he has had with his Dutch and Belgian counterparts regarding the future roles of the BAOR.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has been involved in regular meetings with his ministerial colleagues from the other NATO countries, including the Netherlands and Belgium, when discussions have taken place on a range of issues including the future roles of allied forces in Europe.

Belgium

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assurances he has had from his Belgian counterpart regarding the supply of defence equipment and material for British armed forces in the event of a crisis.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Belgium provided valuable assistance in the form of medical and logistic support to the coalition (including British) forces during the recent crisis in the Gulf. As a member of the NATO alliance, Belgium is committed, like other members, to the concept of collective defence. We have not sought any assurance from the Belgians about possible support for British forces in the event of a future crisis outside the NATO area.

Type 42 Destroyers

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to order a replacement for the type 42 destroyer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Following withdrawal from NFR90, we have been considering the way forward for an anti-air warfare frigate to replace the type 42 from around the turn of the century. We hope to make an announcement on the next stage of this programme in the next few months.

HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to extend the lives of HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Epsom and Ewell (Mr. Hamilton) on 20 May at column 391 to my hon. Friend the Member for Ashford (Mr. Speed).

Lynx Helicopters

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to (a) replace Royal Navy Lynx helicopters or (b) extend the lives of Royal Navy Lynx helicopters.

Mr. Carlisle: Royal Navy Lynx helicopters will be deployed on Royal Navy ships into the next century. A range of improvements is being introduced to sustain their capability during the remainder of their operational lives.

General Service Respirator

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the speed of the delivery programme for the general service respirator S10 has been changed in the past six months.

Mr. Carlisle: Contract deliveries of S10 respirator facepieces were increased in the last quarter of 1990 to support Gulf deployment requirements. Deliveries have now returned to the normal rate.

Equipment Programmes

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will provide details of the effect that the "Options for Change" study has had on the equipment programmes listed on pages 37, 39, 40 and 41 of volume 1 of the "Statement of Defence Estimates 1990".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am not yet in a position to add to the answers given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 4 December 1990 at column 161 and by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement on 19 December at column 212.

Thailand (Service Personnel)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the allowances payable to those British service personnel working in Thailand who are not attached to the British embassy.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Entitlement to allowances and liability for charges for service personnel serving abroad depend on the location and the nature of the duties being carried out and vary in accordance with individual circumstances.

Staff Training College, Dhaka

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Brimanetish armed forces are presently seconded to the staff training college, Dhaka, Bangladesh; and what is the nature of their secondment.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The two-man British military advisory team in Bangladesh assists with military staff courses for all three services at the Bangladesh defence services command and staff college.

Low Flying

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards arming aircraft in low-flying exercises with live ammunition.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Our policy remains as set out in the reply that my hon. Friend the Member for Epsom and Ewell (Mr. Hamilton) gave the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) on 25 April 1990 at col. 208.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the categories of live ammunition and weapons recovered from the wreckage of aircraft that have crashed in low-flying exercises in Britain in the past four years.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No aircraft armed with live ammunition have crashed in low-flying exercises in Britain in the past four years. However, practice bombs using small spotting charges and practice ammunition are carried frequently. Some of the aircraft involved in accidents while low flying were carrying practice munitions.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any planes carrying or armed with live ammunition have crashed in Wales in the past three years from (a) low-flying exercises and (b) other flying exercises.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any live ammunition has been recovered from the wreckage of aircraft which have crashed in low-flying exercises in the Brecon and Radnor constituency.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No.

Open Policy Documents

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all open policy documents published by his Department since 1980; and what plans he has to publish further open policy documents.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The principal document published by the Ministry of Defence which sets out defence policy is the annual statement on the defence estimates. In addition, the Department makes available a wide range of material dealing with policy issues, ranging from discussion papers to press releases. It would be impractical to provide a list of all such materials published since 1980. The Ministry plans to continue its practice of issuing policy documents as appropriate.

Defence Research Agency Videos

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the video shown by the Defence Research Agency at the defence components and equipment exhibition in Birmingham on 14 and 15 May, cost to make; how many copies are available for distribution; how much it costs to hire the video; and whether it is available to foreign military authorities on request.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: This is a matter for the Defence Research Agency under its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive of the Defence Research Agency, Mr. Nigel Hughes, to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Scottish Power (Submarine Incident)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has about incidents involving a submarine and the boat Scottish Power between midnight on 18 May and 3 am on 19 May; if he will conduct an inquiry into the allegation by the skipper of Scottish Power that a submarine buzzed the vessel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The skipper of the yacht reported to the Clyde coastguard that between 2300 on 18 May and 0100 19 May, he had sighted lights close to his vessel on three occasions. In the final instance he reported that he also saw the conning tower of a surfaced submarine approximately half a mile away. Submarine movements at the time of this incident have been fully reviewed and I can confirm that there were no Royal Navy or NATO submarines within 60 miles of the location of the reported sighting.

Cambodia

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has about the military training given to those military forces in Cambodia that are fighting against the Government of that country and are not part of the Khmer Rouge.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his assessment of the effectiveness of those military forces in Cambodia that are fighting against the Government of that country and are not part of the Khmer Rouge.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have no reliable information about the effectiveness of such forces.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what income Scottish Homes received in capital receipts from house sales in the fourth quarter of 1990-91 and in the first quarter of 1991-92, from (a) right to buy sales, (b) rents to mortgage sales, (c) sales under the portable discount scheme and (d) vacant possession sales.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information for the fourth quarter of 1990-91 financial year is set out in the table. Details for the first quarter of 1991-92 are not yet available.

	£ million
Right to buy sales	9·041
Rent to mortgage sales	0·129

Vacant possession sales	1·032
Total	10·393

The figures include receipts from miscellaneous items, such as building insurance and repair funds. Figures net of these items are not currently available for each type of sale.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many Scottish Homes (ex-SSHA) dwellings were modernised in each calendar year, and in each financial year from 1979 to the nearest available date.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is available on a financial year basis only and is as follows:

Local Museums

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland by how much expenditure on local museums has increased since 1979, both in terms of Government grant-in-aid and expenditure by local authorities.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Government support for local museums is channelled through the Scottish Museums Council, which works to improve the quality of local museums and gallery provision in Scotland. The council's grant-in-aid from Government has increased from £145,000 in 1979-80 to £665,000 in 1991-92, an increase in real terms of 98 per cent. Information on local authorities' expenditure on museums was not available separately until 1983-84. However, expenditure on museums and libraries has increased from £27·8 million in 1979-80 to £93·8 million in 1991-92, an increase in real terms of 46 per cent. On museums alone the increase in expenditure from 1983-84 to 1991-92 is 24·1 per cent. in real terms.

Prison Catering

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the sum per prisoner, per day allocated for catering at Her Majesty's prison, Perth.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The cost of food for prisoners is determined by the weekly ration sheet based on an approved dietary scale. On that basis the average daily cost of food per prisoner in Her Majesty's prison, Perth is £1·15.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the standard of food provided to prisoners in Her Majesty's prison, Perth.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Prison dietary scales are designed to ensure that all prisoners are given balanced, nutritional and varied meals. The catering arrangements for prisoners in Her Majesty's prison, Perth are of a satisfactory and acceptable standard.

Govan Initiative

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current year's budget for Govan Initiative; and what proportion of its funding comes from central and local government.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The total urban programme budget for Govan Initiative in the current year amounts to £795,254. Central Government grant meets 75 per cent. of the cost, with the balance being provided by local government.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if in the nursery schools to be provided by Govan Initiative the system for entry will be similar to the priority system operated by Strathclyde regional council.

Mr. Allan Stewart: There will be some similarity with the system operated by Strathclyde regional council. However, to meet the objectives set in the application for funding under the urban programme, first priority will be given to the provision of child care resources to parents undertaking full-time training or education whose objective is to gain or return to employment.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received a request for additional funding from Govan Initiative.

Mr. Allan Stewart: In response to an approach for additional funding, approval under the urban programme was given on 2 May 1991 to additional expenditure of £18,184 to meet increased capital costs relating to the provision of child care units in the area of the Govan Initiative.

Locate in Scotland

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the budget for Locate in Scotland's activities in each year since 1986-87, at 1991-92 prices.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The cost of running Locate in Scotland from 1986-87 to 1991-92, taking account of salaries, administration expenses, travel, marketing and advertising is shown in cash terms and at constant 1991-92 prices in the table. The 1991-92 figures are provisional at this stage.

1986-87	3·8	5·2
1987-88	3·9	5·0
1988-89	4·0	4·9
1989-90	4·3	4·9
1990-91	4·6	4·9
1991-92	5·1	5·1

Forth Valley Health Board

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assistance will be given to Forth Valley health board by way of additional investment and so on, to develop laboratory services, including virology within the board's area;

(2) what consideration is being given to the rationalisation of laboratories at Falkirk royal infirmary and Stirling royal infirmary on one site; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether Forth Valley health board will be free to contract out laboratory work currently carried out at Falkirk royal infirmary to other health boards; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what discussions have taken place with privately owned hospitals regarding the future placement of laboratory work currently carried out at Falkirk royal infirmary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Capital investment in laboratory services is a matter for the health board to consider in the context of its capital plan. Some £200,000 has been spent recently on improvements at Falkirk and district, and Stirling royal infirmaries. No proposals are being considered at present by the health board for rationalisation of the facilities on one site or to contract out laboratory work to other health boards. The improvements in the respective laboratories will enable the board to carry out a wider range of tests in the existing premises.

There have been no discussions with privately owned hospitals about the future placement of laboratory work currently being carried out at the Falkirk and district royal infirmary.

Audubon Bird Manuscripts

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will purchase Edinburgh university's Audubon bird manuscripts and first editions and return them to the university on permanent loan.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce the income scale which will apply to the assisted places scheme in Scotland in school session 1991-92.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: For school session 1991-92, I propose to lay regulations before the House in due course providing for progressive parental contributions for one assisted pupil in relation to family income as follows:

Part of relevant income to which the specified percentage applies	Parental contribution (percentage)
That part (if any) which exceeds £8,821 but does not exceed £9,591	9·0
That part (if any) which exceeds £9,591 but does not exceed £10,375	12·0

That part (if any) which exceeds £14,321 but does not exceed £17,442	24·0
That part (if any) which exceeds £17,442	33·0

The relevant income scale is open-ended, but the remission can of course be given only where the parental contribution is less than the school tuition fee.

Postgraduate Grants

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many grants have been given for postgraduate qualifications in Scotland in each year since 1979, and for what qualifications in each year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 22 April 1991]: The information is not available in the form requested.

Overall figures for the number of awards offered to Scottish domiciled students in respect of vocational postgraduate and certain other second courses during each academic year from 1978-79 to 1987-88 are set out in table 1.

Aberdeen Royal Infirmary

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what amount of grant for capital expenditure has been paid to the Grampian health board in respect of Aberdeen royal infirmary in each year since 1979;

(2) what applications he has received from Grampian health board for grants in respect of capital expenditure at Aberdeen royal infirmary for each year from 1987 to 1994.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 20 May 1991]: Each year, health boards submit capital expenditure plans detailing their known proposals for the next 10 years. Funding for capital projects is provided by means of an annual capital allocation to each board related to these plans. Boards have considerable freedom to deploy the sums allocated in accordance with their own priorities. Only in certain circumstances are sums earmarked for specific projects (at present mainly for projects costing more than £5 million in total and prior to 1987 for projects included in boards' major building programmes). From 1979-80 to 1990-91 no sums were earmarked within Grampian health board's capital allocations for expenditure on Aberdeen royal infirmary. Expenditure on minor projects was drawn from the main block allocated to the board.

On 10 May I announced that I had given approval for the first phase of a major development at the infirmary. This phase of the development will cost £7·3 million and will provide 30 additional general surgery day patient beds, 30 additional in-patient surgical and gynaecology beds and 41 in-patient ophthalmology beds. In 1991-92, £1·676 million has been specifically earmarked in Grampian health board's capital allocation to fund the start of the development and further provision will be included in the allocations for later years to facilitate its completion. Sums included in the board's capital plans for expenditure on the infirmary during the period 1987 to 1994 were:

	£ million
1987-88	0·669
1988-89	0·585
1989-90	0·623
1990-91	0·829
1991-92	1·676
1992-93	4·357
1993-94	2·303

Audiology

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the number of full and part-time physical measurement technicians in audiology employed by each health board currently and for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list the number of qualified physical measurement technicians in audiology in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 21 May 1991]: The available information regarding the number of qualified physiological measurement technicians working in audiology in Scotland is shown in the following table.

Audiological technicians by health board and whole-time/part-time at 30 September 1990

	Whole-time	Part-time
Argyll and Clyde	6	2
Ayrshire	0	1
Borders	3	0
Dumfries	3	0
Forth Valley	4	3
Grampian	9	1
Greater Glasgow	18	8
Tayside	10	1
Scotland	60	17

The breakdown of physiological measurement technicians into specialties was not available before 1990. It is for individual health boards to determine, after taking account of the needs of the population in their areas, the number of physiological measurement technicians in audiology they employ.

ENERGY

Electricity Generation

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has held with generators seeking to contract within the non-fossil fuel obligation regarding contract length; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My Department has frequent and regular contact with generators about non-fossil fuel generation, including contract length. I am confident that the regional electricity companies have the flexibilities they need to be able to offer acceptable contracts to generators wishing to contract within the proposed 1991 NFFO Renewables Order.

Hinkley Point C

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will obtain for his Department's library a copy of the study on the Hinkley Point C public inquiry, by Crispin Aubrey.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Department's library has on order a book entitled, "Meltdown: the collapse of the nuclear dream", by Crispin Aubrey, which includes a chapter on the Hinkley Point C public inquiry. If the author has produced a further study on the inquiry, a copy will be considered for purchase when details about publication are known.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many times he has had to adjudicate on the propriety of real estate transactions involving estate agents who advised on electricity privatisation.

Mr. Wakeham: None. The privatised companies are responsible for commercial transactions pertaining to their property.

Euratom Treaty (Safeguards)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether an application has ever been made to the president of the European Court of Justice under article 81 of chapter VII of the Euratom treaty to ensure safeguards inspections are conducted.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No such application has been made in respect of an installation in the United Kingdom.

Plutonium

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Newport West of 12 March, Official Report, column 435, what forms of assurance were given by the United Kingdom to the countries of origin of the plutonium reprocessed prior to 1973 that their plutonium was kept separate and segregated from United Kingdom origin plutonium and military plutonium.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No such assurances for the reprocessing of civil spent fuel have either been requested or given. It has been the Government's policy since 1986 that civil and non-civil spent fuel should be reprocessed in separate campaigns.

Photovoltaics

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether any Ministers or officials from his Department, or from the energy technology support unit, will be present at the special workshop on photovoltaics and their physics, technology and applications, to be held in Tripoli in Libya on 15 to 20 June.

Mr. Moynihan: No one from my Department or the energy technology support unit will be attending the workshop in Tripoli.

Oil and Gas Exploration (Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the latest developments relating to the exploration for oil and gas off the Welsh coast, and any guidance given by the Welsh Office to those involved in such work.

Mr. Moynihan: Exploration for oil and gas takes place under licences awarded by my Department. Approvals, consents and guidance associated with these licences are issued by my Department.

Licensees also consult the Ministries of Defence and Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and the Department of Transport for guidance on defence, fishing and navigational matters in the licensed areas, the Nature Conservancy Council for guidance on environmental matters, and, in the case of blocks close to shore, local planning authorities. The Health and Safety Executive is now responsible for monitoring and providing advice on offshore safety.

Evidence of oil and gas has been found in only one block to date. The block concerned, 110/13, lies in the Irish sea and was licensed in 1989. The oil and gas discovered in this block has yet to be appraised.

Offshore Licensing

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he is able to announce the results of the 12th and frontier offshore licensing rounds.

Mr. Wakeham: I am now able to inform the House about the offshore oil and gas licences that I propose to award in these two separate rounds.

In the 12th round I received 115 applications for 81 of the 120 blocks on offer; 80 companies were involved. Following careful examination of these applications by my Department, I am now prepared to offer licences for 74 blocks.

The number of applications received was satisfying in itself. In addition, the proportion of blocks applied for was the highest for 10 years and showed that the oil and gas industry maintains its very strong interest in obtaining licences on the United Kingdom continental shelf. The success of the round was confirmed by the quality of the proposals put to us by the successful applicant companies and the exploration which will flow from these awards. This will help ensure that the UKCS remains a major international oil and gas province well into the next century.

The response to the first separate round of licensing for frontier areas was also very encouraging. I received 13 applications from groups involving 37 companies for six of the 11 tranches of blocks on offer. I am pleased to be able to offer licences for all these tranches. This will give a fresh impetus to exploration in these areas.

The success of these two rounds demonstrates that the present form of licensing continues to offer the most effective means of releasing offshore acreage to the industry for exploration. The frontier round result especially also highlights the responsiveness of the licensing system to the particular circumstances of different areas. Both rounds demonstrate the importance my Department attaches to listening to the views of the oil and gas industry.

For licences awarded in both rounds, special conditions will apply wherever appropriate to ensure that operations are carried out with due regard to the environment and to fishing, navigation, defence and other interests. These conditions are tailored specifically to the particular circumstances of individual blocks and were agreed with the organisations consulted during preparations for the licensing rounds.

A copy of the list of awards has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Financial Services

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement on Government policy on multi-tied agencies, as outlined by the Securities and Investments Board;

(2) if he will bring forward proposals to modify the rules of best advice, as embodied in the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: The Securities and Investments Board's current retail regulation review includes the present best advice and polarisation regime. The SIB review is at an early stage, but I understand the possibility of multi-tied agencies is one of the issues to be considered.

I look forward to there being a lively public debate on retail regulation. I hope that my hon. Friend and others will send their views to the SIB and let me know of their concerns.

Clothing Industry

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures he proposes to take to assist the clothing manufacturing industry in the Blyth Valley constituency.

Mr. Lilley: Companies in Blyth Valley can take advantage of a range of existing schemes including regional selective assistance—a negotiable incentive to investment which can contribute to the capital costs of a project—and subsidised consultancy under the enterprise initiative.

BAT Industries plc

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when the original BAT accounts for 1990 were lodged at Companies house; and if any queries were raised with the company about those accounts;

(2) whether he will investigate BAT's revision of its 1990 accounts and ask the Institute of Chartered Accountants to investigate the effectiveness of the initial audit.

Mr. Redwood: I am pleased to note the prompt action taken by BAT Industries plc in voluntarily issuing a supplementary note under new section 245(1) of the Companies Act 1985, to correct an error in a note to the 1990 accounts which I understand are due to be laid before its shareholders in general meeting on 29 May. The accounts in question have not yet been delivered to the Registrar of Companies.

Disciplinary Cases

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish an up-to-date list of the disciplinary cases which, following the publication of inspectors' reports, he has asked the Institute of Chartered Accountants to investigate.

Mr. Redwood: The following seven inspectors' reports have been passed to the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales. Of these reports, five were disclosed to the institute under the provisions of section 449(1) (1) of the Companies Act 1985 prior to their publication. I understand that the first three reports have been passed to the joint disciplinary scheme. The remaining four are under consideration by the institute itself.

Accountancy Bodies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the president of any of the accountancy bodies applying for the recognised supervisory body status is directly elected by its membership.

Mr. Redwood: I understand that the presidents of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Scotland and the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland are directly elected by the membership.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether, as a condition of recognition as a recognised supervisory body, he will make it his policy to require the applicants annually to state the number of their council members who are not directly elected by the membership;

(2) whether he will make it his policy as a condition of recognition to require the accountancy bodies seeking the status of a qualifying body to ensure that its students will be required to learn at least one other European language;

(3) whether he will make it his policy as a condition of recognition as a recognised supervisory body to require the applicants to annually publish the number of complaints which they receive against their members.

Mr. Redwood: Under the Companies Act 1989, the Secretary of State has no power to refuse recognition on these grounds.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will place in the Library a copy of the investigative and disciplinary arrangements offered by the applicants for the recognised supervisory body status.

Mr. Redwood: A copy of each application, which includes details of the applicant's arrangements for the investigation and disciplining of its members, has already been placed in the Library (Official Report, 19 December 1990, col. 187).

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to propose legislation under which the standards of accountancy firms criticised in the inspectors' reports would be independently investigated.

Mr. Redwood: Part II of the Companies Act 1989 will introduce an effective system for monitoring and investigating professional standards.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the council of any of the applicants for the proposed recognised supervisory bodies is not entirely elected by its membership.

Mr. Redwood: I understand that the councils of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales, the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland, the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Scotland and the Association of Authorised Public Accountants may have co-opted members, although the power to appoint them has not been exercised in every case. Most of their councils are elected. The council of the Chartered Association of Certified Accountants is wholly elected by the membership.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any of the accountancy bodies applying for the recognised supervisory body status encourage their members to give proxy votes for council elections to its president.

Mr. Redwood: So far as I am aware, none.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the deadline by which any member of the public may object to the granting of recognised supervisory body status to any of the applicants.

Mr. Redwood: The Department will consider representations made at any time. However, I asked that comments on the applications reach the Department by 15 May (Official Report, 18 April, column 222).

Auditors (Disqualification)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether at any time since 1979 his Department has asked the Institute of Chartered Accountants to disqualify any individual from acting as an auditor.

Mr. Redwood: It is for the professional bodies to determine, in accordance with their disciplinary procedures, whether a member who is the subject of a complaint referred by my Department should lose his authorisation to audit company accounts. I would of course take appropriate action if there were reason to question the way the bodies exercised their responsibilities.

Audit Qualifications

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will investigate the trend in going concern audit qualifications.

Mr. Redwood: The auditor's considerations in respect of whether a company is a going concern may be an issue which the auditing practices board will wish to address.

Auditors (Disclaimers)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to investigate the disclaimers of opinion issued by auditors.

Mr. Redwood: My Department and the financial reporting review panel as appropriate are always willing to consider instances where it is alleged that a company's accounts do not comply with the statutory requirements.

Hallmarking

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he intends to defend the action brought by J. Kohle GMBH & Co. KG against him, the British Hallmarking Council, and the Goldsmiths Company, challenging the basis of United Kingdom hallmarking of precious metals.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry is considering the legal position. As my hon. Friend knows, the Government have made clear their view that the compulsory marking of precious metals is essential to protect the interests of the consumer and honest trader. The Government believe that this is best achieved through the United Kingdom hallmarking system.

Coppernob Ltd.

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will set up an inquiry under the Companies Act 1985 into the activities of Coppernob Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I shall be replying soon to the hon. Member's letter of 14 May about the company.

United Kingdom Production

Dr. Dafydd Elis Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if he will publish figures showing the percentage of total United Kingdom production of (a) coal, (b) steel and (c) tinplate which has been produced in Wales.

Mr. Sainsbury: The information for 1990 is as follows:

Percentage of total United Kingdom production produced in Wales

Commodity	Per cent.
Coal[1]	6·5
Crude steel[2]	31·2
Tinplate[2]	100·0

Salesmen (Representations)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the effectiveness of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 in protecting limited companies from rental misrepresentations by salesmen leasing or selling fax machines and photocopiers.

Mr. Redwood: Limited companies that lease equipment or buy equipment under a credit agreement are not covered by the Consumer Credit Act 1974.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will bring forward proposals to amend the Consumer Credit Act 1974 to ensure that leasing companies are made fully responsible for the representations made by salesmen acting on their behalf who are not employed by the leasing company.

Mr. Redwood: Consideration is being given to proposals that the rights of lessees should be extended in the circumstances provided.

Environmental Management

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many applications have been received to date for support under (a) the environmental management options scheme, (b) the environmental technology innovation scheme and (c) the Euro-environ programme; and if he will indicate the sectors of industry from which applications have been received to date.

Mr. Lilley: I am pleased to say that, as at 1 May 1991 my Department has received 229 applications under the environmental management options scheme: 59 involving United Kingdom companies under the Euro-environ scheme and 170 under the environmental technology innovation scheme which is a joint DTI/DOE scheme. Applications have been received from over 20 different product sectors with some covering more than one sector, such as soil remediation, waste and water treatment, chemicals and domestic waste.

Petroleum Coke

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answers to the hon. Member for Easington (Mr. Cummings) of 22 January, Official Report, column 118, what progress his Department has made in evaluating the hazards of petroleum coke used in domestic appliances and in discussing with the suppliers the instructions for use of this fuel in domestic appliances.

Mr. Lilley: My Department has found some evidence of problems when petroleum coke has been used in closed appliances or has not been blended before use. There is little evidence of problems experienced by consumers when the fuel is pre-blended and used only in open-grate fires. Such precautions form the basis of our recommendations to suppliers to provide instructions for consumers. The suppliers have undertaken to provide clear instructions on the safe use of this fuel.

Director General of Telecommunications (Report)

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has yet received a report by the Director General of Telecommunications for the year 1990, as required under section 55 of the Telecommunications Act 1984.

Mr. Lilley: Yes. The seventh report by the Director General of Telecommunications is being published today. It covers the period 1 January to 31 December 1990. Copies of the report have been laid before each House of Parliament.

Weapons of Mass Destruction

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he plans to strengthen export controls aimed at preventing the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Government are committed to intensifying efforts to prevent proliferation in view of the heightened international concern. In the light of this, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has decided to extend controls to the remaining 13 precursors of concern identified by the Australia Group, in common with other member countries, in order to ensure the effectiveness of multilateral export controls. It has also been decided to extend the general end-use control which was introduced in December last year in the light of concerns relating to chemical and biological weapons, to cover materials and equipment of concern for nuclear weapons and missile purposes.

Exporters (Advice Services)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any proposals for the improvement of information and advice services to United Kingdom exporters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 22 May 1991]: The Department of Trade and Industry and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office overseas trade services provide a wide range of information and advice to United Kingdom exporters. We have made substantial improvements in our services over the past two years and our regular quality monitoring system reports high levels of satisfaction among our business customers.

We keep our services constantly under review. The joint directorate, formed on 2 April this year by merging the export service management units of the DTI and the FCO, has as its priority task to ensure that our export services operate well throughout the world. The fact that some 90 per cent. of our customers say that they will use our services again demonstrates their value and quality.

Mr. Mohinder Singh Bedi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what applications have been (i) granted and (ii) refused since 1984 for financial assistance available to small businesses from (a) Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi, (b) West Middlesex Immigration Services Ltd., (c) Swordshine Ltd. and (d) Hammersmith Securities Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 22 May 1991]: This Department does not reveal details of applications for support. These are confidential between the company and the Department. There is no trace of any financial assistance to these companies.

Employment Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary off State for Employment if he will list, for each region and for Great Britain as a whole for the latest available period, the number and proportion of ET trainees who three weeks after leaving were (a) in a full-time job with their work experience provider, (b) in a full-time job with another employer, (c) in a part-time job, (d) in full-time education or on a training course, (e) employed in their own business, (f) in job clubs, (g) in voluntary work, (h) unemployed and claiming benefit and (i) unemployed and not claiming benefit.

Mr. Jackson: The destinations of trainees leaving employment training between December 1989 and November 1990, three months after leaving, are shown in the following table. Percentages only are provided, because not all trainees respond to the follow-up survey.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list, for each region and for Great Britain as a whole, the number and proportion of employment training leavers who obtained a vocational qualification.

Mr. Jackson: The following table gives the percentage of trainees leaving employment training between October 1989 and September 1990, the latest date for which information is available, who obtained a qualification or credit or who were awaiting results. Mr. Jackson: In the 1990-91 financial year, my Department operated a special ex-gratia compensation scheme for ET providers. Where a contract with a training provider was foreclosed or modified substantially, reducing contracted volumes or recruitment earlier than the last effective day of the contract, my Department undertook to make an ex-gratia payment. There was no similar arrangement for youth training.

The table shows the provisional outturn expenditure to end March 1991 under the special employment training ex-gratia payments arrangements.

Employment Service

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress the Employment Service has made in meeting its targets outlined in the 1990-91 agency agreement; and if he will show for the latest possible date (a) total unemployed job placings and variance from target, (b) long-term unemployed job placings and variance from target, (c) people with disabilities job placings and variance from target, (d) inner-city job placings and variance from target, (e) number of claims not pursued following initial contact and variance from profiled annual reference level, (f) number of claimants moved from unemployment benefit to another benefit and variance from annual reference level and (g) number of people who withdrew their claim to benefit after contact with fraud investigators and variance from annual reference level.

Mr. Jackson: I am informed by the chief executive of the Employment Service that for the period April 1990 to March 1991, the agency's performance against target was as follows:

	Performance Achieved 1990-91	Variance from target/ reference level
		Per cent.
Total value of correct payments of unemployment benefit (target of 95 per cent.)	95·7 per cent.	[1]+0·7
Percentage of new claims input to computer within six days of a claim being made (target 91 per cent.)	86·8 per cent.	−4·2
Claims not pursued following initial contact	448,000	+12
Claimants moved to an appropriate benefit other than unemployment benefit	78,400	−2
Number of people who withdrew their claim after having contact with fraud investigators	64,700	−14
Unemployed job placings	1,396,900	−15
Long-term unemployed job placings	208,100	−24
People with disabilities job placings	34,200	−20
Inner city job placings	471,000	−9

[1] The Employment Service 1990-91 Annual Performance Agreement represents this target as the total value of incorrect payments. The figure used here is an inversion of this.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the establishment of the Employment Service executive agency; what is the annual salary for each employee; and what savings his Department will make in connection with this agency.

Mr. Jackson: The employees of the Employment Service are civil servants and as such receive salaries appropriate to their particular grade. The table shows the numbers employed in each grade and the minimum and maximum points of each salary scale.

A total of £13·6 million, or 2·3 per cent., of running costs savings were achieved in the first year of operation as an agency—1990-91.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many of the total staff of the Employment Service executive agency are on secondment from Government Departments and, in particular, from his Department.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Mr. Jackson: As with all questions on Employment Service operational matters, I have referred this question to Mike Fodgen, the executive agency's chief executive, for reply. A copy of that response will be placed in the Library.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total number of permits issued exempting employers from the quota obligations under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944 for each of the past five years.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will take steps to require that each training and enterprise council includes representatives of small businesses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 22 May 1991]: The TEC prospectus stated that the private sector directors on training and enterprise councils should broadly reflect the mix of commerce and industry in their area and should include executives with first-hand experience of running small businesses as well as major employers. More generally, TECs are required to take account of the needs of small firms in their plans to bring about a dynamic and prosperous local economy.

Disabled People (Special Schemes)

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications have been made, and how many grants have been awarded, for each of the past five years for (a) the personal reader service scheme, (b) the special aids to employment scheme, (c) the assistance with fares to work scheme and (d) the adaptations to premises and equipment scheme.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Employment Statistics (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the percentage of total employment by industry and what was the percentage change in employment by industry, by year for the period 1979 to 1990 and 1991 to date, for the Doncaster area classified by: men, women, young persons and ethnic minorities.

Mr. Jackson: Information for employees in employment according to industry by district and by travel-to-work area is available only from the censuses of employment for 1981, 1984, 1987 and 1989. This can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the House of Commons Library. Separate data for young persons and ethnic minorities are not available.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimate he has of the number of people employed in (a) coal mining and (b) manufacturing in the Doncaster travel-to-work area; what percentage these are of the total employed; and what the comparable figures were in 1979.

Mr. Jackson: Information for employees in employment by travel-to-work area is available only from the periodic censuses of employment. The earliest and most recent estimates are from censuses taken in 1981 and 1989 and are given in the table.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the levels of redundancies, by industry, in the Doncaster area by year for the period 1979 to 1990 and 1991 to date, classified by men, women, young persons and ethnic minorities.

Mr. Forth: Information on the number of redundancies confirmed as having occurred is given in the tables. Data are available for Doncaster only for the period 1983 to date. Data given for 1979-82 are for the Yorkshire and Humberside region. Information is not available to identify separately men, women, young persons and ethnic minorities. I refer the hon. Gentleman to an article on official statistics on redundancies that appeared in the September 1990 edition of Employment Gazette.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has, by year, on the number of individuals covered by the redundant mineworkers payments scheme who have left the Doncaster travel-to-work area unemployment register since the commencement of the scheme.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number and percentages of (a) male unemployed and (b) female unemployed in the Doncaster area as at 1 April in each year from 1979 to 1991.

Mr. Jackson: The available information, for the Doncaster travel-to-work area, can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of persons employed by sex in each standard category of employment in the Doncaster area for 1 April in each year from 1979 to 1991.

Mr. Jackson: Information for employees in employment according to industry by district and by travel-to-work area is available only from the censuses of employment held in September of 1981, 1984, 1987 and 1989. This can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the House of Commons Library.

Wages Councils

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many workers in the northern region and in each county within the region are covered by the various wages councils; how many have had their individual pay or conditions checked by the councils; and in how many cases underpayments were discovered.

Mr. Forth: There are no statistics of the total numbers of workers covered by wages councils in the northern region or in counties. The following table gives information about workers in each wages council industry in the northern division of the wages inspectorate whose pay was checked in 1990 and the numbers found to have been underpaid.

Ionising Radiation

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the common dose limits and radiation protection standards applied to those who work with ionising radiation in (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) each of the other European Community countries.

Mr. Forth: Common dose limits and radiation protection standards for work with ionising radiation apply throughout the European Community and are set out in European Community directive 80/836/Euratom (as amended by 84/467/Euratom). The United Kingdom legislation that implements the European Community directive is the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985 and the mirror Northern Ireland provisions, copies of which are held in the Library.

A comprehensive picture of how member states have met their obligations under the directive is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Employment-related Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list for each employment-related agency (a) those that have published their business plans for 1991-92 and (b) those that have not yet published them.

Mr. Jackson: The only executive agency within my Department is the Employment Service; its operational plan for 1991-92 was placed in the Library of the House on 9 May.

Careers Service

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of responses about the future of the careers service has supported its retention under local education authority control.

Mr. Jackson: I will write to the hon. Member.

Labour Statistics

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a list showing the latest available figures for the rate of unemployment in each OECD member country.

Mr. Jackson: Following is a table which gives the latest available internationally comparable unemployment rates for the OECD countries.

Comparisons of unemployment between OECD countries

[1] There are no reliable figures available as yet for a unified Germany. The rate quoted is for what was formerly West Germany.

[2] Only the countries listed are included in the total.

[3] United Kingdom, France, Germany, Italy, USA, Japan and Canada.

Piper Alpha

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on the number of victims of the Piper Alpha disaster who are still awaiting settlement of compensation claims against their employers.

Mr. Forth: Compensation payments are a matter between Occidental and the survivors or the families of victims.

Paint

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to promote water-based paint products in the construction industry as a replacement for solvent-based products.

Mr. Forth: The Health and Safety Executive has produced industry-specific guidance including two leaflets, "Health Hazards to Painters" and "Solvents and You", setting out the risks attached to work with solvents and outlining the control and preventive measures to be taken. Exposure to solvents can be minimised by the use of low-solvent or solvent-free materials. However, such products may contain other toxic substances and employers must therefore assess the relative health risk of alternative products available.

Service Industries (North-East)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the variations in the rate of increase of the number of jobs created in the service industries in the regions of the north-east in the past two years.

Mr. Jackson: The latest estimates of employment for area within standard regions relate to the 1989 census of employment. More recent estimates of changes in the number of employees in service industries in the north standard region—Cumbria, Cleveland, Tyne and Wear, Durham and Northumberland—are as follows:

Employees in the service industries in the North Region

	Actual change (thousands)	Percentage change

March	6·0	0·9
June	−3·2	−0·5
September	8·2	1·2

Careers Services

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received about his proposals to encourage local authorities and training and enterprise councils to work in partnership to oversee the operation of careers services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Prior to the White Paper on "Education and Training for the 21st Century" (Cm 1536), I received a very wide response to my consultative document on the future of the careers service. Many of those responding supported LEAs and TECs working closely together. As announced in the White Paper we shall support LEAs and TECs which wish to work together, and we propose to legislate to open up options for the management of the careers service.

Licensed Mines

Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many prosecutions against licensed mines proprietors were brought by Her Majesty's mines inspectorate in 1990-91.

Mr. Forth: As a result of informations laid by the Health and Safety Executive's mines inspectorate, there was one prosecution of a licensed mine proprietor in 1990-91.

Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many licensed mines were inspected in 1990-91 by Her Majesty's mines inspectorate; and if he will publish a list of each mine inspected.

Mr. Forth: In the 12-month period 1 April 1990 to 31 March 1991 a total of 150 licensed mines were inspected.

Following is a list of the mines inspected:

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 191

SESSION 1990–91

13th May—23rd May 1991

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
